THE STORY SO FAR:

poly King and Lew Gordon had built a vast string of ranches in the West. King was killed by his powerful and unscrupulous competitor, Ben Thorpe. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, was determined to avenge his death in spite of opposition.

Jody Gordon's eyes had darkened the moment he saw the man, and he knew the man, taking her face second by second. "What do you want me to do?"

Shoshone Wilce shrugged. "That isn't hardly up to me, Miss Gordon. I'll tell you this; many of the things I've seen your father go stomping down the board walk right here in Ogallala, alone, and not even armed. That won't do, Miss Gordon."

"If I was in your place, I wouldn't never let him out of the cage without his gunbelt is strapped on, and the iron fire in his leather. And wherever he goes, there ought to be three or four good hard-shoot cowboys with him; because, if I know Ben Thorpe, he isn't going into any gunfight alone!"

Jody peered at him intently. "What made you bring this word to me?"

"I'm a Bill Roper man," Shoshone Wilce said. "God knows, Miss Gordon, stringing with Bill Roper has never done anything for me. But I think I just thought Bill Roper would want you to know. I kind of got the idea he thinks a heap of you, Miss Gordon."

And now another pony came slashing up to the corral. One of the loaded foremen had come in.

"I got to be getting along," Shoshone Wilce said quickly.

She turned away, but instantly turned back again, and gripped Shoshone's arm just as he was sliding out of sight.

"Stay around," she ordered him. "Say here until—"

"Miss Gordon," came the quick answer. "I've got to get on to Miles City."

"I thought so. Bill Roper's somewhere up there, isn't he? Yes. Well, I'm going to join my father there. I'll ride with you in the morning."

"Four hundred miles! And no cash until—"

"Don't worry about that. It takes skilled ponies to make time."

"I'm afraid your Paw might mind—"

"I don't know how Bill Roper ever did it," Jody said with contempt. Shoshone winced. "I—I'll be faded into the shadows as Jody talked out of the stable, her eyes dark and bright in the dusk."

CHAPTER XIII

Bill Roper sat alone at a rear table in the Palace Bar, in Miles City—the young, turbulent center of a vast, raw range, the possibilities of which were still unknown.

For three months Roper had ridden through the bitter Montana winter. It had been no trouble for him to sweep together a dozen malcontent cowboys who hated Lasham or Thorpe, or both. Already they knew Bill Roper's name.

Against their common enemy these youngsters could be led, wild, reckless and crazy for raid; and when he led them as Texas had taught him.

His new northern wild bunch faced conditions in many ways bitterly adverse. Here in the north were no hated cattlemen, no established domination which he could look to help. The Canadian border was far away, and no market awaited the hard-pushed herds on the other side.

What Montana had that Texas did not was a concentration of Indian tribes, principally Sioux and Cheyenne, deprived of their hunting grounds, and dependent for food on beef which the government was obliged to supply. It was to this circumstance that Roper had turned.

The giant beef contracts which the government threw upon the market had inevitably attracted more than the kind of graft. The result was famine—pitiful, relentless. Starvation stalked through the lodges of the Sioux, the Cheyenne, the Crow and with it, Roper's opportunity.

Scouring the country, Roper found his Indian up-faces who were already badly scared. They had overplayed their hands, and were now faced with a loss of life and property.

By delivering beef to the reservations, Roper's wild bunch could make more than make expenses. The advantage was this—a beef herd delivered to an Indian tribe disappeared over night, leaving little trace. A thousand hands skinned the hide, destroying the portions that the hides containing the brands. Constantly changing horses, perpetually in the saddle, Roper's saddle hawks swung across Montana.

His first struck at Muddy Bend, killing up four hundred head of horses in the breaks of the Yellowstone. Three days' hard driving delivered these to a village of Assinibou. Only four days later they

by his sweetheart, Jody Gordon, and her father. Roper's successful raids against Thorpe's Texas holdings wiped him out of the state. When Roper visited Jody one night, she almost contemptuously called him a cattle thief and gunman. His determination unchanged, he now turned his attention toward Thorpe's ranches in Montana. Jody was secretly visited one night by Shoshone Wilce, one of Roper's men, who warned that her father's life was in grave danger.

Roper shrugged again. "Walk wasn't no fight with me."

"You're going to force the fight yourself! That's what you've been waiting here for, ever since you came to Miles City. Any moment Lasham may walk in that door—"

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

Little boy 'Rip,' go toot your horn, Nor Fords are coming to town. Some will be green, some will be blue and some will be yellow and brown.

THINGS—Caught Minnie and Charles Wade's youngest daughter at some Sunday night and stopped to pay her respects... she's quite the young lady now... four days old... Leo Thompson was delivering clothes to a lady's house (the wife) the other night and caught her sitting in the living room barefooted... she was embarrassed... Guess you saw the picture of Alex Hayes in the Atlanta Papers Sunday... didn't know Alex could do that stuff before a camera... The other day who dropped the posters over Clanton Saturday afternoon sure knew his stuff... they dropped exactly in the heart of town...

Don't tell me you haven't done the same thing... came out of the Post-Office Monday night and came in an hour of getting in a Ford outside belonging to Mr. Frank Callen... Mrs. Callen was in it... when to be nonchalant... Bonnie and Pearl Hand were in town the week-end... Bonnie is getting fat as a pig... saw Virginia Ware at the Bus station late Sunday afternoon bidding the 'boy' goodbye... the 'boy' being Maurice Johnson.

You know we haven't exactly felt the effects of this rearmament program yet but just to give you an idea of what you are going to use here is a list:

- Paper or plastic refrigerator trays.
- Glass jars instead of tin cans.
- Spun-glass fabrics.
- Fiber or wooden hairpins.
- Fiber container for coffee.
- Cigarette papers made of straw.
- Synthetic rubber tires.
- Plastic gears in automobiles.
- "Wool" made of milk.
- Perfumes made from coal.
- Shoes with plastic soles.
- Rayon stockings.
- Enameled utensils; not aluminum.

Pee Wee Martin has to investigate families and conditions in the county in cases where furloughs or army or navy leaves are requested... One case that he was telling us about last week concerned a boy who had decided he had enough of the army and wanted to come home... When he joined he had made the statement that he had no dependents... on his request to be discharged he listed a wife and child... 'Pee Wee' asked him about that... he stated that at the time he was not taking care of his wife and child but that he would rather support them than to stay in the army.

Shorty Wilson, who used to work with us here at the News is getting married this week... Shorty is working in Birmingham now and that is where they will make their home... Miss Helen Maddox is the unlucky bride, she also attended C. H. S. and is well known hereabout... Shorty and Helen will be very happy together and we wish them much happiness and success.

Looks like the Jury List this week would serve as a Who's Who in Clanton... Reedy Taylor, Lester Jones, Johnnie Moon Adolphus Moatts, Luther Culpepper, just to mention a few serving this week on the Jury.

Montgomery Area with the local County Council, Boy Scouts of America met at the Thomason Hotel Monday night and enjoyed a luncheon... Dutch treat... bad on newspaper folks... they can't hardly ever raise the price of their plate...

Oscar died this week... all of Clanton who knew Oscar each day would drive him... scores each day would drive him... to see him and wonder at him... but no more... Oscar is gone... gone to ever where little sea animals go to... Oscar was Willie Mims little 'whatch-a-ma-jig' that he found

Former Mayor Jones and Professor U. H. Abrams Express Views On Discontinuing Water Discount

Former Mayor To Vote No Increase

Clanton, Ala., Sept. 8, 1941 Editor Chilton County News:

Recently I was asked to sign a petition addressed to the city officials requesting them to discontinue allowing the ten per cent discount from the water bills when paid by the tenth of the month and use the proceeds to pay the teachers of the elementary school for another month.

I signed the paper, but stated at the time, and later told a member of the council I was willing to contribute to the schools the amount of money involved, but that I was opposed to any increase in the present water rate to get money. We are asked to vote on this matter September 16th and I shall vote no increase in the cost of water. By comparison with other cities our present price of water is a little high now, and to further raise the price would discourage the use of water by

U. H. Abrams Says To Vote Yes

To the people of Clanton:

At the beginning of each school term for many years the three Elementary schools of Clanton have been faced with a seven months school term. Each year the city come forward with a solution by a donation of about $1500. The city was not obligated to do this but felt impelled by a feeling of pride and of a great need. It has always been a strain upon the city's finances. For this aid the patrons are truly thankful.

The schools were notified at the time of the last request that the water was under a strain and would no longer be able to make another donation. These statements we do not wish to challenge.

Forty-four business people in Clanton signed a petition asking the city government to call an election to allow the people an opportunity to say

PENSION SYSTEM REVISION URGED BY HILL, GRAVES

Washington.—Senator Hill (D.) Alabama, the majority whip, said today he would urge action at this session of Congress on legislation to equalize federal payments for old age assistance.

The senator said he and former Governor Bibb Graves of Alabama were seeking congressional support for a proposal to eliminate an existing requirements that states match the federal contributions to needy aged persons.

The federal government now offers a maximum of $20 a month to the aged, provided the state of the client's residence contributes a similar amount.

Hill and Graves, complaining that this was unfair to low-income states, notably Southern states, suggested an amendment to the social security act to eliminate the matching requirement and make $20 the amount of the federal payment in all states. The state could add to that if it chose to do so.

Both said they believed this would be a "good starting point" in establishing an adequate pension system.

Graves, here on other business, said he was calling on "some friends in the Senate and House" to urge immediate action on the pension system revision.

MONTGOMERY AREA COUNCIL BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA MEET IN CLANTON

The Montgomery Area Council and Budget Committee, Boy Scouts of America, met in Clanton Monday night and mapped plans for the 1941-42 season.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss and recommend a Finance Program for the entire Area.

Montgomery and Selma each have full-time Scout Executives while the Eastern Area is composed of six districts, served by a common field executive, Mr. Wm. H. (Bill) Edwards.

The Eastern Area is composed of six districts, Opelika, Tallahassee, Wetumpka, Auburn, Alexander City and Clanton.

All of these districts were represented at the meeting Monday night, with the exception of Wetumpka and Auburn.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. Walter Kenney, president of the Montgomery Area Council.

The Farmers Gin and Warehouse Company, formerly operated by Burns Goodgame, is under new management this year.

Curtis Billingsley and E. E. Edwards are the new operators, doing business at the same stand and assuring the farmer of complete satisfaction in all dealings.

This Week In National Defense

The President established in the OPM a Division of Contract Distribution with Floyd Odum of New York as Director to "face the responsibility of alleviating the hardships which have resulted from the defense program and... to marshal our productive capacities to the objective that no plant or tool which can be used for defense shall be allowed to remain idle." The order was issued, the President said, "in furtherance of a determined move... to help the smaller business units of the country obtain a fair share of the defense orders and to prevent, as far as possible, dislocation of industry and unemployment of workers in plants where production has been curtailed by priorities and material shortages."

The Division will set up branch offices throughout the nation where there will be available: procurement representatives of Federal contracting agencies to negotiate contracts and subcontracts, technical engineering aid on conversion of plants to defense work, representatives of the OPM Labor Division to plan reemployment or training of workers in plants involved, and financial facilities of the RFC and other Federal agencies which may be necessary to finance plant conversion.

To spread Defense work "among as great a number of firms and in as many localities as possible," the Division will revise Federal procure-

City To Vote On Granting Water Discount to School

10 Per Cent Discount Would Be Discontinued and Money Given to Grammar School

Clanton's election to determine whether or not City Schools will have an extra month this year will be held Tuesday Sept. 16th.

Two letters to the Editor will be found elsewhere on this page, one writing for the adoption and one against.

The proposition in short is that 10 per cent be added to your water bill each month and this 10 per cent be turned into a special fund to go to the City Schools to pay for the extra months schooling. However, it must be explained that this 10 per cent as your discount in case you owe a discount for the current month.

The City Clerk collects approximately $1,500.00 each month for water service. This would mean that $150.00 each month would be turned into this school fund or approximately $1,800 for the full year. This, of course, would be ample to take care of the cost of operating the school one month.

Go out and vote Tuesday. It doesn't matter how you vote, but vote. It is your duty as a citizen of Clanton.

Also to be voted on Tuesday will be the question of whether or not the people of Clanton want dogs to run at large. You will get a chance once and for all to vote on this important ordinance and whether you want it enforced.

CONSULT LOCAL BOARD BEFORE GOING TO SCHOOL IF YOU ARE REGISTRAR

If you are a registrant, consult your local board before making preparations to enter school this year warns the Public Relations Office at Montgomery. The Local Board may be able to tell you approximately when you will be called into service.

Unless a student can qualify as a "necessary man" under Selective Service Regulations he is liable to be called for induction when his order number is reached.

D. P. Culp has gone to Forest Home where he will open school there Monday.

ment practice in favor of the smaller production units—"as yet largely unused"—and promote organization of pools of small manufacturers to undertake defense work jointly. The Division will also establish exhibits showing parts of defense articles needed, their number, the tools necessary to make them and all other information so that machine shop owners and manufacturers can determine "then and there" what they can do and arrange to do it.

PRODUCTION

OPM announced military aircraft manufacturers delivered 1,854 planes during August, a record and 394 planes more than in July. OPM reported 2,420 defense plants have been built or expanded since the beginning of the defense program.

The President told his press conference armament production will be accelerated by greater expenditures. The new Priorities and Allocation Board, stating it will stimulate and reorganize defense production "to the limit of the nation's resources," said its general policy demands curtailment of less-essential industries which use materials and facilities necessary to a "realistic defense program."

No Worry Down In Covington

Bibb Graves, it is said, will have opposition from a candidate chosen from the ranks of the Old Age Living Plan Association, Inc., of Gadsden, Ala.

If that be the case he shouldn't have so much opposition in this immediate section as records at the draft board indicate the old folks in this section are being pretty well taken care of by the younger boys of draft age.

If we were not a member of the draft board we would have no idea how many young folks are supporting their parents, grandparents, uncles, in-laws and others—Covington News.

When the Petaian government of France linked up with Nazi Germany and determined to cast her lot with Nazism there was great distress throughout the empire. Shortly after this decision Germany ordered France to ship to her a train load of supplies. This train was loaded with things that France needed, and when the train started moving by the depot, in protest twelve or fifteen Frenchmen threw themselves before this train. They were ground beneath the wheels, and the supplies went on to Germany. At first I thought this to be needless sacrifice, but after thought I decided that it was a necessary sacrifice. They saved themselves for what they thought to be just and right. They said that it was not right for Germany to take the food from their own lips and feed it to fighting soldiers whose sole aim in life was to kill and subdue. The song in the morning throughout the last in the evening.

HARP AND HARMONY CONVENTION HELD
And a thousand thanks to the very good people of Center Hill church for the friendship and brotherly love they bestowed on the Convention through the entire day.

Visitors from Talladega, Shelby, Jefferson, Tuscaloosa, Hale, Bibb, Dallas and Perry counties were with us for the day.
Mr. J. C. Deason of Centerville, Ala., who is chairman of the State Harmony Singing Convention and Mr. J. D. Gaines of Birmingham, is past president of the State Harp Association was also present. These characters, with the support of a host of other singers who are equally as good, made every moment of the day an inspiration.
Memorial services for the late Rev.

J. N. Scott who was a life long member of this Convention and for other deceased friends of other parts of the state were held.
As the voices of the class would blend together in singing such songs as "Amazing Grace" "Lone Pilgrim" one could view the audience and see the faces of many people who were tearfully overjoyed.
As different ones of our aged people would quote their ages of 70, 75, 80 and more years of age, and proclaim a life-long fondness for such songs as were sung throughout the day the Secretary of the Convention was naturally made to wonder how much better were the days of their youth than that of our present day, he was also made to wonder how happy the young people must have been who provided that their parents and grand-parents might attend the Convention.

The entire membership of the Convention wishes this as one expression of gratitude to Center Hill Church, each and every visitor and our Country papers for their loyal support in making this convention an undisputed success.
The Convention will be in session Sunday Sept. 14th, at Pates Chapel, all day, so come and enjoy yourself.

91 YEARS OF PROGRESS
A Historical Tour of the Louisville & Nashville R.R.
The Gay Nineties
The Old Reliable contributed to the gaiety of the 'nineties in a number of ways. Handsome new union stations at Louisville and Nashville had their inceptions during that decade. The one at Louisville was dedicated on September 7, 1891, and the one at Nashville on September 3, 1900.
Railroading was in its hey-day. The average railroad station was the most popular place in town at train-time. Typical of the fervor which gripped the railroad during that era was the run of "The Dixie Hummer" from Chicago to Nashville on April 28, 1898. Carrying 200,000 copies of a special Tennessee Centennial (then in full sway at Nashville) edition of the old Chicago Times-Herald, this train made the 444-mile run in 524 minutes; a record for the day. It used the lines of the L. & N. between Evansville and Nashville.
The L. & N. in the early 'nineties, in keeping with the trend of the times, began to apply automatic couplers and air brakes in ever-increasing numbers to its rolling stock, expediting the moving of freight and passengers and making travel safer for employees and patrons alike.
Of great significance was the first successful manufacture of steel in Alabama on July 24, 1897. This set in motion a chain of events which eventually led to the completion of a huge steel mill at Ensley, Ala., on November 30, 1899. This was built by the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company and the L. & N. lent encouragement to the project by purchasing $250,000 worth of bonds.
Railroading now is no less exciting than it was in the 'nineties. The unusual of that era has become the commonplace of today, however, and regularly-scheduled passenger trains of the Old Reliable daily equal or better the long-planned run of "The Dixie Hummer." Freight trains, too, approach mile-a-minute operation. Each offers greater efficiency and convenience with safety, and at lower cost.

IN MEMORY OF J. D.

Our baby is gone to heaven. From this world of sin and sorrow. We will be with him and Jesus on that happy glad tomorrow. He has gone to be with Jesus, to be loved and blessed, they laid his little body in the lonesome grave to rest. We miss him, yes we miss him. No human tongue can tell, but he is now in a place where all is well. We watch the flowers wave up on the lonesome hill, a place is vacant in our home that never can be filled, he is wearing a crown of life upon his precious head. We are going to be with him where there will be no tears shed. His life here on this earth, was just a little while, but every one he met be greeted them with a smile. Our darling is gone on over and he is calling us to come, when our work in this sinful world is done. As we stay here in this world toiling on our way, we know we will meet our baby in a better world some day.

Written by his sister—Mrs. Luther Smith.

CARD OF THANKS

"We wish to thank everyone that helped us during the sickness and death of our darling daughter and sister Beulah. We want to thank all for words of comfort and for the beautiful flowers and we sure thank Mr. Martin and those who helped us so much. The family of A. M. Mims.

whether or not they were willing to pay for an extra month of school by an increase in the water bill. There has never been a city school tax and has always given the money through courtesy and generosity. There may be some who will say the city can continue the practice but the officials of the town are best able to say.

The city responded to the petition by calling an election for next Tuesday to give you an opportunity to vote an extra month of school. If you vote "yes" we have an 8 month school. If you vote "no" we will have 7 months of school. If you vote "yes" it will cost you 2 or 3 dollars. If you vote "no" you will be robbing your child of learning which it needs and doing your city a grave injustice. Very few things we get for nothing.

If your water bill is $2.00 per month and you pay it before the 10th of each month you pay only $1.80. If you vote to discontinue this discount, you'll have to pay the full $2.00—the 20c goes to the schools. This amounts to $2.40 the new law will cost you per year.

The calling of this election is an honest attempt to find a solution to this perennial problem which is becoming embarrassing to some and nauseating to all. So let's settle it Tuesday and have it over with.

We have discussed other means of raising this money and all others seem impossible. This increase in your water bill will fall upon all, is not too heavy and will burden none.

A boom is on; jobs are plentiful; wages are rising; money is flowing freely, farm products are up—vote this little tax and you'll never regret it because this is money you know will come flowing back to you.

The state and county school funds are distributed per capita child with favors to no county nor district. This is fair and democratic. But the county and state funds are enough only for 7 months. This is the reason Clanton schools have only 7 months.

We are proud of our city, but we'd have to look down when we told citizens about our 7 months school term. Please think twice before you vote and you'll have a longer school term.

—U. H. ABRAMS.

CCC ENROLLMENT

"September, 14th, 15th and 16th will be enrollment period for CCC camps in this area. The local camp, Company 3481, will participate in this enrollment and a large number of Chilton County boys have signified their intention of joining at that time.

Beside the many well known advantages of CCC membership the local camp is conducting a program of Defense training classes. During the last period classes in Automobile Mechanics, Woodworking, Electricity and Metal Work were conducted and over 100 boys received certificates. These classes will be continued and there is a possibility that others will be added after September 15th. These classes are taught by local men who are skilled in their trade and are designed to help provide trained men for the rapidly expanding Defense industries.

Young men between the ages of 17 and 23 who are interested should apply to the local Welfare Department or at the Headquarters Building in the local CCC camp."

those already connected with our system and those who are now using well water will continue to do so. Also I think in both principle and government it is unfair to tax the water users of Clanton to support a district school, or even a strictly city school.

If an extra month of school is needed or desired, the people and district served should pay the cost and not the water users of Clanton. Fixing the water rate is purely a business and administrative matter and should be left to the judgment of the city officials, and not the voters, some of whom do not use city water.

I was elected mayor twice, served six years, and each year my council found a way to give the Elementary School an extra month. This too may have been unfair to the tax payers of Clanton for the reason our school is not a city school, but covers a district reaching out into the country, and it would only be just that the cost be born by the entire district. But the money used was taken from the general fund, and every person who paid any amount into the city treasury for any reason, even those who paid a fine for law violation, contributed to the cost of this extra month.

During my last year as mayor I discussed with the council the matter of reducing the water rate soon as we could complete our plan of extending the water and sewerage lines to the negro section and other sections of the city not then served with these pipe lines. This outlay of work we knew could not be finished during our present term of office, but being proud of our administration, and knowing full well every thing was going fine for Clanton, we did not hesitate to plan for the future beyond the next city election.

We hoped by extending the water line to every section of the city and reducing the rate, the people would use more water, and those not now connected with the system, would take the city water at the low cost, and the loss in revenue by reducing the price, would be made up in volume of sales and new homes connected.

For the foregoing reasons I say it is not best for Clanton, and is entirely unjust to the water users to increase the cost of water for the sole benefit of our district school, or for any other cause than to maintain and improve the water system which we all should be very proud of. City water should be in every home in Clanton.

Respectfully,
—C. FENN JONES

MERCHANT SHIPS

Maritime Commission Chairman Land announces the Commission's building program will place in operation 1,153 new ships of approximately 124,000 deadweight tons between July 1, 1941 and the end of 1943. He said production is running 25 per cent ahead of estimates made in May, and that from 130 to 134 new vessels will be completed this year instead of the 105 estimated in May. Admiral Land said an additional 90 vessels will be delivered in the first three months of 1942, 146 in the second quarter, 154 in the third quarter, and 184 in the fourth quarter. By the beginning of 1943, the program will yield in three months more than the 1,380,000 deadweight tons of ships constructed in the entire year of 1918.

ARMY

The Second and Third Armies and 1,000 planes of the Second and Third task forces, including Navy and Marine air units, began moving into the Louisiana maneuver area for combat practice September 15 to 30. The War Department said it expects to work out under actual conditions of a major battle the role of combat aviation in support of mechanized and armored ground forces.

The Department of Agriculture reported prices are now 131 per cent of the 1909-14 parity average, highest level in 11 years. OGD Director LaGuardia, acting as President of the U. S. County Agent Says To Prepare Now For A Good Strawberry Yield Next Year

It is now time to make preparations for producing a good crop of high quality strawberries for next year. In a large degree the production and quality of strawberries will be determined within the next six weeks in Chilton County.

In passing over the County it is noted that weeds and grass are taking over the strawberries in many instances. Because of this, the plants have not developed normally. For best results this grass and weeds must be pulled out of the rows.

A fall application of fertilizer is necessary to produce a volume of high quality strawberries. The life of strawberry plants is divided into phases. For the next several weeks, the crown of fruit buds will be developing. This development begins around September 15 in Chilton County. The number of fruit buds developed will determine the number of berries produced next year. For this reason, an application of fertilizer in September is necessary to stimulate this fruit bud formation.

The kind and amount of fertilizer to use in September as a top dress for strawberries will depend upon the natural fertility of the soil. In general from 400 to 600 pounds of a 4-10-7 or a 6-8-4 fertilizer per acre will be sufficient. The important thing is to get the fertilizer down in September.

Proper Diet Essential For Child's Eyesight

A warning to parents to be certain their children are getting plenty of vitamins is being stressed as school term begins. When a child goes without the right food for too long the lens of the eye may cloud and blindness may result, warns Mildred Simon, extension nutritionist, Auburn.

A specialist tells this story. Some worried parents recently had their five year old child's eyes examined. The child had complained that his eyes itched and burned, and the parents had observed his eyes were sensitive to light. They thought he needed glasses. Instead of putting glasses on him the doctor gave the child a big dose of vitamins and put him on a diet which was exceptionally rich in vitamins.

"Vitamins keep eyes seeing well and feeling well," the doctor said. "We know of nothing else that will do this."

A quart of milk every day, an egg a day, a serving of whole grain cereal every day, plenty of fresh green and yellow vegetables every day, yellow fruit or tomatoes every day, and some liver, fish, and other meats several times each week.

Here are some other facts the doctor gave these parents:

Some children "pile" sugar on their food. Too much sugar dulls the appetite for necessary foods and as a result may blur the eyesight or injure the health. Too much sugar may do damage. Rats living on food containing too much of a certain kind of sugar always develop cataracts on their eyes. Cataracts are common among people with diabetes.

LESPEDEZA SEED DEMAND TO BE GREAT NEXT YEAR

Demands for both sericea and annual lespedeza seed of high quality will probably be great next spring, announces J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, Auburn.

Quality seed can be produced more economically by weed control, than by depending on expensive machinery to clean the harvested seed. Losses of from 30 to 50 per cent of the seed may be expected in attempting to make a quality product out of a trashy, weedy crop.

Seed should not be saved where lespedeza is badly infested with dodder as high quality seed do not contain dodder. Occasional spots of dodder may be pulled up by hand, mowed or burned with straw or a blow torch.

Small bushes, briars and other shrubby vegetation in old stands of Sericea should be grubbed out so that a mower or combine may be easily operated. "Be ready to mow or cut with a binder and thresh in case the combine is not available or the weather is unfavorable," he advises.

Save plenty of seed for your own use for an abundance of high quality home grown seed is the best insurance for having sufficient acreage to produce the hay seeds for your own farm, advises Lowery.

FSA Bring New Profits To Farmers

Source of new profit for the low-income farmer of the Southeast will be tapped by the Farm Security Administration in Region Five (Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida). This, it was explained today by Marvin Durbin FSA farm supervisor for Chilton County, is the woodlot.

Following a survey showing that less than three per cent of the average small farmer's income comes from forest products, Farm Security has obtained the services of a specialist of the U. S. Bureau of Forestry. This new associate, Paul H. Russell, working with the farm management section of the FSA regional staff, will plan programs adapted to small farms in every part of the region, with the aid of increasing the income from sale of gum, pulpwood, posts, ties and saw timbers to an average of at least ten per cent of the total farm income.

Here, said Supervisor Durbin, is a long neglected item in balanced farming which includes woodlots and small tracts of timber on many a farm on the FSA program, few of which have been turned into cash.

Not only will the small individual farmer be directed to this new source of income, with proper education in forest practices, but it is the aim of FSA also to encourage operation of larger tracts of wooded land by groups of families working cooperatively.

Through development of the forestry program, it is sought to find answer to the question of what to do with numerous areas in the piney woods areas and in the lower Piedmont section, where old methods of farming have played out and where not only families on the FSA program but farm operators generally are hard put to making a living.

NEW SALEM

Next Sunday, Sept. 14 is the day set for the calling of our pastor for next year. All church members are urged to pray earnestly about making this decision and to be present next Sunday.

A fine group attended Sunday School and church last Sunday and enjoyed the lesson and the inspiring messages delivered by our pastor, Bro. Carroll. The noon refreshments served by Sunday School were nice and the association of the members seemed to add a new spirit to our work. Our prayer is that our church life may grow.

There are many in our community who do not attend the church services. We give you a special invitation to be with us next Sunday at 10 o'clock for Sunday School, for we believe that we have something that you need. Won't you come. A large crowd was present for our afternoon singing last Sunday. Special numbers were given by the Baker trio, Alabama Four, and piano solos by Emogene Lowery and Eason Maddox. The directors were: Dock Harris, Thomas Childers, Mrs. Howard Maddox, Hilda Smith, Lewis Baker, Myrtice Baker, and William Hicks. Teaches Her Children To

COOK When Most

Children Are Learning Their ABC's

"I teach my children to cook when most children are learning their ABC's. I can do this because I have an electric range."

That's what one of Alabama's 30,000 electric range users told us. It should give you some idea of how easy it is to cook electrically. And how safe.

Some of the other advantages that result when you start cooking electrically are: Because an electric range is as clean as electric light your kitchen walls, woodwork and curtains stay clean longer; if your stove has automatic features, you can be miles away while the meal is cooking; you can get any cooking heat you need by merely turning a switch; the oven heat is controlled and confined, so your electric range doesn't make a bake-oven out of your whole kitchen on hot summer days; no flue is required; so you can place it at the most convenient spot in the kitchen, regardless of the location of the chimney.

Electrify Now—Electricity is Cheap in Alabama

puty King and Lew Gordon had built up a vast string of ranches in the West. King was killed by his powerful and unscrupulous competitor, Ben Thorpe. Thorpe, King's adopted son, was determined to avenge his death in spite of opposition.

But now the scar-mouthed man spoke suddenly; from his position at one side he had dared kick his legs to the door. "Walk, look out! Don't turn! Watch this buzzard, but we'll back and stand by me!"

Into the front of the bar two men had come; they came standing back the length of the room; their spurs jingling brokenly. Roper did not see the weapons of both of them appeared in their hands, smoothly and easily, from no place.

The two men were Lee Harnish and Tex Long.

Tex Long's 45 clicked in the palm of his hand as it came to full cock. He said, "Howdy, Bill. A spite brought us word. Dave Shannon and Hat Crick Tommy are on the street. And Dry Camp Pierce."

"Gosh," Lee Harnish said, "we've been hunting you for two months! You want us to blast these Indians, boss?"

Bill Roper drew a deep breath, and grinned. At first he could not even appreciate that he, at last, was the leaders he had been of his great raid. All that could, in fact, be that he had been reprieved from certain death; and he knew that life was good.

CHAPTER XIV

The tribute implied by the re-gathering of the wild bunch leaders was one of the most extraordinary things that had ever happened in Bill Roper's life. There was not much to their story. Driven out of Texas on the eve of Bill Roper's victory, for which they had gone their separate ways. But gradually they had drifted together again, in the Indian nation, at Dodge, in the northern country. With Cleve Tarnier broken in Texas, and the roots of them from Ben Thorpe's organization by the loss of his breeding grounds, the outlaw riders found themselves unwilling to leave their work unfinished. So at last they had come seeking for Roper—and had found him.

The first thing was to get them out there. He named as rendezvous a rocky shanty on Fork Creek. Roper himself was the last to ride of Miles City. Seasoned night riders though these men might be, the names now famous the length of the trail, most of them were youngsters still. No one of them could be trusted not to get a skunkful of liquor, and go gunning for Lasham men on his own hook.

Roper was relieved, therefore, when riding into the Fork Creek rendezvous in the dreary February twilight, to find his Texas men already waiting for him there. They were eating fresh beef, but not their own. Roper came into the little cabin, stamping the snow off his boots. Lee Harnish looked sheepish. "Say, I forgot something. I got a letter for you here."

Roper took the worn envelope and turned it over in his hands. The date showed it to be three weeks old—no great age, everything complete. But what took hold of him, what that for a full minute he dared not break the seal, was that the letter was from Jody Gordon.

Roper tipped open the envelope, and took out a whole sheet of paper more than half a page; but as he folded it and put it into a pocket, his hands were shaking in a way that would have cost him his life if he had been walking into a gunfight then. There was a long silence.

With a visible effort, Roper called himself together. Briefly he told them what his new wild bunch had done.

"But we haven't even scratched the surface," he finished. "Unless we hit Walk Lasham quick and hard, Thorpe will get his balance again, and reach his roots back into Texas; and all the work we did down there will go for nothing."

"Me," Tex Long said, "I aim to bring with you, and try to finish up what we begun. But, way I see it, the layout up there is terrible bad, our style of work."

"There isn't any profit in the way figured," Roper admitted. "I've been taking a passer up along the Canadian border, figuring it's a way drive. If you criminals are willing to come on and take one more crack at Thorpe and Lasham—"

"There's no one beyond the border that's needing any stock," Dry Camp Pierce said gloomily.

Dry Camp, Bill Roper said, "I'm thinking of the tribes."

"There was a moment's silence. Granting that Canada's full of war paint," Tex Long said; "how the hell—"

"I've talked to Iron Dog," he said. "I've not heard of them, in his own way, pricked up his ears at that. Iron Dog was a famous war chief of the Gros Ventre Sioux. He was driven far out of their home country. Iron Dog no longer was the stubbornly resisting force which had made his name. But though his name was broken and helpless now, remnants of his leadership re-

THE STORY SO FAR:

by his sweetheart, Jody Gordon, and her father, Roper's successful raids against Thorpe's Texas holdings wiped him out of the state. Roper then left for Thorpe's Montana ranches. Jody, told that her father's life was in danger, left her home to maimed; his influence extended over many bands, and more than one tribe.

"I don't hold with dealing with red niggers, much," Dave Shannon said. "These bucks are forced out of their ranges without any deal made whereby they get fed," Roper said. "Half of them are in as pitiful a state of starvation as you ever saw. A big part of the blame for that is on Walk Lasham. Now I aim to square the deal."

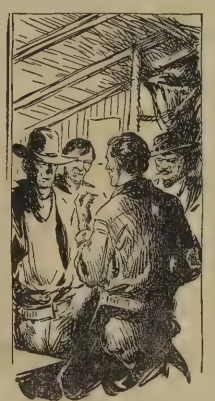

"I already made us a rendezvous with Iron Dog, before I knew you were in on this," Bill Roper told them now. "Inside of a month Iron Dog will be camped on the Milk River with anyway seven or eight bands."

"Seven or eight bands!" Tex Long shouted at him. "My God, there'll be worse than a thousand Indians on the Milk!"

"A thousand, hell!" Roper said. "If there aren't that many buck warriors alone, I'll eat the beef myself!" The men in the little cabin were not easily surprised, and less easily shocked or awed; but their usually unrevealing faces now gave them away.

"God Almighty!" Dave Shannon said. It was almost a prayer.

"He's done it now," Hat Crick Tommy said slowly. "You know

"Now I aim to square the deal."

what happens when you throw that many loose Indians together? You get a war on your hands, by God! They'll come whooping down Montana—they'll tear the country wide open! The whole frontier will go up in a dust of smoke. Nothing'll ever stop 'em, once they get together like that!"

"One thing will."

"What will?"

"Crick," said Roper.

"That might be so," Dave Shannon admitted. "I never yet see an Indian go to war on a full stomach."

A tenacity had come into that dark cabin; they were realizing now that they stood in the shadow of events of a magnitude they had not dreamed. In the quiet, Bill Roper's hands kept crasing and recrasing the letter from Jody Gordon. A faint dampness showed on his forehead, but his fingers acted cold and awkward.

"There's five of us here," Tex Long said. "You expect us to just suddenly feed every Indian in creation?"

"I've got twenty-seven riders waiting to throw in with us at the first word."

"Twenty-seven riders? Where?"

"All over Montana. What do you think I did all winter? Holed up like a she-bear?"

Silence again, while they all studied Roper.

"How many you figure to move?" Tex Long asked at last.

Roper's voice was so low they could hardly hear his words. "Between twenty and thirty thousand head."

Tex Long threw his hat against the roof poles in a gesture of complete impatience. "Dead of winter," he said, "maybe having to fight part of the time; why, thirty-four cowboys couldn't drive—"

"We don't have to handle this stock like fat beef," Roper reminded them. "We don't have to pull up for quicksand, or stampede losses, or high water. If a hundred head get swept down a river, what the hell? Some different Indians will get hold of 'em downstream. Working that way, hard and fast, thirty cowboys can move every head in Montana!"

"We're terrible short of time," Tex Long said.

"I know it; in another couple of

GOOD TIME TO SELECT HENS

September is an excellent month to select the laying flock because at this season of the year it is easy to distinguish the good from poor producers.

The later a hen lays in the Summer and Fall, the greater will be her yearly egg production. Contrary to general belief, the early moult does not make the early Winter layer.

Letter From The Carpenters

Clanton, Ala. Sept. 8, 1941
Editor Chilton County News:

In regard to the people working at Childersburg and the people of Chilton County as a whole, I would like to have a small space in your paper.

The report has come to me of several people working there from here that is not paying their debts. I know a large per cent of the people working there are making more money than they ever did in their lives and have got the best job they ever had. And if you get garnished for your debts you are sure to lose your job and will be barred from working any defense job. And I know any one making on these defense jobs can't least make satisfactory arrangements about their debts.

And to the Bankers of Chilton County, The Bank of Columbia, cashing Du Pont checks free of charge and staying open on Friday nights to cash their checks and no one can blame them for depositing their money in that bank and also doing a large per cent of their trading in Columbia.

Chilton County has been fortunate in getting workers on at Childersburg. We have the largest per cent (according to population) of any county in the state, working at Childersburg and it seems to me that the banks of Chilton County could show as much appreciation to the workers as the banks of Shelby county.

And I believe we people of Chilton County could get some Defense Project yet, if we would go to work and put out a little money towards getting something and I can say that the Carpenters Union is ready to go in part in money and time to make an effort to get something for Chilton County.

I believe if the Probate Judge and county officials, Mayor and city officials and the business men of the county could get together and work out some plan and donate a little money we could at least get an airplane yet.

FOLKS 'N THINGS ABOUT TOWN
By Ben

Here's something that lot of you will be interested in... appearing in this week's issue of the 'Lens', house organ of the Olam Mills Studios, we notice that Mary Nell Smith is doing pretty well by herself... ranked right at the top in sales for the week...

Paul D. Cook, who is in the Coast Guard and stationed in Hawaii, writes this week that the baseball season is over and quotes a fine record of performance for this season... stated over 400 and connected with home runs for the season... also states that he has made Tackle for the football team... weighs 212 pounds and intends to be heard from that position when the 251st Coast Artillery starts competition this fall.

In case you folks notice a bit of competition in the way of paragraphing in the News this week, it's Bob Haggard doing his stuff... we wouldn't exactly call a competitor of course in any other line so we will just keep our mouth shut until we find out what Bob's going to do... anyway, Bob's doing this week... and we always said Bob never hit a man unless he's down.

Mr. H. T. Pipes brought a corn all the way to the News office Tuesday afternoon... it was over 14 feet tall and if it was a sample of his corn this year the fellow who gathers it here will have to carry a compass to find his way back to the house.

ABOUT SCHOOL—Overheard in the auditorium... daughter you just must learn to write better. It can hardly read this. But mother, I didn't write that, the teacher did... noise everywhere, and when Prof. Hicks got up to talk you could hear a pin drop... the girls and the boys have separate study classes... school will start at 8:00 o'clock, standard time and let out at 3:00... there are seventeen teachers at C. C. H. S. and twelve at Clanton Grammar School... both schools expect the largest enrollment yet... Clanton plays its first football game on Thursday night September 25th against Montevallo... let you didn't know that C. C. H. S. probably the only school in the state that the classes are able to start on the second day of school due to the expert handling of schedules and assignments by Prof. Hicks and his assistants... most schools, we understand, take a week to get down to real work... C. C. H. S. is also to report a band this year, football games will seem more like football games with a band playing and colors flying... we understand that a Glee Club will also be organized... Mrs. Mims and Mrs. Ellis, directing.

We know that Postmaster R. W. Lowe is the most accommodating man that ever was... he would run a close second to the Good Samaritan when it comes to helping a fellow man in need... every week or so we catch him out on the highways helping someone in one way or another. Last Sunday we saw him at Thorsby... a motorist's car had caught on fire and was burning fast... there was much excitement... cars lined the highway on either side... two men were throwing sand over the flames... we drove on through and pulled up on the other side of the block from the burning car, just off the highway... about the time we stopped, who should come running down the highway with a large pail of water, splashing, but R. W. Lowe... headed for the burning automobile.

A local merchant tells us that paper is going so high that the shoe manufacturers are going to have to start making shoes out of leather.

We pulled an awful boner last week, as usual, in our report of the Montgomery Area Council, Boy Scouts of America, luncheon at the Thomson Hotel. It had been reported that the luncheon would be "Dutch Treat," but it wasn't... the eats were on the Council and from reports we get the meeting was a huge success.

Clanton Schools Open With Record Enrollment
Montevallo Is Chilton's Opponent In First Game Of Season September 25

The Clanton Grammar School and the Chilton County High School opened their doors for the 1941-42 school year last Monday morning after postponing opening day for two weeks due to the poliomylitis epidemic. Although there were only a very few cases reported in this county, the school authorities thought it best to delay opening of the schools until this week.

Last year the enrollment was 526 at the end of the first month and Tuesday of this week the enrollment was 532 which was the second day of school. Boys 266; girls 266. It is believed the number of boys and girls enrolled this year will reach 550 by the end of the first month. Boys 266; girls 266.

First foot ball game of the season will be played with Montevallo High School in Clanton on Thursday evening September 25th at 7:30 S.T. The opening game with Verbena High School was postponed because the opening date of school was so late that the Verbena team did not have sufficient time to get ready for this game. Either Verbena, or some other team will be played at the end of the season, as the local team is desirous of playing nine games this season which is the number allowed by the high school athletic association. More will be said about this game in next week's News.

ALABAMA WEEKLY WEATHER AND CROP REPORT

Although light showers fell at most reporting stations, they did not occur at any point on more than one or two days. It can therefore, be said there was no rainfall of importance during the week. Temperatures were above normal the first two days of the week and near normal during the remainder of the period. Although there was occasional cloudiness, there was abundant sunshine for maturing crops. Soil moisture is deficient in most sections and more rain will soon be needed to facilitate fall plowing.

There has been no change in the outlook for corn during the past week and a good crop seems to be assured in most parts of the State. According to the Alabama Cooperative Crop Reporting Service, a yield of 15.0 bushels per acre was forecast on September 1 which is 2.5 bushels more than last year and 2.6 bushels per acre above the (1930-39) average. Hay crops are in good condition with above average yields reported. Due to the scarcity of rain and to the abundance of sunshine, farmers are making satisfactory progress with harvest. Peanuts continue fair and harvesting is getting under way. Sweetpotatoes are reported fair to good. Sugar cane is making fair progress.

Early cotton is reported good in sections of north Alabama while late cotton in these same communities is very poor. The crop is opening rapidly and picking is making good progress, with some sections in south Alabama reporting picking almost finished. Boll weevils and leaf worms are still doing considerable damage in north Alabama.

Pastures continue good in most sections and are affording better grazing than usual for this season. Prices and condition of livestock are satisfactory. No outbreak of disease were reported.

New Chance Given Tenant Farmers To Purchase Land
F.S.A. Opens Books For Loan Applications Under Bankhead-Jones Act

Another chance for landless farmers in Chilton County to become landowners and to start on their way to independence, has been opened.

Tenants, sharecroppers and farm laborers in Chilton have new opportunity to file formal application for loans under the Bankhead-Jones Act through the Farm Security Administration supervisor in this county. He is Marvin Durbin, and his office is located at Clanton.

Through the operation of the Bankhead-Jones Act, more than 5,400 farmers have become landowners in the Southeastern States comprising Region V of the Farm Security Administration. Of these, 47 are in Chilton County.

In the current year, opportunity is offered for approximately 2,350 more landless farmers of the region to become landowners. Of these 15 will be in this county.

This Week In National Defense

DEFENSE PLANNING

The Supply Priorities and Allocation Board ordered its executive director, Donald M. Nelson, to compile an over-all list of U. AID TO BRITAIN

British Foreign Minister Eden informed the United States all materials received by Great Britain under the Lend-Lease Act were used exclusively for war purposes and that none is being diverted to private channels. Secretary of State Hull said there had been some misunderstanding about British exports and the message explains that the two Governments are undertaking to do cooperatively.

T. C.

The Commodity Credit Corporation made available for Lend-Lease operations in the past two weeks 100,130 bales of cotton and 1,345,000 bushels of corn. The Red Cross announced it will send a delegation to Russia to study and report on most urgent needs in that country and how to meet them.

Electors Divide Measures At City's Polls Tuesday
School Proposition Loses 226-42; Dog Law Will Remain In Effect

The school measure, providing for ten per cent of the water revenue of Clanton going to provide an eighth month, for the Clanton Grammar School was badly defeated in the election held Tuesday.

Only 268 voters went to the polls, the voting was listless and the average citizen seemed not to be interested.

Of the 268 voters cast 226 voted no increase in the present water rate and 42 voted for the increase.

On the question of letting our dogs run loose or strict enforcement of the ordinance as it stands, the vote was 215 for and 46 against.

At the meeting of the City Council Tuesday night the members stated that they were sorry to have to vote in the above questions, but were anxious to find out just what the sentiment of the people were in regard to the two issues.

Quoting Cohen E. Stapp, Mayor: "The Mayor and Council favor as long a school term as possible for the children but because of the financial condition of the City we feel that it is to the best interest of all that we live within our income."

Relative to the Dog Law, the Council passed a resolution employing additional help to put on a night shift to pick up dogs now running at large. The Mayor wants dog owners to take note of this so that there will be no misunderstanding in case your dog is taken.

Little Colonel Works For Public While Others Panhandle

While the political malcontents of the State are panhandling in an effort to raise a hundred thousand dollars slush fund to be used in an effort to defeat Bibb Graves for Governor, the "Little Colonel" is spending almost his entire time getting concessions from the Federal Government that will directly benefit all the people of Alabama.

Fully appreciative of the great honors which have been bestowed upon him by Alabamians, he is earnestly working, day in and day out, getting something to give the people instead of getting them for something.

He returned from Washington for a day or two over the past week end, where he has been working with Senators Bankhead and Hill and other members of the Alabama delegation in Congress on matters that are of major interest to all the people of the State.

He reports that there is a splendid chance of the Federal Government appropriating a maximum of $20 monthly for Old Age assistance to each person 65 and over in every State in the Union, regardless of whether the States match this amount or not; however this can be supplemented by whatever amount the State could add. This is the best news we have heard in regard to Old Age assistance thus far.

The Little Colonel is constantly GETTING something for the people who have given so much to him, while the would-be political exploiters are scheming and plotting and laving swank nights thinking up schemes to defeat him.

Go back to Washington Bibb, and when you are working for us there we, the people, will be working for you here.

Peace Will Never Come That Way

"Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," will never be accomplished through the preachments of peace makers, and through the use of bombs, bayonets and blitzkrieg.

Peace is the instrument of the weak, and it is the killing and maiming of human beings (created by God in His own image), and for the destruction of the handwork of Nature and man.

Peace does not, never has, and never will come through hatred, malice and strife.

There is so far in the lead in the gubernatorial race—it will take an experienced, swift candidate to defeat him. Catch him if you can. You can't do it—Our Southern Home.

The President in his speech of yesterday called the submarines of Germany and Italy "rattlesnakes." Are you refer to this remark that the submarines of the U. S. and Britain are "kingsnakes?"

We saw a bunch that while Bibb was in Washington last week, he left a "clean Old Age Plum Bucket" in front of the treasury, and he will bring it back full the next trip he makes to see the President.

Hitler and Hess stepped up all this mess; But Franklin and Winston Can correct it, we guess.

What jobs after the war and the defense project boom?" ask The Shelby County Democrat. Ask our friend Gaston Scott—he's been hired by the Government to look after matters like that.

Alabama Editors Discuss Politics And Other Matters

LONG TIME PAYMENTS
It begins to look as though easy, peaceful times are gone for a good many years to come. Wars are fought on borrowed money and the paying of the present bill is going to take a long, long time.—Fairhope Courier.

HARD "SLEDGING"
We notice by the papers where the Hon. Chauncey Sparks made a lengthy speech in Birmingham Labor Day. Must still be entertaining the idea of running for Governor again. . . . He will find mighty hard 'sledding' against the 'Little Colonel.'

THE BEST THINGS
"The best things in life are free," says Dale Harrison. And he lists some of these best, free things: "A friendly pat on the back; sleep; the perfume of pine woods; mother love; the music of waves upon the shore; laughter; hope; the song of birds hopping spryly about a dew-drenched lawn in the morning, questing their breakfast; the classic of music and literature; the right to think as you please; and the dawn which follows inevitably the darkest night."—DeKalb Times.

THEY READ WHAT THE BISHOP WRITES

Jimmie Faulkner says that politicians would rather have Atticus Mullin say something good about them than any other writer in the state. We believe that most politicians would rather have Atticus say something about them—good or bad—than to ignore them altogether. The Bishop has admirers who read everything he says with the firm belief that it's gospel. Then there are others who make a special point of disagreeing with him. But they read his column, too.—Greenville Advocate.

DESTROYER HOBSON TAKES THE WAVES

A destroyer has just been launched named Hobson, after the Alabama hero of the Merrimac, Richard Pearson Hobson. Who remembers when Captain Hobson was going up and down the United States on the lecture platform warning the American people against the "yellow peril" as he called the Japanese menace?

It would be an anomalous thing if the destroyer Hobson after all these years should finally come into action against the very yellow peril of which the captain warned so many years ago.—Alabama Journal.

GASTON SCOTT, DIRECTOR

Some of Gaston Scott's good friends are joking him about his acceptance of a federal position which puts him under the provisions of the Hatch act, eliminates him from politics, and prevents him from any kind of political activity. To political wisecracks this seems almost as funny as to have Dr. H. J. Willingham as collector of internal revenue and Roy Nolen as Montgomery postmaster wearing a similar political muzzle. Men who have spent their lives taking an active part in politics and public affairs, look strange when suddenly they take the veil.

This much can be said, however: men who know most about politics and public affairs make the best public servants. It is not right that the public should be completely denied the benefit of the advice such men can give out of their long experience and knowledge.

For the very reason that Gaston Scott knows all the ins and outs of politics, it is here and now predicted that he will make a huge success as Alabama's federal director of the Public Works Reserve, which is making its plans to cushion the shock of unemployment and re-employment with which the nation will be faced upon the termination of the present preparedness emergency.—Alabama Journal.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

I was conducting a revival and a man came to me asking this question: "Preacher, which do you think to be the more important to a Christian, Faith or works?" I hardly knew how to answer him and just then this thought came to me and I answered him by asking of him this question, "Which is more necessary to a bird, his right or his left wing?" The man debated quietly to himself for a moment and then replied, "That is very clear." We all know that the right and left wing of a bird is necessary if that bird is going to fly. If we are to become the Christians that we should be, we must have faith and works. We can never go places in our experience if we do not have faith.

I have just read the story of a Frenchman who was being entertained by an old Indian chief who was a devout Christian. The Frenchman seeing the Chief reading his Bible sneered at him, remarking that in France they had relegated such bunk into the past. The old Indian chief arose and led his guest to the door and pointing out a hill top in the distance, he asked if he could see that elevation. "Certainly," replied the proud Frenchman. Then the Indian made this significant remark, "Sir, that hill top is the place where we feasted on human flesh during our cannibal days and if it were not for this Bible, I would now be over there eating your body." That is what I call a clinching argument. The old Bible may be neglected and sometimes it may be sneered at, but the old Book is blessing us in a thousand ways.

A little baby boy was born into our home and from the day of his birth his presence meant expense. We had to buy him medicine, clothes and food. It cost a lot to have that little fellow in the home. Two years passed and because he lived we had a joyful expense, but one night this lad cried much and the next night he was cold in death. After the funeral was over the child cost us nothing more in the way of money. I heard a steward ask a member of the church for a donation to the church and this is the reply that he received, "Your church costs too much. Money, money is all that I hear." Hear me folks, your church may cost something if it is a live church. You should be just as glad to give to your church as you would be to feed and care for a living child. Yes, the church costs something. It has in it so many babes in Christ to be fed and trained. When a church dies then it needs no more money. If the church to which you belong never asks you for any money, the physically unfit to pay the debt—Moulton Advertiser.

SPARKS BEGIN TO FLY

As political news continues to come in, be discussed from every angle, it seems that Judge Chauncey Sparks of Eufaula really does intend to make the race for governor next year, although there are still some observers who think otherwise.

But the magazine ALABAMA, always an enemy of Bibb Graves, began helping Sparks formulate his campaign this week by coining the phrase, "people versus politicians," stabbing at the fact that ex-governor Graves has already pledged practically every political group in Alabama to support him.

Sparks, however, seems to be carefully feeling out just what planks to put into his platform. Apparently, he has scrapped his old idea of pounding the sales tax, for folks all over are now tax-minded, but some believe that he may pledge himself to help the schools by earmarking all sales-tax monies for the schools, and that would be a jump of about five million a year for the schools.

Sparks has apparently gained one advantage and that is that he is just about the only candidate that Graves antis can hang on to now—thus, the Dixon support.

Thus, the Barbour County judge is bound to take that path of campaigning. . . . not a positive campaign but a negative one, in which he hopes to gain votes by condemning Col. Graves and his methods of administration. That may get some votes, but in our opinion, it will fall far short—Culman Banner.

you belong to a dead church or else you are a dead member.

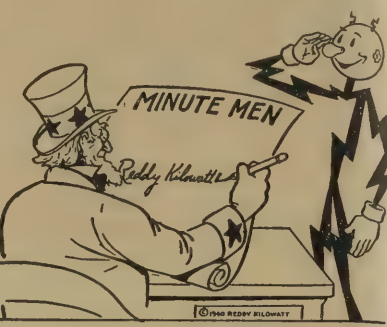

A negro man fell from his boat into the icy waters of the Merrimac river. Broken cakes of ice were all around him and it seemed that he was in for certain death. An effort was made to save him by extending to him the end of a plank that was all covered over with ice. The shivering man laid hold with all of his strength but his hand slipped and he fell back. A second effort and he fell back again. This time the man shouted to his rescuers, "For the love of God gentlemen, reach to me the wooden end of the plank." This was done and the drowning man was saved. They had been reaching toward him the icy end and he could not hold on. Oh how often do Christian people make the same mistake. We turn the icy end of the plank toward our fellows and then wonder why they do not hold on, and why they are not saved by our efforts. When we learn to reach out a warm hand to a lost world then the lost will be saved.

Hoffman, the famous German chemist, called one Sunday morning to see Sir William Thompson. After ringing the door bell he was met by the maid of the house. "Is Sir William in this morning," inquired the Chemist. "Sir William is most certainly not at home at this hour of the Sabbath" replied the maid. The Chemist again asked, "Would you tell me where I might find him?" This time the maid seemed more astonished than ever and with a tone of irritation she replied, "You will find him at church, where you should be." At the eleven o'clock hour on Sunday where might you be found? Did I hear you say that you were at home at that hour? I heard a host say that they were on the water courses at that hour. Shame on them, but I heard many say that they were fishing on the Sabbath. We need much plain talk to day like the statement of the maid as she addressed the German Chemist, "You will find him at church where you should be."

Letter From The Carpenters

EDITOR'S NOTE: Due to numerous requests we are running the letter below which we received last week from the Carpenters Union, No. 2286, Clanton, Ala., and appeared in last week's issue of the News.

Clanton, Ala. Sept. 8, 1941
Editor Chilton County News:

In regard to the people working at Childersburg and the people of Chilton County as a whole, I would like to have a small space in your paper.

The report has come to me of several people working there from here that is not paying their debts. I know a large per cent of the people working there are making more money than they ever did in their lives and have got the best job they ever had. And if you get garnished for your debts you are sure to lose your job and will be barred from working on any defense job. And I know any one making the money that they are making on these defense jobs can at least make satisfactory arrangements about their debts.

And to the Bankers of Chilton County. The bank of Columbiana is cashing out Post checks free of charge and staying open on Friday night to cash their checks and no one can blame them for depositing their money in that bank and also doing a large per cent of their trading in Columbiana.

Chilton County has been fortunate in getting workers on at Childersburg. We have the largest per cent (according to population) of any county in the state working at Childersburg and it seems to me that the banks of Chilton County could show as much appreciation to the workers as the banks of Shelby county.

And I believe we people of Chilton County could get some Defense Project yet, if we would go to work and put out a little money towards getting something and I can say that this Carpenters Union is ready to go our part in money and time to make an effort to get something for Chilton County.

I believe if the Probate Judge and county officials, Mayor and city officials and the business men of the county could get together and work out some plans and donate a little money we could at least get an airport yet.

D. S. SMITH,
Business Agent Carpenters Local Union No. 2286, Clanton, Ala.

COAL OPERATORS SET STAGE FOR 1942

The adamant position and dilly-dallying negotiations of the coal operators with Alabama miners for a new contract, which has resulted in a general closure of all coal mines in the State, is only a prelude to the tactics of Republicans and Wilkiecrats die-hard in the coming 1942 gubernatorial campaign, in the opinion of political observers here. The stage is being set, the play is being written and the characters have been selected for the 1942 fiasco. The only problem remaining is for the anti-New Deal coalition to sell the folks in Alabama on the play.

Chauncey Sparks' tirade against the working man and woman at Ensley on Labor Day was a part of the flop ... a colossal one ... but Sparks' talk was right down the alley for the coal operators and others of their ilk. The Labor Day presence of Joseph (Mein) Kamp, pro-Fascist poison pen artist and Roosevelt hater, in Anniston, led prominent New Dealers to wonder if the old pre-election alignment was in process of being reformed for Alabama's next gubernatorial campaign—Birmingham News Digest.

ALABAMA HAS EXCELLENT CROP DALLIS GRASS SEED

Alabama farmers have the biggest crop of Dallis grass seed ever produced, reports J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, Auburn, in urging farmers to save seed in pastures, along roadsides, on ditch banks, and other places.

As soon as the seeds have fully developed and fairly well matured farmers plan to cut the plants with a moving machine, rake them up, and scatter them over the pasture land.

"If you do not have a moving machine, cut the plants with a hand blade and scatter over the pasture," Lowery advises.

"Another good method is stripping the heads by hand. Incidentally, much of the Dallis grass seed you buy is harvested by men walking through the Dallis grass fields with pick sacks on their backs and hand-stripping the heads.

According to Brown some producers find it desirable to run a "seed furrow down the center of the field and rake off excess plants. Other uses scratchers of various kinds have to break out the plants, edges the rows cut off with a coulter or some other implement. Two thin rows along each side of the center of the row will be the result of practical all methods employed in thinning.

Thinning should be done at the time of fall fertilizer application; and by mid-September in North Alabama, first of October in Central Alabama and mid-October in South Alabama.

to purchase the land. The loans cover the necessary buildings, barns, pool, smoke houses, etc.; and ample fencing and money for permanent improvement, such as pasture.

Thus, said Mr. Durbin, the tenant family has more than credit to purchase a home. He expects to attain a better living for himself and family. The annual payments which the borrower is required to make are usually about like rents now paid tenants operating the farms purchased.

The county tenant purchase committee, which considers all loans, does not pass upon any applications except those of families that have fore applications on file. Mr. Durbin pointed out that applications filed before June 30, 1940, are not current and therefore cannot be considered under the would-be purchaser goes to the county FSA office and renews his application.

THIN STRAWBERRIES NOW FOR GOOD QUALITY FRUIT

The fall thinning of matted strawberry rows to properly space the plants is the practice Alabama growers are finding essential in the production of good yields of high quality fruit. Cultural practices to give vigorous plants, spaced with not more than two or three per square foot, are advised by Lyle Brown, extension horticulturist.

Co-Op. Associations Help Merchants

Cooperative associations of low-income farmers in the Southeast, as planned by the Farm Security Administration are expected to be great boons for local merchants, it was pointed out today by Marvin Durbin, FSA farm supervisor for Chilton County.

Mr. Durbin pointed out that group action by FSA farm families will increase their purchasing power, and said that everywhere possible the purchasing will be done through local business houses.

"In a few months," Mr. Durbin said "purchasing and marketing associations of FSA borrowers will be organized in every county of the Southeastern States—Alabama, Florida, Georgia and South Carolina—or sound existing organizations will be used.

"They will enable the little farmers to buy together for great savings, to plan production together, to sell together and to reach markets more conveniently and cheaply. They will enable them to obtain machinery and breeding stock which the little man alone could never afford; to get medical, dental and veterinary services that he wouldn't have otherwise.

"Yet none of these benefits will involve competition with existing private agencies. A cooperative association does not contemplate setting up a store. On the other hand, it will strengthen buying power and provide more patronage for local business men in every line."

Mr. Durbin said the organization of cooperative groups in this county will be announced as soon as possible.

"We look here, as elsewhere," he said, "to support for the Farm Security principle, on which its new Division of Cooperatives was set up. That is, that cooperation among small farmers is not only good business, but also good citizenship.

Small farmers, working together in communities for mutual benefit for the first time, already finding that they can do more things for themselves, win more advantages and more consideration, than ever before.

"More than 1,500,000 pounds of poultry, produced in the 'Food for Defense' campaign, have been marketed in the four states through group action, without great dislocation of markets. Could the little farmer, alone, have done this without loss?"

SENORA CARMEN SIERRA ABO-DIANO HARMON VISITS ALA.

On last Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Varnell of Montevallo, entertained a group of their Clanton and Montevallo friends, with a steak supper on their lawn, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Hammond (nee Carmen Sierra Abo-diano) who were on their way from Mexico City to Princeton University where Mr. Hammond will be engaged as Professor of Spanish during this school year. Mr. and Mrs. Luther E. Little of Clanton were included in the number of guests for the evening.

While Carmen was a student at Alabama College she visited in Clanton a number of times and made many friends here. Her friends will be glad to know that she is in the states and will become an American citizen in 1942.

ALABAMA WILL COOPERATE FOOD PRODUCTION PROGRAM

Alabama will play its part in the greatest national food production campaign in history, announces P. O. Davis, director Alabama Extension Service.

The campaign will be under the supervision of State and county USDA Defense Boards which are made up of representatives of all Department of Agriculture agencies in the field.

"Every farmer in the United States will be contacted by local farmer committeemen under the supervision of USDA Defense Boards and will assist with individual farm plans to determine the extent to which each farm can contribute to agriculture's task in national defense, says Secretary of Agriculture Wickard.

"The goals for 1942 call for the largest production in the history of American agriculture but we are not going to have to plow up the hills and the plains to get it. We have adequate reserves of feed grains for increased production of livestock products and it will not be necessary materially to increase total crop acreage next year.

"Farm production in general is in good balance but greatly increased supplies of some commodities will be needed. In this emergency I have found it necessary to encourage the expansion of the production of hogs, eggs, evaporated milk, dry skim milk, chickens and chickens, and accordingly I have today made a formal public announcement that the Department of Agriculture will support prices for these commodities until December 31, 1942, at not less than 85 per cent of parity. Increases in the production of other crops in 1942 are also desirable. Other proclamations may be issued from time to time if it is found that special encouragement is needed to obtain adequate or desired supplies, or supplies which are considerably in excess of what farmers might otherwise be expected to produce.

Asks Inquiry Into Legumes Seed Delay

The Alabama Agricultural Conservation Committee has requested the U. S. Department of Justice to ascertain if there is in existence a monopoly or improper collusion in the handling and distribution of winter legume seed, which are important for soil building in Alabama. Action came because of undue delay in the arrival of these seed from the West Coast producers.

There are reports about advancing prices and also scarcity. These, as viewed by the AAA committee, are not in line with authentic information. Last year the system of distribution was highly satisfactory; now very few seed are available in Alabama.

The State committee, composed of W. B. Crawley, L. S. Fluher, H. H. Whitfield, J. M. Jones, and P. O. Davis, instructed A. W. Jones, State AAA administrator, to transmit the action of the State committee to Washington.

These statistics are obtained from the records of the County Health Department and are published for the purpose of promoting better registration of births and deaths. Filing a certificate for births and deaths with local registrars is made compulsory by the State Vital Statistics law. Responsibility for filing birth certificates within five days after the birth rests on the physicians or midwife in attendance; undertakers or persons in charge of burials are required by law to obtain a burial permit before the body is interred. Such permits are obtainable only on the presentation of a completed death certificate to the registrar in the beat in which the death occurred.

Anyone having knowledge of births or deaths occurring during August and not included in the above list should report this matter to the County Health Office immediately.

FLINT HILL SCHOOL HOUSE REUNION

The annual reunion of patroness teachers and pupils of Flint Hill school, located five miles northwest of Rockford, will be held on the Third Sunday in September—September 21.

Indications are, according to John A. Darden, chairman of the organization, the largest crowd to ever assemble at Flint Hill for any event, will be present at the reunion.

The program will be rendered largely by former patrons, teachers, and pupils of the school. Among those on the program are the Rev. B. F. Miller, Bessemer, who will preach at 11 o'clock; Vernie Teel, Langdale, Editor of the Chambers County News, will deliver response address; Hon. L. Handy Ellis and Prof. Luther Little, will deliver formal addresses during the day, while Prof. Hiram King, Bessemer, will direct the music; Benjamin E. Samuels, Talladega, Prof. A. R. Jones, Eclectic, Prof. J. R. Kimbrough, Goodwater, the Rev. Harmon D. Moore, Rockford, Prof. John D. Samuels, Gadsden, will have prominent parts on the program.

Hundreds of visitors are expected, while scores of former students and patrons, and all the living teachers are expected to attend.

Flint Hill may be reached from Hanover, Rockford, Weogufka. All roads that day will lead to Flint Hill. Get in the road and follow the crowd and you will reach there. The program will begin at nine-thirty Sunday morning.

John A. Darden, Goodwater, is chairman of the organization, while Mrs. Vida Corley Holt, Birmingham, is Secretary. Each of these were students at one time of Flint Hill school.

Milk Sets Record

An all-time record for milk production on United States farms has been set during first six months of 1941. Production was about five per cent greater than for the first half of 1940 and amounted to nearly 60 billion pounds for the half year. For the years 1935 to 1939, the average for the first six months was nearly 54 billion pounds.

Best Method To Use Harvesting Potatoes

Farmers planning to market their sweet potatoes are being advised by Lyle Brown, extension horticulturist, Auburn, to harvest them when the largest quantity of potatoes of market size can be expected. Quality rather than quantity must be considered to get the best market price. All sweet potatoes should be harvested before frost and while the soil is still dry.

A large turn plow or middle buster can be used to plow the potatoes from the ground. The potatoes should remain in the field over night or in the hot sun more than 30 minutes. Brown says, "Never place them in crates or containers that have sharp edges or rough places on the interior. In the field, the No. 1's and No. 2's and the broken and cull potatoes should each be placed in separate groups. Never throw the potatoes in to heap rows."

Fall Hatched Pullets Boost Egg Production

An easy, inexpensive way to build a laying flock of "long-winded" hens—those that lay right through the summer and into September—is to set fall-laid eggs from old hen pullets hatched from these fall flocks, if sired by cockers from "long-winded" families, should inherit this same tendency to lay right through the summer without molting.

Alabama farmer poultryman who produce eggs for hatching may reasonably expect that many of the eggs gathered at this time of the year are from persistant layers, excepting pullets eggs which are smaller. Studies by Dr. C. W. Knox, U. S. Department of Agriculture poultryman, show the hens that laid continuously all through the year and were still laying in September averaged 48 eggs more than those less persistant.

COTTON STAMPS INCREASING SALE OF COTTON MATERIAL

Retail sales of cotton goods over the State are moving upward as thousands of dollars in the form of cotton stamps are being released in most of the county AAA offices. These stamps earned by cooperators who planted under their 1941 cotton acreage allocations, are being spent for goods made entirely of cotton.

Although there is no method of accurately estimating the amount of stamps issued, 111,221 intention tickets were signed this year on Alabama farms. Each farmer who participated in the supplementary cotton program is eligible to receive up to $25 in cotton stamps if he is a tenant, sharecropper, or owner-operator, of a single farm, and $50 if he is an operator of two or more farms or of farms with two or more tenants.

CARD OF THANKS

Dear Editor:

Please allow me a small space in your paper to express my sincere thanks to my friends for their kindness shown me during my illness the past four weeks.

Especially do I thank Dr. Gragg, the nurses of the Carver, Alabama hospital and Mr. J. M. Martin. May God's richest blessings rest upon each and everyone.

I have returned to my home after spending seven days in the Central Alabama Hospital and am improving rapidly.—Naomi Heflin and family.

Treat Corn For Weevils If Infestation Is High

By thoroughly cleaning the corn then making sure that all cracks are covered with tin, wood strips, or paper, the corn placed in the crib can be fumigated and the loss due to weevils will be drastically reduced.

Allow corn to dry for two or three weeks before treating with carbonyl disulphate (high-life) at the rate of one gallon per 250 bushels of unshelled corn. W. A. Ruffin, extension fumigator and entomologist, advises fumigation this fall as weevils are numerous; otherwise treatment may be delayed until spring.

Many Chickens

Number of chickens raised on farms in 1941 exceed all past records. This year's estimated number is 785,759,000, which is 14 per cent greater than in 1940 and 9 per cent above the 10-year average. Likewise, egg production is high this year.

If the pictures in the papers are to be relied upon, those funny looking little things the women call hats are to be worn again the coming season.

ALABAMA needs the economy of more CONCRETE ROADS like this Nearly every Southern state from Texas to Delaware—except Alabama—is adding steadily to its mileage of concrete roads.

These states use concrete for main traveled roads because cost figures prove that it is the most economical pavement.

Any state that builds inferior, short-lived surfaces may find its program for the construction of new roads slowed down to a standstill by heavy expenditures for maintenance and reconstruction.

Alabama's main traveled roads need many miles of new pavement. Because of its greater safety and because it costs less per mile per year, concrete is the best pavement for these roads.

INSTALLMENT 11
THE STORY SO FAR:

of his sweetheart, Jody Gordon, and her father. During raids upon Thorpe's Texas holdings wiped him out of the state. Roper then prepared for a great raid upon the vast herds on Thorpe's Montana ranches. Several thousand Indians had gathered near "Yes, mam, I kind of did, I guess; and I got to be going on there; Miss Gordon. If you'll just give me any message you want me to take, I'd sure like to be pulling out of here, before—"

"All right. You be here with two good horses just after dark."

"If you could just as leave give me the message now, I'd sure like to—"

"There is no message. I'm going with you to Bill Roper."

Shoshone Wilce looked like a man entrapped. "I can't do it! Your father—I just won't do it, Miss Gordon!"

"All right. I'll make the ride by myself."

"Hey, look! You can't—"

"Bill Roper isn't going to like this, Wilce."

Shoshone studied her searchingly, but found nothing to reassure him. It was in his mind that this girl would do exactly as she said. "My father waited, his eyes angry. "The word from Dodge explains half the trouble that King-Gordon is up against," Jody said. "Thorpe can't believe that one lone woman deserted by everyone who should have been his friend, could manage to smash his Texas holdings, and go on to cut away his herds in Montana. He thought the night the western Billy Roper in the Texas Rusters' War. And he believes that we're backing him now."

"Well?" Lew Gordon said. "You mean to say you came all this way to tell me that?"

"Ben Thorpe means to kill you," Lew Gordon's face showed no change of expression. But he did not reply at once.

"I don't doubt it," he said at last; "but would you expect? You'd better wear into a range and anybody is likely to go down."

Jody's face was white.

"You know what's at the bottom of all the trouble we're having," her father said. "You know as well as I do that two years of nothing but trouble lays square at the door of Bill Roper."

Jody sprang up to face him. "I certainly do not know anything of the kind!" she answered him.

Lew Gordon stared at her.

"It's an everlasting shame upon the cow country that Dusty King's herders are still in their saddles. But tell you, Billy Roper is the only man I've seen with courage enough to—"

And now her father angered as she seldom seen him anger. "You'll never see me now," he roared. "I'm sick of hearing his name—a dirty outlaw whelp that knows nothing but kill and burn and raid!"

Jody's eyes narrowed and filled with tears. "You may as well know this," she told her father. "The day that Billy Roper dies I want to die too."

For a moment Lew Gordon seemed shocked; he stared at his daughter as if the devil had come up through the floor. The girl who faced him was entirely strange to him.

He heard her say, "If you had stayed by him, as Dusty King would have done, Thorpe would have been whipped and through, long ago."

"Child," he said queerly, "what are you talking about?"

"If you'd only take Billy Roper back into King-Gordon—"

"You're never happy while I live," her father said flatly.

A silence fell between them, presently broken by the girl. "He asked me to ride with him once, when he first took the outlaw trail. I wish I had. To the day I live, I'll wish I'd ridden with him then. And now I'll tell you something more. If ever he asks me again, I'll go."

For several moments he stared at her, more shaken than he had been since the death of Dusty King. Then his face congested, and he rose up and his boot heels to tower over the girl.

"By God," he said, his voice unsteady with the repression he put upon it, "that closes the deal. I kept my riders off him because of Dusty King, and I let him run on and, rousing up a range war that close to busted King-Gordon. But when it comes to tampering with you—it's the end! I'm through, you hear me?"

He caught up his battered sombrero, and his spurs rang as he turned toward the door.

"Dad, what are you going to do?"

"Thorpe has a reward on Bill Roper's head. King-Gordon is going to double that reward."

He went storming out, his face black and violent with portent of war.

For several moments Jody Gordon stood motionless where he had left her. Then she turned and went to the door of the long shed she called stable.

Shoshone Wilce was loitering there in the shadow of the rear wall, an uneasy and restless figure.

"Did you find out where Billy Roper can be reached?" Jody demanded.

easy throw together three hundred head in a couple of days. That was a nice bunch of anyway two thousand. The more the better, but with two thousand we'll make our drive."

They slept that night under the newly falling snow. Roper himself made coffee and routed out his riders two hours before the first light. They caught their horses in the dark, with hands that fumbled the stiffened ropes; then split off in pairs to comb the range.

For two days Roper watched the enemy camp while the snow held on, piling a deeper and deeper mat; and on the third day he returned to the rendezvous where the roundup men began straggling in.

Tex Long was the first one back. "This range is plumb solid with stock," Tex declared. "How many do you figure me and Kid Johnson can run off just us two?"

"Well," Roper grunted, "upwards of a dozen—I should hope."

"Better'n six hundred head! Lord Almighty, Bill! Figuring they're worth twenty dollars apiece, and allowing that all the other boys do as good, we're liable to get out of here with around eighty thousand dollars worth of cattle! You realize that?"

But Roper was thinking of the letter in his pocket; the appeal of a girl who needed him in some unknown way, and who did not even know why he couldn't come.

All the next day they worked to tow the little bunches together into a trail herd. Not all of them had done as well as Tex Long and Kid Johnson, but most of them had done well enough. And then, at last, the first herd privateered in the Great Raid began to roll. A long unsteady moving river of cattle poured northward, a dark welter in the thinning fall of the snow. White-faces, mostly, blocky and heavy, well wintered on the prairie, but Roper counted two thousand six hundred odd!

Pressed hard by the heavy force of cowboys, the cattle bawled but humped along northward into the valley of the Prairie Elk.

Rounding up within a day's ride of Miles City itself, Roper's men had taken this herd almost out of the very corals of Lasham's outposts; and yet, so far as any of them knew, that swift-moving drive represented a harder blow than had ever been struck a cattleman in a single raid. In all their months of effort the winter wild bunch had been unable to achieve an equal reprisal upon Lasham, and now they could hardly believe their own success. They forced the cattle hard, driving the cattle to the edge of the range through the clogging snow at a rate incredible to men accustomed to handling market herds.

The cattle that broke the way through the snow kept dropping back, blown and tired; but as fast as they failed, others were forced forward to take their places. Longhorned, stag-legged steers of the old Texas strain fought the riders, breaking the heavy columns repeatedly in their wild-eyed thrusts for liberty, and these were allowed to get away. Gaunt, weak cattle lagged back, unable to keep up even under the snapping rope ends of the tail riders; they also were allowed to drop out, promptly forgotten. Yet, in that first day, the side riders swept in enough north-raining cattle to more than make up the loss.

Roper went with the herd of his Circle Horse Creek; but when they had forded the shallows, crashing through the rotten ice, he turned back. With him he took four men who he believed would do what he said. The cattle were moving more slowly now, plodding doggedly through the heavy going; Tex Long and the remaining eight men could hold them to their way. What was needed now was work of a different kind, and Roper thought he knew what that was to be done.

It was his intention to fight a rear guard action—not only for this first herd, which would be delivered within the week to the Indians who would spirit it away, but for the protection of all the rest of the wild bunch raiding to westward.

But now as he neared the head of the Little Dry, a rider came dropping down a long slope upon a racing horse. His carbine was held above his ragged sombrero in sign of respect, and as he came near they saw that it was Hat Crick Tommy.

Roper jumped his horse out to meet Hat Crick. "What is it? Is there any word? Did she—"

Tommy's face was haggard with fatigue. "She's gone!" he jerked out. "She's beef to Miles City—and now she's gone!"

"Gone? Gone where?"

"Nobody knows. She's missing—disappeared—strayed or lost or rustled. I don't know where. Her father's wild crazy, and every K-G outfit in the north is combing the trails—"

Roper sat staring for a full half minute. Then his hands fumbled for his reata, shook out the loop. "Turn that roan pony! I've got to have a fresh horse . . ."

CHAPTER XVI

The rounding up of the wild bunch of riders lost Roper a few days; but within the week Bill Roper and Tex Long rode into the plains of the Little Dry.

Here around a spluttering fire the riders crouched in their sodden blankets, like Indians while Roper gave out his orders. Thirty-two men and six outlaw leaders were now in the field against Walk Lasham's powerful Montana outfits in the Great Raid.

Roper's first move had been to split his renegade riders into five bunches under the leaders that he knew—Tex Long, Lee Harnish, Dave Shannon, Dry Camp Pierce and himself. Hat Crick Tommy he sent to Miles City in search of further word from Jody Gordon; Hat Crick would later rejoin Roper as messenger and scout.

It was Roper's plan that he and Tex Long, with twelve men between them, should make the most daring raid of all; a raid upon the big herds which Lasham had in the open, the headwaters of Timber Creek and the Little Dry. Of all the ranges in which the wild bunch was interested, this was the nearest Miles City—the most accessible, the most closely watched, the best protected. How many cattle he could transfer from this range to the starving Canadian Sioux, Roper did not know; but it was his hope to raise such a conspicuous and stubborn disturbance as would mask the operations of the rest of the wild bunch, and permit Pierce to work unimpeded.

"The fourteen of us will split seven ways," Roper told them now. "I figure Lasham's look-out camp for this range is about twelve miles southeast. We'll comb every way but that way. I'm not telling you how to gather stock. Hunt like you know how to hunt 'em. Move out one day's ride, spotting your cow bunches. Next day pick 'em up and work 'em this way. And on the third day throw your gatherer against a couple of some one where one man can hold 'em, and the other man of each pair ride back and meet me here. I figure this range is heavy with cattle. I don't see any reason why two good men can't may haunt us and our children for years, but if we look at the problem with firm resolve we can beat this thing."

Mr. Morgenthau said control of consumer installment credit, purchase of defense bonds and stamps and tax-anticipation notes are not enough to prevent consumer purchasing power from forcing prices up. He suggested extension and increase of social security benefits, a unemployment compensation "wage" for the workers and reduction in non-essential expenditures in federal, state and local governments. He also suggested release of Government held surplus stocks of food to hold down food prices.

PRIORITIES

Priorities Director Nelson made mandatory all priority ratings, issued ratings to assure civil air lines continued operation at high efficiency and to give assistance to 20 essential industries in obtaining repair materials.

PRIORITY UNEMPLOYMENT

The Bureau of Employment Security and representatives of the OPM Contract Distribution Division and Labor Division began a nation-wide survey to find jobs for workers laid off because of production curtailment due to shortages and diversion of materials to defense.

NEW PLANTS

The Defense Plant Corporation and the War Department authorized and awarded contracts for construction of six aluminum, magnesium and ordnance plants, totaling $94,579,000. OPM recommended to the War Department construction of an aluminum plant at Troutdale, Ore. to produce 50,000,000 pounds annually.

FARMING OUT

Acting Navy Secretary Forrestal announced creation of the Naval Contracts Distribution Division to cooperate with the OPM in speeding up production by using facilities of small plants and employees whose industries are threatened by shutdown or dislocation because of priorities. Under secretary of War Patterson directed the Army's purchasing offices to bring more of the nation's industrial facilities into the defense program "to eliminate distress caused by loss of business" because of defense priorities.

AGRICULTURE

Agriculture Secretary Wickard announced the 1942 farm program, calling for all-time record production—especially of hogs, eggs, evaporated milk, dry skim milk, cheese and chickens—to improve nutrition in this country and to aid other nations.

RAILROAD LABOR BOARD

President Roosevelt set up a five-man board to investigate the disputes between unions and railroads and to report its findings within 30 days. Wayne Lyman More, dean of the University of Oregon Lay School, heads the Board.

SHIPS BUILT

The Maritime Commission announced the largest mass launching of ships since the World War will take place September 27 when 12 ships slide down the ways. Four other new merchant ships in the 500-ship long-range program are being delivered to operators between September 11 and September 19, making a total of 110 vessels completed under the program. The Navy Department announced launches of two cruisers and one minesweeper. The Maritime Commission said to meet increased demand for officers in the merchant marine it has opened competitive examinations for cadet appointments. Applications must be submitted to the Commission before November 8.

SHIPS ATTACKED

The Maritime Commission announced the U. S. freighter "Steel Seafarer" was sunk in the Gulf of Suez. The State Department reported the "Sessa," operated by an American firm, was sunk near Iceland with 24 men lost and the "Montana," an American owned ship was torpedoed on the way to Iceland with a cargo of lumber.

ARMY SAFETY

The War Department estimated that, despite rigors of field maneuvers this fall, there will be a considerably lower accident and death rate for the 752,000 troops participating than for a corresponding number of civilians. The estimate predicted 236 deaths and 40,000 admissions to hospitals for disease and injury.

AIR

Assistant War Secretary for Air Lovett told the press Army war games will provide a preview of the "world's finest" military aircraft but "in point of quantity... we still have a long way to go" although production is now beginning to roll and... should enable us to equip combat units... one squadron every other day."

The Air Corps announced it is testing a new four-engine flying fortress which is bigger and has more fire power than models now in use by the U. S. and Great Britain.

OIL, GASOLINE

The Special Senate Committee investigating the oil situation said the only shortage of petroleum products or of transportation facilities "is a shortage in a large surplus which is desired." Acting Oil Coordinator Davies issued a statement saying, "the admittedly low condition of petroleum stocks on the East coast continues to mean shortage... (and) the necessity for public cooperation continues." SPAB refused to grant priorities on steel plates for construction of a 1,500 mile petroleum pipeline from Texas to New York. Mr. Davies said the Southeastern pipeline between Port St. Joe, Fla., and Chattanooga, Tenn., will deliver 1,250,000 gallons of gasoline and other petroleum products daily to Georgia and Tennessee within 60 days.

Bob's Column

BY BOB OGLESBY

This week is the beginning of our ninth month in Clanton and also is our beginning as a columnist. Your hospitality has been wonderful and we appreciate the cooperation of all the many friends we've made.

We will appear in this column each week and hope it will be for your pleasure and benefit.

You have probably said, or heard it said, during the last few days, "Fall is in the air." It is in the air, in fact it is here undoubtedly. This brings numerous thought—corn pulling, cotton picking, bean scratching, etc. Most important of all this year it brings planning for winter crops.

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard said today at Salt Lake City that next year farmers of the U. S. A. must produce food for ourselves and 10 million Britons. This should mean to us that we can profitably grow more winter crops—barley, oats, wheat, vetch, peas and clover.

Barley —Yes. It is a crop upon which there are no area restrictions on acreage or market. It is high in human food value content and pound for pound as good livestock food as corn. We can raise it and raise it profitably—ask Mr. Jasper Dennis and Pat Smith—or we may have a little information.

Oats—Chilton County has proven what we can do with oats—But we do need to increase our acreage. In our observation this year most farms had too small an acreage in oats or other small grain compared with the size of the farms. We will write more about oats but plan now to plant more and to plant early.

Wheat—We have limitations on our wheat acreage and market but we must eat bread and there's nothing like Chilton County flour bread.

Vetch—Peas—Clovers—Pat Smith and Red Gascock have some interesting technicolor slide films made here in our county on your or your neighbor's farm showing very strongly the value of these indispensable cover crops. Chilton County needs more and more Legumes.

We hope to be with you in this column every week now for a while. If you have anything you want us to say for you let us know—if we say anything you don't want us to say let us know and we will take it back. Fall is here—if we can help you in your fall planning, plowing or plotting we are, at your service.

White Dutch Clover
New Source Of Cash

In addition to producing planting seed, Alabama farmers can materially increase their cash income by producing white Dutch clover seed for sale. "A small seed patch will produce enough seed to meet the needs of the average Alabama farm," says J. C. Lowery, agronomist of the Alabama Extension Service.

Lowery also states that experience during the past three or four years shows that white Dutch clover can be made a cash crop of considerable importance in several sections of the State. Seed patches of white Dutch clover should be planted between September 1 and October 15 at the rate of five to 10 pounds per acre on land turned several weeks ahead of planting time. Seed should be inoculated and the land fertilized with one to three tons of lime.

In addition fifty pounds of muriate of potash and 500 pounds of superphosphate or 1000 pounds of basic slag should be applied at planting time.

Farmers Advised Save
Lots Good Cottonseed

Keep breeder cotton seed pure, advises J. T. Belue, cotton improvement specialist of the Alabama Extension Service.

"Arrange gin days, or get in touch with neighbors and gin on same days," he says.

"Plan to save enough good seed, absolutely pure, for your next year's crop and some for sale."

ABOUT TOWN

Howard Maddox, popular salesman for Polk Brothers, is getting married. The other half of the dug is Miss Easter Foshee, of Billingsley. They wish for them a long and happy married life... We don't know Miss Foshee but we do know Howard. He's one of our best friends and a steady, honest, straight-shootin' young man... and anyway, he's better than we are.

This is beside the point but while we are thinking of it, Howard sold the first Plymouth automobile in Chilton County for the years 1937-38-39 and 42.

Wonder if Charles Wade picks up recordings that he plays before the show starts each night, himself. He certainly must, for if anyone else picked them he would fire them before Saturday night... and we wouldn't take him.

Millard Lancaster made his first solo flight out at Gragg field Sunday afternoon... as is the custom he promptly had his shirt-tail amputated... and among other things he lost his usual composure and dignity.

It was after dark had fallen... dark, with only a faint shadow from the distant street light moving against the window... a man was trying to open the screen on a new bungalow on Mullins Hill... Highway patrolmen live nearby and surely this must have been a stranger to Clanton to have been so bold... the shadow worked a long time, it seems he was getting weary of the job, the screen wouldn't come out. Finally he took a long knife out of his pocket and pressed the screen, reached his hand through the opening he had made and fastened the latch. Now to get in the window, but here the would-be intruder met another obstacle, the window was locked... he paused, as though thinking for a long time. He was evidently undecided as to the next move to make... finally he left the window and searched the ground around the window for awhile... he was looking for something. He went to the back of the house... found what he was looking for and returned to the window... there was a splintering crash as Reese Mullins busted the window... Sara had lost their key and they had returned from Troy after spending the day, with no other means of getting into their home.

B. N. Studdard's Company is making extensive improvements at the plant in South Clanton, tearing down the old buildings and putting in fire-proof stuff throughout... B. N. says that they are eventually putting in six thousand dollar filling station on the front of the lot. B. N. is popular in Clanton and has made a host of friends here... his sales have been about doubled since he came here and if the Company does build there you can bet on one thing... you will get service, fair dealing and courtesy from B. N. Studdard has anything to do with it.

Mamie Parrish is at home again... after a serious operation at a Birmingham Hospital... and she's doing fine too... hope to see her at the blue shin-dig at Blue Creek Camp next Wednesday night... her old man is President of the Clanton Lions and she'll have to go to look after him... anyway we're glad Mamie is improving and wish for her the best.

JUST FOLKS—Bill Massey, who works down at Teel's Filling Station, gave a demonstration on "How Not to Ride a Motorcycle," Tuesday about noon... he started to lurch on Brenton Harris's machine and before he could turn the handlebars after he got started he was climbing the brick wall at the side of the Jim Dandy Feed Store... no casualties, however, and not much damage to the machine... Frank Callen says those seats at the country news are not only hard as rock but they push back at you... and we can vouch for it. Eunice Murrah

Chevrolet, Ford, Plymouth Dealers Get 1942 Models

Well folks, we know that Fall has arrived—the new 1942 automobiles are in town.

Mr. Polk, at Polk Brothers Motor Company has had his first allotment already and Hayes Chevrolet announces their first display Friday, (tomorrow).

(Rip) Burnett and Mr. Tom Littlejohn spent Wednesday in Atlanta and announce their formal showing to be Friday of next week. So that makes the list complete there being no other distributors in town. Of course there is the Chrysler handled by Polk Brothers and the Mercury handled by Clanton Motors.

There will be a drastic cut in production this year, cars are going to be hard to get. The local dealers are urging those who are interested in a 1942 model to come early and let themselves be known, or else they may have to wait a long time for one after they make up their minds that they are in the market.

Dr. Joe E. Edgar, recently elected President of the Clanton Kiwanis Club. Dr. Edgar, with other newly elected officers will be installed on December 31st.

Young Man! Consider Your Future

This week we closed a contract for 8,000 lines of advertising with the United States Navy—our first line of defense.

To many of you, telling you that we closed a contract for 8,000 lines of advertising doesn't mean a thing. Whether it be with Uncle Sam's Navy or John Doe. But this will mean something to you.

Never in the history of these United States has there been a greater opportunity for loyal Americans to serve their country and build their own future at the same time than right now. Today this country is engaged in an all-out effort to build a Two-Ocean Navy, the mightiest the world has ever known. Now is the time for you and me to do what we can to help Uncle Sam accomplish these ends. Starting next week the first of a series of advertisements will appear in the News. These advertisements are designed to show the people of this section what the Navy can do for their boy. Every one of them are based on facts and tell you the absolute truth about the Navy. Your son's opportunity is unlimited in this branch of the service.

Study these advertisements. Show them to your neighbors. Let's get behind this all-out campaign and put it across.

At a meeting in Montgomery this week Commander Meredith, of Birmingham, made the statement that Alabama stood at the top in Navy enlistments, and one of the reasons was that the South is the only part of the country where natives are near 100 percent American born. There are no racial entanglements. When a boy from Alabama makes out an application to join the Navy, 99 times out of a hundred they know where his mother came from, they know where his father came from—right here in the South, and his forefathers for generations. You can help, and I can help. It's going to take all of us.

Write to the Navy Navy Editor and get a booklet, "Life In The U. S. Navy" and if you are interested in joining the Navy get in touch with us here. We may be able to help you.

Red Cross Plans Membership Drive

Meeting Held At City Hall Monday Night. Reports of Committees Heard

Plans are being carefully laid for the most intensive membership drive the Clanton County chapter of American Red Cross has ever had, to begin Armistice Day and continue through Thanksgiving. In charge of the drive is Mr. J. W. (Dick) Hayes, who is working hard on getting the organization lined up for the drive.

The war emergencies have made it necessary for the quota to be raised this year, so more people will be urged to join, and those who have already been members will be urged to pay more this year.

Reports were made at the meeting Monday night of various committees, all of which were very interesting. The sewing and knitting committee, in the charge of Mrs. Grady Heflin, and Mrs. Sophia Jones, has been very active during the past year, who, with the fine assistance from the ladies over the county, have prepared and shipped thousands of garments to the war-stricken refugees of Europe. Mr. J. M. Martin has charge of the checking and shipping of these garments. No one realizes just how much work this committee is doing unless they have heard a report of (Continued on Page 8)

This Week In National Defense

The President asked Congress for nearly six billion dollars more for lend-lease materials. Lend-Lease Administrator Stettinius was given power to approve aid requests; this with other changes is expected to cut from 30 to 15 days the period between receipts of a request and actual authorization for assistance.

Mr. Roosevelt told Congress that of the original seven billion appropriated six months ago, all but $720,000,000 is "now moving through the successive stages of allocation, obligation, production and delivery." He said $246,400,000 in materials and $78,170,000 in services has been given the anti-Axis nations.

The Defense Supplies Corporation, an RFC subsidiary, contracted with AMRC Trading Corporation, a U. S. corporation owned by Russia, for the purchase of $100,000,000 of manganese, chrome, asbestos and platinum. The supplies agency arranged to pay AMRC half of the amount in advance so Russia could use the money to buy war materials here. Treasury Secretary Morgenthau similarly advanced the Soviet Union $100,000,000 in future gold deliveries to the United States.

NAVY PROTECTING SHIPS

Navy Secretary Knox told the American Legion convention the Navy is using all methods, including convoys, to protect vessels of all flags carrying aid to Britain. He said the Navy has orders to capture or destroy, by every means at their disposal, Axis controlled submarines or surface raiders in the waters between the U. S. and Iceland.

NEUTRALITY ACT Interpretation

The State Department announced that as a result of an interpretation by the Attorney General that the "United Kingdom" is only England, Wales, Scotland and North Ireland, American ships may henceforth carry war supplies and passengers to parts of the British Empire not designated by the President to be in combat areas. Under this interpretation American ships are still barred from going to France, Poland, India, the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa.

Highway Patrolmen Are Not So Busy

For the past few weeks it seems that the driving public of Chilton County have been on their good behavior. This is according to the report received by Ed Probst, Highway Patrolman stationed in this district Wednesday.

During the month of September Probst and Glass have issued warnings to eight; arrested one for no drivers license; arrested four for reckless driving; one for driving while intoxicated; and one for failure to stop at a through highway. This looks like the local officers have things well under control and speaks well for their service here.

"Freedom of Press Insures All Freedom" Governor States In Proclamation

University, Ala.—Governor Frank M. Dixon, at the request of the Alabama Press Association, has proclaimed October 1-8 as "Newspaper Week," asking Alabamians to express appreciation "for the unselfish and patriotic service" the press has rendered "in maintaining all of our freedoms."

"Freedom of the press be destroyed," the governor asserted, "and others will not long survive."

The proclamation follows:

"English speaking people, above all others, have demanded the right to be free. That demand may have first found expression at Runnymede, but, long prior to that historical occasion, the surge for liberty—liberty in its broadest sense—had burned in the hearts of Englishmen."

"When our ancestors, who were largely of English descent, formed a new government in America, that demand again found prompt and strong expression. The very first amendment (Continued to Page 8)

Emotionalism *

Under emotional urge people do many foolish things. The people of several cities have changed the name of Lindbergh thoroughfare, and are no doubt sticking out their chests and think they are being patriotic. We doubt if Lindbergh loses a wink of sleep over such foolishness.

A hundred pound contribution of scrap aluminum to the cause of defense would be worth more than changing the name of a dozen Lindbergh drives, lanes, avenues and boulevards.

Taylor Event

When Ed Taylor, of Montgomery, announces a barbecue at Narrow Lane Inn, everyone who reads about it wonders if he is going to get an invitation, and his mouth immediately becomes to "water," as he wonders and wonders.

It is silly to shoot the works again in the afternoon of September 26th, and has invited unmetten unmetten fellow Alabamians to come and help him enjoy the "fellowship" of a real barbecue together with all the trimmings—with the Little Colonel, Senators Bankhead and Hill thrown in for dessert.

Yes, we're gwine!

In this defense business there seems to be too much mouth work, and too little head and hand work.

Looks As If Graves Will Not Have Opposition

While passing along the gossip of the day the columnist might as well let it be known that in the past 10 days or two weeks the political swing toward Col. Bibb Graves which has been on evidence for nearly three years now, has gained in momentum. It is rapidly getting to the point where odds can be given that Col. Graves will not have opposition. There hasn't been a time within the last year, in the opinion of the writer, when Col Graves could have had any serious opposition develop but it looks now like there will be no opposition of any kind. By this we do not mean to say that some person won't enter his name against Col. Graves.

Judging from what leading political observers tell us and from what we can see in the county papers, the idea is continuing to grow in the minds of Alabama voters that Col. Graves is needed in the governor's chair next time because of the crisis that is world-wide and which threatens to draw the United States into a shooting war any minute. And another thing that the voters seem to have in mind is that Col. Graves is needed because in the next few years, certainly a governor to be worth anything to his people, must be in close touch with Washington and on friendly terms with the national administration. The people of Alabama know there is no man in the nation closer to President Roosevelt than Bibb Graves of Alabama with the exception of the men in the President's cabinet and a few cronies.

All of the group votes in Alabama have already gone to Graves. Education is in the bag, so is labor, so is agriculture, so are county and city officials, so are the doctors and the main, 90 per cent of the lawyers, half at least of the big mules and maybe more. All but two or three key men in Dixon's administration have long since vowed allegiance to Graves. Thousands of minor employees of the State have let Graves know they are for him. So it looks as if Graves will not have opposition. Of course there will be no serious opposition—Atticus Mullin in Montgomery Advertiser.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

In India the elephant herd will sometimes turn against an elephant and drive him from their company. This ostracized animal still has the racial instinct and when he is alone he becomes restless and dangerous. He will wander around by himself and is constantly in mischief. He will tear up the gardens and the homes of the natives and in other ways make himself a nuisance and a dread. If the herd instinct of the animal makes him to be dangerous when that instinct is not satisfied, will not the same thing take place in the heart of a human being when the instinct for social contact is not satisfied. There is no quicker way for a person to become dangerous to society, than for him to be driven out of contact with his fellowman. To ostracize any one and to shove any one away at arms length, is to create criminality in that one. We are not made to live alone.

A young couple entered their new home to begin life together. Their first agreement was to never go out of the room, if they had a difference, without first settling that disagreement. Not many days afterward they had an argument and the husband started to walk out on the young bride. She caught him at the door and with a twinkle in her eyes she said, "You remember our agreement? You are going to stay in this room until we make up." Each one started laughing and the difference was settled. The best of husbands and wives are going to have differences, and the best way to settle them is when they are first started. Any one who has any sense of humor can see the silliness of a fuss and laugh it off. Paul said, "Never let the sun go down on your wrath." Never run out on any one until you can go out with love in your heart. Madness is poison to the soul and body.

All afternoon a hard working man put down a cement walk and then left it to set up. During the night some children were playing in that locality and without thinking they ran over the soft concrete. The next morning the men came back to his work and found the foot prints in his cement. He exploded with several unprintable expressions and his wife ran out to learn the trouble. Then her husband gave her his opinion of children and paused for her reply. She replied in a quiet voice, "Deary you do not seem to like children?" Then he shouted back, "I like children in general, but I will be hanged if I like them in the concrete." That man's answer expresses the attitude of a lot of people toward children. The most of us like children in general, but we become irritated and impatient when they come before us in the concrete.

When I was pastor in Dothan, Alabama the Government put on a campaign to exterminate the rats. Men went all over the city putting out traps. Several of these unsightly things were put in my wood shed and storage room. I had to go into these places, but I did so with fear and trembling. I could do nothing with ease because I was looking all the time for those wide open jaws that were waiting to clamp hand or foot. Fear hindered me in what I had to do in those buildings. Many a time have I gone into the pulpit and I feared to declare the whole counsel of God. The guilty were sitting up and down on either side of the aisle. Then too, the big mouthed critics were sitting there to clamp down on me. It is hard work in a house where there are mouse traps ready to clamp down on a fellow when he makes an awkward step.

Not long since I was riding on a train and looking the way the train was traveling I saw a tall mountain just ahead. My train was headed into that mountainside, traveling forty miles an hour. I did not throw away my ticket and jump off that train. I sat calmly on my seat, placing my trust in the engineer. In a moment there was darkness and a mighty noise filled the coach. We were in a tunnel. With faith and trust I still sat there and rode on. The darkness and the noise lasted for over three minutes but nothing happened but the coming of light and sunshine at the other end of the tunnel. Just now it seems that we are headed toward the mountain side. To be sure dark days are ahead. We may plunge into the tunnel of warfare, but do not throw your ticket away. Trust in God and ride through the tunnel. There is sunshine and light ahead.

Newspaper Snap

The biggest newspaper snap in the country is the Congressional Record. No ads to solicit, no news to write, no bills to collect and the United States Treasury to pay the bills—Moulton Advertiser.

After getting the money from you 'name, and Tom, Dick and Harry.

ALMOST UNANIMOUS

"The organized sheriffs of the state have joined the organized city and county officials in giving endorsement to former Governor Graves. Nor are these organizations alone in their stand, for so many declarations have been made in favor of the 'Little Colonel' recently that it seems as though he might be the almost unanimous choice of the State."—Anniston Star.

Friend Jack Huie, who handles the editorial rudder of the Cullman Banner, remarks: "Mark, we can't say that we have ever reeled a hank of thread, although we have been a close observer of the silk horse industry for some years."

The eternal "yes" and "no": Consumers say prices are too high; producers say prices are too low. And so the never-ending controversy continues—like "wars and rumors of wars."

If someone, other than a friend, offers you something for nothing, your better judgment (if you have such a thing) will tell you that a selfish motive prompted the offer.

The South Is Building CONCRETE ROADS

Look at the 1939-1940 contract awards:

- 217 MILES IN MISSISSIPPI
- 115 MILES IN GEORGIA
- 229 MILES IN NORTH CAROLINA
- 119 MILES IN LOUISIANA
- 90 MILES IN KENTUCKY
- 119 MILES IN TENNESSEE

Motorists in these neighbor states are proud of their new concrete roads. Their mileage of safe, comfortable, all-weather concrete has grown steadily, while Alabama added only 11 miles in 2 years. Alabama motorists will be better served at lower cost per mile if main traveled roads are paved with concrete as in other states.

ALABAMA Shares In Benefits of Legal Beer Sales

SINCE beer was re-legalized in 1933, it has brought far-reaching economic benefits to the nation. It has aided employment, sales of farm products, manufacturing and given general business benefits estimated to exceed thirteen billion dollars. Alabama has received a generous share of these benefits.

The Nation's brewing industry spends the huge sum of $48,000,000 annually on white oak stock for barrels, much of which comes from Alabama forests. It spends millions more for coal, much of which comes from Alabama mines. It pays $1,000,000 annually in direct taxes to the State of Alabama, its counties and cities. And on the labor front last year alone it gave 7,000 jobs to Alabamians, who received wages exceeding $5,382,000.

To help safe-guard these benefits for Alabama, our Committee is cooperating closely with all law-enforcement agencies, including the ABC Board, so that beer—a beverage made of wholesome farm products—shall be sold in Alabama only under conditions as wholesome as beer itself.

Bob's Column

BY BOB OGLESBY

In the woods six miles south of Foley, Ala.

Friday, the 19th, while riding south on No. 1, numerous things impressed us about our Chilton County. These were particularly noted, knowing that the trip would pass through several Alabama counties, well known for their progress in certain farm operations. Our thoughts follow:

A well-kept peach orchard on our right just out of Clanton reminded us of that cooperating, hard-working, sincere in his efforts to further the value of Chilco peaches—Roy Roper. I knew I wouldn't see another county producing the fine quality fruit and berries that you of Chilton produce, so I had no comparison to worry further about in this line.

Even Gene Wyatt's rattlers and moccasins surpass any yet seen down here and these are supposed to be the world's largest. Gene, your display still keeps Chilton ahead.

Our next observation was what we knew already existed—a massive hay, corn and foodstuff crop. Chilton we can grow the feed for livestock; let's get the livestock—more poultry, more milk producers (it takes milk to keep that market and it is coming), more beef, more pork. The defense program is calling for poultry, eggs, dairy products, beef and fats. Let's get our share of this production.

We have much land available for pasture, and it is good land for pasture. It takes effort, yes, but what doesn't, that is of any value Citizens of Cooper territory—we saw from the train a number of good pastures in the making and large acreages of low land, ideal for pasture development. This is the time of year to plan and work on your pastures; cut that winter wood from your pastures, get your White Dutch, Dallas grass and other pasture seeds. Lime, phosphate, lime, phosphate, lime phosphate; no, (Ben) we didn't make a misprint there, we wrote it that way—lime phosphate.

Still at random on the train—watermelons, a patch of the knots left after a good season's picking came in view—another proof of your splendid work toward diversification. Let's keep it up and do more.

A field of cotton that didn't get enough work came in sight—doesn't need picking; then a fence and another field of cotton that does need picking—but no pickers.

This reminds us of our labor situation—we have the answer. If you need one, two or three men to farm your place or work with you, see us.

Speaking of cotton, doesn't it feel good to get $1000.00 plus for dat boll and dem seed again?

We observed with keen interest Dewey Rockett's work in spacing his timber, thinking out and planning his crop. Chilton diversifies again. Timber is a crop and has a place, if properly handled, on every Chilton county farm.

The corn crop still looks good and we are about to pass Chilton into our neighboring county—Autauga. Another good county, doing a good job on diversification—it pays off. We only saw one cattle feed trough as we made these observations through Chilton county. Wish we had seen more as the grass around it was the best we saw. Can you guess why? Wouldn't it be fine to have that plant food in one of your fields next year? You have the corn to produce and a profit in some fat steers and hogs by next Spring—put up a trough and put some white and black faces in it.

This edition of our column was started to compare our county with others we saw in this 200 mile stretch, but the things we saw in Chilton were too good to try to compare with what we saw in these other counties. And now we've consumed more than our space, but Chilton county is worth it.—BOB.

Gratefully Tells What Pow-O-Lin Did
To Relieve Suffering

Glad to Recommend Medicine That Brought Relief From Distress Of Delayed Elimination, Sluggish, Nervous, Let-Down Miserable Feeling.

MRS. W. D. MORRIS

Mrs. W. D. Morris has been a resident of Selma for 22 years and is well and favorably known by a large number of friends. She is happy to tell about POW-O-LIN, for she wants all her friends and neighbors to know about this great medicine that brought such blessed relief and made her feel like a different woman. Mrs. Morris says: "Before taking POW-O-LIN, I spent many miserable days from a let-down, sluggish, fatigued, all-in feeling. My back would nearly kill me and I felt weak and exhausted at the least exertion. I have taken just one bottle of POW-O-LIN—and, I want to tell you, it is grand. Before I had taken half of the bottle, I felt so refreshed, so relieved, I could hardly believe it. I can eat the foods I like and not fear indigestion and gas pains that usually followed every meal. I feel fine, thanks to POW-O-LIN and the relief, pleasant sleep and happier outlook on life it brought to me is a blessing. My husband and son have taken POW-O-LIN, too. They are as enthusiastic about it as I am."

Pow-o-lin is extracted from roots, herbs, barks. It is an effective laxative for the relief of distress as described by happy Mrs. Morris, when due to delayed bowel elimination. Pow-o-lin is sold and recommended by Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton; Alred Drug Co., Clanton; Wyatt Drug Co., Thorsby, Ala.; and Wright Drug Co., Thorsby, Ala.

MISS FRANCES STROCK MR.

PHILIP MITCHELL ARE WED

Miss Frances Strock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Strock, of Verbena, became the bride of Mr. Philip Fitzpatrick Mitchell at the Baptist Church on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock, Sept. 17. Mr. Mitchell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Mitchell, of Montgomery. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. G. Hastings, uncle of the bridegroom.

The altar was banked with ferns, palms, and other greenery interspersed with tall baskets of white gladioli and tuberoses. Candelabra holding cathedral candles illuminated the setting. A mirrored background reflected the very impressive ceremony.

The nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Martha Gordon, pianist, Mrs. Copeland DuBose and Mr. Paul Cowan, vocalists. William DuBose lighted the candles.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a model of white slipper satin. Her long paneled bodice with accented fullness at each side featured the sweetheart neckline. She wore a stately train with veil of illusion and pointed pearl tiana. She wore a string of pearls, gift from the groom, and carried an arm bouquet of gladioli, tuberoses and button chrysanthemums.

Miss Evelyn Caffey, of Verbena, Mrs. Evelyn Foshee, of Billingsley, and Mrs. Robert Beason, of Birmingham, served as attendants. Their gowns were all of identical lines, but of varying autumn hues. Each wore a necklace which matched her individual dress, all of which were gifts from the bride. They carried arm bouquets of gladioli in matching shades and tied with contrasting colors. Louise Murray acted as flower girl.

The bridegroom was accompanied by Mr. James Tillery, of Valparaiso, Fla., as best man. Mr. Byrd Mitchell, brother of the groom, Mr. McGowan Mitchell, cousin of the groom, both from Montgomery, and Mr. Charles Deason, of Birmingham, served as ushers.

Following the ceremony the bridal party, close friends and relatives were entertained at a reception in the Strock home. The receiving rooms were tastefully decorated with an array of flowers. A three-tier wedding cake with miniature bride and groom adorned the lace covered dining table.

After a wedding trip to the Smoky Mountains, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell will be at home to their many friends at 204 Panama Street, Montgomery, Ala.

Among the courtesies extended the bride was a luncheon given by Miss Evelyn Caffey, of Verbena. The guests at this lovely affair were attendants and close friends. Following the wedding rehearsal on Tuesday evening the bridal party was entertained by Mrs. Copeland DuBose. The DuBose home was lovely in its profusion of fall flowers and ferns. The bridal motif was carried out in the delicious refreshments served to the party.

CIRCLE ONE MET

Circle One of Clanton Baptist Church met last Monday at the home of Mrs. John Mullins, with 10 members present. The meeting was called to order by the Chairman, Mrs. W. C. Golden, having the group sing the hymn "More About Jesus," after which she gave the devotionals. Others taking part on the program were Mrs. R. M. Tucker, giving an article on "Overcoming Handicaps," in China and Mrs. John Tatum gave an article on "Chinese Baptist Youth." Following the program business was discussed, reports brought up to date and the meeting was dismissed with the Lord's Prayer, after which sandwiches and cocoaola was served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Murrah wish to announce the marriage of their daughter, Eunice Juanel, to Robert Lee Hagin, of Baton Rouge, La., on Monday Sept. 22. The couple were married at noon, Monday in the presence of Clanton. The bride will remain in Clanton for a while with her parents and then she will go to Louisiana, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Carl Goslon and little son of Mobile, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Eubanks last week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Tucker attended the football game in Montgomery, Friday night.

Leroy Martin attended a Red Cross meeting in Montgomery Wednesday.

The Homemakers class held their monthly business and social meeting last Friday at the home of Mrs. J. Lee Smith. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Rip Burnett, acting president, and Mrs. Luther Little gave the devotionals. A piano solo by Miss Helen Parrish and two vocal numbers by Miss Kathryn Bryan were very much enjoyed, after which a great deal of business was attended to and officers for next year elected as follows: President, Mrs. Luther Little, 1st vice-president, Mrs. Dick Hayes, 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Jimmie Bell, 3rd vice-president, Mrs. Grady Hefflin and Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. O. W. Miller. The meeting was then dismissed with prayer by Mrs. O. A. Davis, and those present retired to the lawn for a delightful social hour and refreshments served by the hostesses.

Mrs. W. L. Mullins returned home from Hubbard's Hospital Thursday and is doing nicely.

Eric Hart, a past citizen of Clanton, was in town Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Harris are the proud parents of a baby girl whom they have named Julia Frances.

Here's a tip from a girl who knows!

Unique cleaning service removes grit, lubricates fabric fibers

Sell, perspiration, film, and abrasive grit particles are thoroughly, but gently removed by our Sanitone dry cleaning. The laboratory-developed Sanitone process not only cleans extra thoroughly, but also lubricates the fibers, and restores original softness to texture.

Your clothes will not only look better, but actually wear longer if you send them to us regularly for Sanitone cleaning service.

MISS BARBER APPOINTED BETTER HOMES CHAIRMAN

Miss Mattie Jo Barber of Clanton, has been appointed Better Homes Chairman for Chilton County for 1941-42, according to an announcement just made by the national office of Better Homes in America located on the Purdue University campus. This is a re-appointment, Miss Barber having served in the same capacity last year.

As chairman for Chilton County, Miss Barber will direct the county activities of the national organization which was launched in 1922 by Mrs. William Brown Meloney of New York City and organized on a national basis in 1923 with the Honorable Herbert Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce, as president, and headquarters in Washington, D. C. Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur became president in 1929, and in 1932 the national office was moved to New York City. Largely due to the pioneering efforts of Purdue University in housing research, headquarters were transferred to the Purdue campus in 1935, at which time Dr. Edward C. Elliott of Purdue was named president. Miss Etna McGaugh is State Chairman for Alabama.

The objectives of the organization are to emphasize the importance to the home in national and community life, to encourage thrift for home ownership, and to provide helpful suggestions regarding the selection and building of the home, along with its equipment and management. Through the medium of exhibits, lectures, demonstrations, and contest, planned by the local, county and state chairmen, an effort is made to develop an appreciation of the kind of living possible in the average American home and to place in the hands of the average citizen practical applications of the best available knowledge for making the home a better place in which to live.

The national office provides an agency for the coordination of the activities of the chairmen and for the distribution of information. In general, the specific program for each individual community is planned and directed by a chairman chosen from the community, who works with the co-operation and advice of county, state, and national offices.

ALA. WEEKLY CROP REPORT

Some local showers occurred at the beginning of the week, but none thereafter. The outstanding features were sunny, warm days and moderately cool nights. These conditions were favorable for harvesting operations, but pastures and gardens need moisture and the soil is too dry in most sections to permit farmers to begin their plowing for winter crops.

There has been little or no change in the outlook of corn during the past week. A crop better than average is in prospect in most sections of the State except in southwest counties where the crop is reported as only fair. Hay prospects are still reported as good. Continued fair weather has been favorable for harvesting the crop and quality is excellent.

The peanut crop is reported as fair to good. Harvesting is underway in southeast Alabama with better than average yields in prospect. With prevailing prices, income from this source will be much greater than in previous years. Dry weather has caused some deterioration in the sweetpotato crop, however, prospects are still reported as fair to good. Harvesting has begun in Mobile and Baldwin Counties.

Cotton picking is in full swing in all parts of the State. Weather for the past week has been favorable for rapid harvesting and in the south half picking is far advanced where sufficient labor was obtainable. The cotton is reported as fair to good in the Tennessee Valley and Sand Mountain areas; in other sections as poor to fair with some reports very poor.

Lowland pastures are reported in fair to good condition and affording average grazing for the season. Upland pastures, however, need rain. Livestock continues in good condition. Little or no disease is present in any part of the State.

CHRYSLERS FOR 1942 SHOW "THUNDERBOLT" INFLUENCE

Performance, appearance, economy and longevity all have been improved in the new Chrysler line. Important fundamental changes in design, plus a very large number of refinements have brought this about. The new models strongly show the influence of the "Thunder-bolt," which Chrysler brought out last fall and which has been given the stamp of approval by some six and a half million persons who have seen it in dealers' showrooms and in parades, at football games, and elsewhere that large crowds gather. The "Thunder-bolt," called by Chrysler the "car of the future" because of its advanced aero-dynamic lines, bequeaths to the current production cars much of its modernistic appearance, particularly in the front-end treatment. The result is that the 1942 line has individuality and "personality" of an entirely new type, instead of following previously accepted trends.

MARKETING FARM PRODUCTS STRESSED AT MEETING

The Clanton managers group of the Alabama Chain Stores Council, met in the auditorium of the city hall on Tuesday evening with several visitors present.

A film was shown by C. S. Keller, managing director of the Alabama Chain Stores Council, entitled, "Practical Farm Relief." This film revealed in an impressive manner how the food chain stores are helping to solve the farm problems by buying surplus farm commodities.

Cecil Ramsey, manager of the local A. & P. store presided at the meeting. He introduced L. E. Diefenderfer who spoke on local farm problems, stating that Chilton County needs to produce in quantity, but stressed the importance of quality, if its farmers expect to get the best prices.

Roy Roper, one of Chilton County's best farmers, stressed quality product and quality pack and affirmed that this state needs compulsory grading laws.

F. J. Callen, President of the Peoples Savings Bank, also emphasized the importance of farmers grading and packing their products carefully.

M. G. Glasscock, assistant county agent, mentioned different occasions in which the food chains had come to the rescue of Chilton County farmers.

R. M. Tucker, Editor and Publisher of the Chilton County News, was present and commented on the work that the council is doing in the state.

Nutrition Vital To Defense Effort

Nutrition—or Better Diets for a Stronger People—has become one of the most important sectors of the "Food for Defense" campaign of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, according to Martha Griffin, Home Supervisor of Chilton County for the Farm Security Administration.

With a nutrition unit organized in nearly every county in the nation, the Farm Security Administration is pledged to take part in the program, and will work in Chilton County in cooperation with other agencies.

Regional staff members of FSA in (Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida) have outlined the special part of FSA in the program as including:

1. To increase the consumption of "yellow" vegetables by 100 per cent.
2. To change old and inherited food habits.
3. To induce the use of eggs, milk and vegetables and other "protective" foods.
4. To supplement diets with foods to which farm families are accustomed but which are not used with best effects.
5. To work not only for production but distribution, education and bridging the gap between low incomes and needs.
6. To link diet necessities with fundamental needs like longer tenure of land which will develop pastures, soil enrichment and improvement of living conditions generally.

Farm Security families will be urged to grow wheat for home use, where it is practicable. In most counties of the region, garden seed has been bought for the families through cooperative effort, and new emphasis is placed on raising and canning vegetables. Extension of the school lunch program also will be sought as a big factor in better nutrition.

"Every effort will be made," said Mrs. Griffin, "to enrich the diets of the families on our program."

"Although this campaign has become a national movement, we feel that a special obligation rests upon the Farm Security Administration."

"We shall work to see that diets of FSA families measure up to the nutritional 'Gold Standard,' which includes: One pint of milk a day for an adult and more for a child; a serving of meat; one egg, two vegetables."

Protect Turnip Greens

If aphids (lice) bother turnip greens this fall they can be controlled by weekly applications of derris containing 75 per cent rotenone in the form of a dust, says W. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist, Auburn.

Rural Newspaper Is Typically American

(By Wright A. Patterson)

The rural newspaper is a typical American institution. It has been that throughout our history. Rural newspapers and their adventurous editors were numbered among the trail blazers that peopled the nation from the Alleghenies to the Pacific coast. They aided materially in building our towns and cities. Collectively, they have had, I believe still have, a greater influence on sane American thinking than any other class of publications.

Individually, the rural newspaper, daily or weekly, is an institution in each community in which it is published. It is the steering wheel that directs the activities of the community, and the carburetor that ignites the spark of energy and productivity. It makes people of the community—of the town and surrounding farms—a homogeneous whole. It causes people of the farms to think of the town as their town, their market place, their social and cultural center, and it attracts them to the town.

In many ways the rural newspaper promotes the community it serves. It encourages better merchandising and better stocks for the benefit of town and farm patrons, and encourages patronage of local merchants by those living in the community and on the surrounding farms. It supports the schools, churches, clubs, whatever makes for cultural growth and social enjoyment. It does these things week after week and year after year, without any blare of trumpets and without expectation of commendation.

Individually, rural newspapers are serving more than 18,000 American communities. Their collective effort and influence makes of us a better, stronger, more prosperous, more cultured nation. Through them will be preserved that philosophy of government that has given us our American way of life. Collectively they speak for more than one-half the people of the nation. Individually, each is the voice, the eyes and ears of the community it serves.

The rural newspaper is an institution that deserves well of the people of the nation as a whole, and each one is deserving of, and entitled to the consideration and support of people of its community. It is deserving of that not only for the brief period of Newspaper Week, but throughout all of each and every year. It is their worthy representative.

THE SMOKY YEARS

By ALAN LE MAY

W.N.U. Release

Dusty King and Lew Gordon had built up a vast string of ranches in the West. King was killed by his powerful and unscrupulous competitor, Ben Thorpe, and Roper, King's adopted son, was determined to avenge his death in spite of the opposition.

CHAPTER XVII

Shoshone Wilce, riding with Jody Gordon through the same hundred-mile snow which screened Bill Roper and Rex Long in their raid on the little Dry, found himself the most bewildered and the most unhappy of men.

He could have refused to guide Jody Gordon to Bill Roper's rendezvous; he thought it improbable that Jody Gordon would have been able to locate the rendezvous alone. But whether she found it, or merely got herself lost, Shoshone Wilce would have been answerable to Bill Roper for leaving her to attempt the ride alone.

The alternative he had chosen offered no greater prospect for a long and peaceful life, but it was a prospect as wild as the life of a desperado, and the disappearance of his daughter; and every King-Gordon cowboy in the country would be scouring the brakes after Shoshone's disappearance.

Jody believed now that the split between Lew Gordon and Bill Roper was the basis of inconceivable disaster—not only immediate and personal, but far-reaching in its effects to the cow country. Together, those two very different cattlemen could have beaten Thorpe, and consolidated the King-Gordon empire.

Separated, Lew Gordon and Bill Roper were mutually destructive; Lew Gordon was probably right that Bill Roper's savage attacks upon the Thorpe interests were the cause of the Thorpe's heavy losses upon King-Gordon. And even though Roper might bring down Ben Thorpe in the end, which still seemed incredible, he could never profit by the victory, even if he lived. Unless Gordon and Roper could be reconciled, Roper would in the end become just one more outlawed cowboy whose trails could have no meaning, and only one end.

Jody Gordon had one other motive in attempting the all but hopeless reconciliation. She believed her father's life to be in the sharpest danger. Bill Roper, an even harder man than the Thorpe, was a man who had trained him, would automatically take those precautions that would safeguard her father's life, if once they could be brought to work together again.

But the first move toward reconciliation must come from Bill Roper himself. If she could persuade Roper to this, there was a bare possibility that she could also manage her father.

It was a forlorn hope; but, as she saw it, of such vital importance that it could no longer be ignored. It was as if events that would alter the history of the cow country lay in her persuasion of these two stubborn men. She rode doggedly now, with set face, trusting Shoshone to find the way.

They rode until after midnight, blind, as far as Jody could see, in the wet fall of the snow. They threw down their bedrolls then in the shelter of stunted snow-laden trees, and Shoshone Wilce measured grain for the horses upon his own poncho.

INSTALLMENT 12
THE STORY SO FAR:
of his sweetheart, Jody Gordon, and her father. After wiping Thorpe out of Texas, Roper conducted a great raid upon the vast herds on Thorpe's Montana ranches. Told that Jody had disappeared, he left his men and set out for the home of Lew Gordon, a loved herself to be led into the little cabin at which she had hoped to find Bill Roper.

The shock in which she now found herself was a cramped makeshift, intended only as a shelter for cowboys, storm-caught while riding the northern limits of the Fork Creek range. A single lantern hung from a roof pole; and now, by its yellow light the two men studied her with an unconcealed amazement.

"By God," said the older of the two, "it's a girl, all right!"
The other man, tall enough so that the door at his back looked small, was much the younger of the two. His face was prematurely hard-cut—the face of a man who even in youth had learned an effectiveness in action upon which he could well rely. He spoke sharply.

"Jim— you know who this is? That's a girl!"
"Good Lord Almighty! I believe you're right!"
"It's her, sure enough!"
"So you know me?" Jody said.
"I seen you once in Ogalla, and another time in Bandera."

The older man shifted his eyes to his partner. "Queerest turn of the cards," he said, "I ever seen in all my born days!"
The younger man's voice was sharp and strained. "Jim, we got to get her out of here, and get her out quick!"

The man called Jim appeared to consider intently, his eyes still on the other's face. "I ain't so sure," he said after a moment.
"You talk like a fool," the younger man snapped at his superior. "Look what we got! We got the law back of us. We got the most powerful cowboy in the West back of us. We got one of the biggest rewards that's ever been hung up, right ready to drop into our hands. We've located Roper's main shanghai, after working on it for months. We got all the odds in the world in our favor—and here comes this girl and bogs the whole works!"

"Just how do you figure she bogs it?"
"We got every chance of nailing our man, right here, any hour now. But don't ever think we'll nail him without a hell of a sharp fight. Suppose this girl gets hurt in this fight, or gets loose and loses herself, or runs out of luck some other way? The quicker we get her out of here—"

"Can't!"
"What's the reason we can't?"
"We got the bear by the tail. She's dynamite so long as she's here. I grant you that. But what if we leave her go? She warns Roper off. Then where are we?"
The younger man's eyes were keen with restless excitement.

"Jim—you figure she come to meet Bill Roper here?"
"She didn't come here by accident," Leathers said with conviction, "more than you or me. And she sure didn't come here to throw in with us."
A swift panic struck Jody with the shock of a blow in the face. If Jim Leathers wished, he could hold her here—literally as bait with which to draw the man whom it was his mission to kill. If Shoshone Wilce had got clear, and could reach Roper, Roper would certainly attack as soon as the best ponies of the raiders could bring him. Or, failing to locate Roper, Shoshone Wilce might even bring her father—and what orders Jim Leathers had in regard to Lew Gordon she could only surmise.

"I'm getting sick of this," Jody told Jim Leathers. "You owe me a horse; there can't possibly be any argument about that. I'll have to ask you to rope a pony and bring him to my saddle—and I'll be on my way!"
Slowly Leathers shook his head. "You won't give me a pony?"
"I'm afraid—you'll have to wait until your friends come, lady."

For Jody Gordon's white flash of anger there was no outlet whatever. She turned away to hide from them the furious tears that sprang into her eyes. She took off her sheepskin coat and flung it on the table, for the room was very hot; but because fingered dressers were still chilled to the bone she pulled off her gloves, tucked them in her belt, and went to the shallow fireplace to hold out her hands to the flames.

They went on talking now in the drawing, well-considered speech of the trail, long pauses marking every interchange. Whatever else they might think of her, they evidently did not consider that she implied any necessity to secrecy.

"If Roper is on his way," the younger rider said thoughtfully, "and this side rider of hers has got loose and meets him, so that Roper knows what he's up against—that might be kind of bad medicine, Jim. If he's got his war-riders with him—"

"I've missed hooking up with Roper twenty times when I thought I had him," Leathers said. "I'd sooner meet up with him on any terms, than carry back the word that I fell down."

stopped again for a full minute; then ten paces more.

Jody said, "What in the world—"

Wilce seized her arm and silenced her with a quick shake. Then suddenly—

An inarticulate oath snarled in Shoshone's throat; he snatched at Jody's rein, whirling her pony. His own horse came straight up on its hind legs as he spun it at close quarters.

"Get going!" he said between his teeth; and brought his roan down across her pony's flank in a snapping cut that made it plunge ahead. She heard the rip of steel on leather as Shoshone's gun came out. Then the silence of the night exploded into happenings that were incredible.

Two guns smashed out in a swift flurry of detonation. A queer whistling grunt was knocked out of Jody's horse. It dropped from under her, and the ground struck upward with stunning violence.

For a moment Jody Gordon lay motionless, her cheek buried in the cool snow. She was aware of further firing, and more than one running horse, and she tasted blood from a cut lip; but at first she was unable to think.

SAVE EVERY POSSIBLE KUDZU SEED FOR NEXT YEAR'S CROP

Kudzu—the magic vine of Alabama agriculture will be maturing seeds in the near future and all hands on the farm are urged by A. W. Jones, State AAA administrator, to help in saving every seed possible. He points out the great need for kudzu on every farm in the State, telling of its importance from a livestock, soil building, and erosion resisting standpoint. With kudzu seed selling for more than one dollar a pound and with chances that seed scarcity will force prices even higher it will pay farmers to gather all the seeds possible. One pound of kudzu seed will give two to six thousand plants. Six pounds of pods yield one pound of seed. Kudzu growing in the fields, along roads, and around the house should furnish seed to grow enough plants to cover thousands of acres, added Jones.

challenge the submarine and provide a new bridge to the free nations of the world." The vessel is so small it can be built in inland yards in two months. It will carry an anti-aircraft battery, be manned by only a few men, make 12 knots and be capable of a 5,000 mile voyage.

The Maritime Commission took over ships of the Alcoa line after striking sailors refused to arbitrate their regular runs. The Commission announced that on September 1, 104 ships had been completed of a total 788 being built for all purposes under the Commission's auspices. The announcement said 14 ships will be launched September 27 in joint ceremonies on the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts.

PRODUCTION

OPM Director Knudsen, speaking on the radio, said "I would like to see every American decide to give... an extra hour or a extra half hour or even an extra fifteen minutes to his job from now on... If we get the work we'll get the guns..." The War Department reported all 10 machine-gun plants required for present estimated needs are now in operation and machine gun production has increased 460 per cent, since August, 1940.

ARMY MORALE

Army Chief of Staff Marshall told the American Legion National convention at Milwaukee there is a difference between "free discussion" and "destructive measures to promote discontent and destroy confidence in the Army." He said "I submit... the impossibility of developing an efficient army if decisions which are purely military in nature are continuously subjected to investigation, cross-examination, debate, ridicule and public discussion by pressure groups, or by individuals with only a superficial knowledge of military matters, or of the actual facts in the particular case. Don't tear down what you are striving so hard to build up... this country must have the best Army in the world."

DEFENSE HOUSING PRIORITIES

OPM Priorities Director Nelson announced several hundred building materials such as steel, iron, nails, bolts, electrical fixtures, ranges, etc. have been placed on a "defense housing critical list." Priorities on them will be given to builders constructing 200,000 privately-financed housing units in 275 defense areas of the U. S. and territories. Mr. Nelson said the plan will apply to financed homes selling for up to $50,000 or retiring for not more than $60 a month. First preference will be given to homes under construction on September 1 and for remodeling and rehabilitation work and then for new homes for rent and new homes to be sold.

OIL, GASOLINE

Defense Oil Coordinator Ickes said gasoline restrictions will not be lifted. Mr. Ickes said in the face of a 12-1-2 per cent drop in gasoline stocks compared to this time last year, there is a demand of 11 per cent more than last year. Deliveries to East coast filling stations were 11.4 per cent lower last week than the week before, and will have to be cut more, he said, unless the pipeline is built from Texas to New Jersey.

30-DAY MINE TRUCE

Defense Meditation Board Chairman Davis announced an agreement with the United Mine Workers of America to reopen strike-bound "captive" mines for a period of 30 days beginning September 22. The agreement requires a three-day written notice by either side before operations can be halted. Negotiations on the union shop demand which led to the strike will be resumed September 24. The U. S. Conciliation Service announced settlement of 37 labor disputes.

PRIORITY UNEMPLOYMENT

OPM Associate Director Hillman announced employers in Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, Pa., have agreed to hire 1,335 power-machine operators and 200 assistants from among the 3,500 workers forced out of employment in those two areas by the silk shortage. Mr. Hillman also announced a broad "model" program of State and local cooperation with OPM to alleviate unemployment in the silk, automobile and rubber industries in New Jersey.

PRICES

A. C. Hoffman of the OPA Food Section, speaking in Philadelphia, said farm prices have risen more than 49 per cent since the outbreak of the war and stand now at 97 per cent of parity in terms of things farmers buy. Labor Secretary Perkins said living costs at August 15 this year were 7.5 per cent more than two years ago.

NURSES

Surgeon General Magee announced more than 10,000 nurses are needed for the Army Nurse Corps, including 4,000 Reserve nurses to care for men still to be inducted this year and an equal number to replace the estimated 40 per cent who will request discharge at the end of their one year enlistments. Information can be obtained from the War Department or the Red Cross, Washington, D. C.

TAXATION

Congress passed and sent to the White House the $3,533,400,000 tax bill for 1941, increasing the number of taxpayers by an estimated 2,275,000 persons. The bill increases corporation surtaxes and lowers present individual exemptions from $2,000 to $1,500 for married persons and from $800 to $750 for single taxpayers.

RED CROSS

their activities. Too much praise cannot be accorded them.

Another interesting report was made by LeRoy Martin, chairman of Home Service for the soldiers in camp. Mr. Martin is also doing a fine job in this respect.

Mrs. Beatrice Vines, national field representative of the Red Cross, was present and made an inspiring talk. Mrs. Vines is full of enthusiasm for the immediate future of the organization, and she expressed her pleasure at what Chilton county has done and is doing.

The readers of this paper will be hearing more and more of the membership drive from time to time. Let us all get behind the Red Cross, as we have always done—except more so this time.

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

Our idea of a "good sport" is Holloman Bickerstaff Pittman... every body calls him "Pitt", but we call him Bickerstaff for short... Bickerstaff has a bad habit of going around slapping his friends on the back when he greeted them... this got a little old, Bickerstaff being as strong as a young bull and hitting just about as hard as a young bull would... the fellows around town last Saturday night decided to cure him of this habit... they did... and no one else in the world would have been able to make it like Bickerstaff... he admitted that he was cured when he got none slapping him on the back, but he was still grinning and he certainly proved that he had what a lot of folks call... good sportsmanship.

Here and there—saw Vernon Klinger in town over the week-end didn't see Nell but pretty sure that she was there... Los Thompson celebrated the 15th anniversary of Clanton Laundry this month... guess he celebrated, the laundry is going into its 16th year... Virginia Ware is going to get married... let's see we believe the lucky guy will be Morris Johnson... lucky, lucky Morris... these uniforms gets 'um... number of the boys at home from the army over the week end, Charlie White among them... we mention Charlie because you hear him further and longer than the others... have you ever sat and watched Charlie dance... we wish we enjoyed it like he does.

Believe it or not... someone got lost in Clanton... Monday night we were standing in front of the News office and a well dressed gentleman walked up to us and asked if we could show him the way to his Hotel... we asked him which Hotel and he answered that he did not know which Hotel... he had left the Cafe after eating supper (or dinner) and evidently turned north instead of south and he was lost... after further questioning we learned that he could see the Wadesonian Theatre sign from in front of the Hotel at which he was staying and we deduced that it must be the Exchange so we steered him to that Hotel... we hope it was right... we never will know.

If the City Council wants to do something really worth while why don't they pass an ordinance prohibiting cars from passing between the first light at the north end of town to the last light at Burdette's Service Station. There are motorists, most of it through traffic, that pass in heart of town at four and fifty miles per hour... it is a thousand wonders that someone has not been killed or seriously hurt...

Consider the editor! A child is born to the wife of a merchant in the town. The physician getteth ten plunks. The editor writeth a stick and a half and telleth the multitude that the child tipped the beam at ten pounds. Yea, he lieth even as a centurian. And the proud father giveth him a Cremona.

Behold the young one growth up and gradueth. And the editor putteth into his paper a swell notice. He telleth of the wisdom of the young woman and her exceeding comeliness. Like unto the Roses of Sharon is she, and her gown is dressed up to beat the land. And the dress maker getteth two score and ten iron men. And the editor getteth a note of thanks from the sweet girl graduate.

The youth of the town fall down and worship. She picketh one and he, she picketh a lemon. But the editor calleth him one of our prominent young men and getteth away with it. And they send unto the editor a bid to the wedding and lo, the bids are fashioned in a far city. Flowery and long is the notice the editor printeth. The minister getteth ten bones. The groom standeth the editor off for a 12-months' subscription.

All flesh is as grass and in time wither is gathered unto the soil. The minister getteth his bit. The editor printeth a death notice, two columns of obituary, three lodge notices, a

FSA Urges Planting Of Cover Crops

Low-income farmers in Clanton County are being pointed to a way by which their fertilizer bills may be cut in half.

Marvin Durbin, farm supervisor for the Farm Security Administration in Clanton County, said today that the fall planting season brings opportunity to provide for the land some of the elements of commercial fertilizer, particularly nitrogen, and that this course is being urged upon all Clanton County farmers on the FSA program.

The idea, said Mr. Durbin, is to plant nitrogenous cover crops, like vetch, Austrian peas, and crimson clover.

"Studies by the Farm Security specialists," he said, "have shown us that families on the FSA program spend for fertilizer more than for the combined items of clothing, education, church obligations and self-improvement."

"The budget of our families in Region Five (Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida) include a total of five and a half million dollars a year for fertilizer. Nearly half of commercial fertilizer is nitrogen, so that our families, all of whom are low-income farmers who need essentially better living standards, spend about two and a half million dollars for this nitrogen, much of which they could provide for themselves simply by planting cover crops."

"We are trying to urge upon these families, therefore, to grow their own fertilizer—not only to provide a large help the land and to increase their margin for their own living, but to crop yields, in some cases of cotton (Continued on Page 6)

cubit of poetry and a card of thanks. And he forgetteth to read proof on the head and the darning thing cometh out "Gone to Her Last Roofing Place." And all that are in the editor with the deceased jumpeth on the editor with exceeding great jumps, and they pulleth out their ads and cancellleth their subscriptions and they swing the hammer into the third and the fourth generations.

Navy Offers Wonderful Opportunity To Local Young Men To Forge Ahead

News Prepared To Furnish Information And Render All Help To Prospective Recruits

At the suggestion of Secretary of Navy Knox, R. M. Tucker of Chilton County News has been made Navy Editor, to help the Navy in giving ambitious local young men information about the opportunities the "Two-Ocean Navy" offers them for technical training and advancement as they serve their country in its emergency.

According to an announcement made public in Washington, a limited number of additional men between the ages of 17 and 50 will be given a chance, by enlistment in the Navy or Naval Reserve, to get to the top, with big pay, in jobs which by their aptitude and as a result of examination they show themselves fitted, from among nearly 50 different trades and vocations. These include such callings as aviation machinist, dental technician, photographer, diesel engineer, radio technician, electrician, welder, storekeeper, and baker. Enlisted men may also qualify for commissions as officers.

Beginning this week, the Navy plans

WHO SAYS IT PAYS TO MAKE HAY WHILE THE SUN SHINES.

Dr. W. L. Parrish made hay while the sun shone—someone made off with said hay while the sun was down. Dr. Parrish keeps the local airport mowed and in exchange receives what hay he cuts as payment.

Several weeks ago he cut the grass and haled it up neatly and stacked it in the airport barn ready to move to his home. When he went to get his hay he found that someone had anticipated him and had moved out 77 bales. The doctor says this would amount to about two tons and is not an inconsequential loss.

So far he has no idea in what direction his hay was moved but he is keeping his Sherlock Holmes faculties whetted to a keen edge and hopes soon to solve the mystery of the missing hay.

LIST OF SELECTED MEN FROM LOCAL BOARD NO 2

The following named men have been selected for induction by this board.

They shall report to this Local Board at Clanton, Alabama at 8:45 a. m. on October 10, 1941; whereupon they shall be sent to an induction station of the United States Army at 530 Lanza Clayton Price 615 E. C. Martin V-616 Robert Mims 620 James Luther Williams 635 Arthur Edward Ellison for a limited time to accept new qualified men for training. These men will be sent to one of four Naval Training Stations and may have a chance to go to a Navy Trade School even before assignment to the fleet. During this period they will be given regular Navy pay and the Navy's free schooling is valued at hundreds of dollars. "Never in the history of the United States has there been greater opportunity for loyal young Americans to serve their country and build their futures than right now," said Secretary Knox.

In outlining the many advantages offered by enlistment in the United States Navy, it is possible for a bright young man to increase his pay seven times during his first enlistment and he can earn as much as $126 a month. This monthly figure is actually worth much more when it is remembered that the man has few living expenses and is provided with the finest of medical and dental care.

Youngstown, Dayton and Columbus, O., Indianapolis, Ind., Rochester and Albany, N. Y., Portland, Me., Springfield, Ill., Springfield, Mass., Trenton, N. J., Wichita, Kan., and Spokane, Washington. Existing offices at Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre and Allentown, Pa., will be enlarged and the present 39 offices of the abolished Defense Contact Service will continue to operate he said.

Mr. Odum asked 56 major defense contractors to appoint "farming out" directors to cooperate in spreading defense contracts with five aluminum war companies forced to abandon civilian production by shortages and priorities. Contracts such as these to avoid community hardship can be negotiated up to 15 per cent above minimum prices, performance bonds can be waived and bid splits allowed to enable pools of small firms to obtain contracts for "bite and pieces."

ARMY PREPAREDNESS STATUS

Assistant War Secretary McCloy, speaking in Jackson, Mich., said the U. S. has an army and an air force "in the sense that one is in process of production...Some of its elements are prepared to meet any foe...Yet that army is just becoming an army."

He said the army has its full amount of the fundamental weapons—rifles, bayonets, machine guns, artillery, grenades—but does not have its full equipment of light and medium tanks, anti-tank and anti-aircraft weapons. He said there is sufficient equipment for training but heavy production will not come until this winter or next spring. He said the Army has much to learn about the tank-plane and anti-tank plane combinations and "we still have a long way to go in our co-ordination between air and the ground but we are beginning in earnest in Louisiana now."

He said plane production "at this time is short not satisfactory as a result of shortages in manufacturing facilities and essential raw materials but it is coming up." He said several

U. S. planes far exceed any other in the world.

PRIORITIES

Priorities Director Nelson limited production of spare parts for passenger automobiles and light trucks for the period September 15—December 31, 1941 to 60 per cent of the number sold during the first six months of this year. SPB said it will extend to American industry assistance in obtaining repair parts.

ANTI-AXIS 'BLACK LIST'

The State Department added 300 South American firms and individuals to the original Anti-Axis "Black List" of 1800 names and deleted 65 names where corrective action had been taken since July 17. The new additions included "Air France" and "Lati," French and an Italian airline, and German agency "Transoceanic." Firms placed on the blacklist are automatically deprived of American oil and gasoline and other supplies from this country.

AGRICULTURE

Agriculture Secretary Wickard told Northeastern farm leaders and agricultural workers Britain will need between now and June 30, 1942 cheese, evaporated milk and dried skim milk that will require processing of more than 4-1/2 billion pounds of milk; a billion and a half pounds of pork and lard; about 500 million dozen eggs; 18 million pounds of poultry meat; and quantities of tobacco, vitamin-rich fruits and vegetables. He said the British need a minimum of $1,000,000 in food between now and February 28, 1942.

SPAB announced special attention will be given provision of equipment necessary for expanding dairy production to meet domestic and British requirements. The Agriculture Department said total income from farm marketing will reach $10,000,000,000 in 1941.

PRICES

Labor Secretary Perkins said food prices continued to rise during the first half of September with biggest increases in pork chops, lard, eggs, and milk. Price Administrator Henderson said eviction proceedings had been begun by "unscrupulous" landlords in various parts of the country against tenants who complained or threatened to complain of rent increases to their local Rent Committee.

INFLATION CONTROL TAXATION

The Federal Reserve Board increased reserve cash requirements of member banks by about one-seventh, to the present lawful limit. The Board said the action will not prevent credit for defense needs and all legitimate requirements.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau announced his staff has started work on legislation to limit corporation profits to six per cent of invested capital for the duration of the emergency. He said the profit motive in war ought to be eliminated entirely. He said the move would also head off the inflationary trend.

Farm Credit Administration Governor Black asked a Washington meeting of leading farm lenders to prevent a speculative boom in farm real estate such as brought bankruptcy to thousands of farmers after the World War. He suggested:

(1) Basing all appraisals in connection with loans on normal values; (2) impressing present borrowers with the wisdom of using higher income available now to payment of existing debts; (3) encouraging savings to meet future needs; (4) discouraging fostering speculative increases in production without discouraging necessary shifts and increases.

SELECTIVE SERVICE

Selective Service Headquarters asked local boards to assure college students who are not expected to be called for service before the middle of the college semester they will be granted postponement until they finish the semester. Students preparing for essential defense occupations. Headquarters said, should be deferred.

New Potato Standards Effective October 10

The Department of Agriculture has announced that revised U. S. Standards for potatoes will become effective October 10.

One of the principal changes in the revised standards, says the Agricultural Marketing Service, is a reduction in the tolerance for under-size potatoes from 5 per cent to 3 per cent for lots of potatoes packed to meet a minimum size of less than 2-1/4 inches in diameter or 6 ounces in weight.

The new standards require grades except U. S. No. 2 to be free from blight instead of free from injury or free from damage by this defect. Experience has shown that blight affects with this disease shipping points very often break down and decay in transit.

Pie Eaters And Pandhandlers

There is a big difference between "political pie eaters" and "political puddin' hunters." Political pie eaters are the recipients of the legitimate jobs and other legitimate favors handed out by those elected to public office to political workers and friends who helped to elect them. Political puddin' hunters, as a rule, are professional political pandhandlers. Knowing they haven't the slightest chance of winning, they start pandhandling for funds with which to defeat the leader of the opposition—only talk usually gets the puddin' from the head of corporations who doesn't like the leader of the opposition, and from money men who nearly always think they have been discriminated against by anyone who has held a political office. A very small percentage of such pandhandled funds goes into political propaganda, but the larger part of it goes "south"—into the pockets of the "political pandhandler."

If you ever hope to see 90—don't look for it on the speedometer.

More Than 2,000 Gravesmen At The Big Barbecue

The stupendous gathering of political stalwarts from every county and community in the State, at the Ed Taylor barbecue given last Friday at Narrow Lane Inn, Montgomery, when more than a thousand political leaders of the State and another thousand citizens from every walk of life, pledged loyalty and all out support to the Little Colonel, Senators John H. Bankhead and Lister Hill leaves not a scintilla of doubt that Alabama as a whole is solidly back of this triumvirate of Statesmen and do not propose to become stampeded by longings of the political puddin' hunters, who have been hunting so diligently for that hundred thousand dollars with which to defeat Graves for Governor. Since the barbecue, everything has been so quiet in the anti-Graves camp that the State's best reporters can hardly find a news paragraph on that side of the political fence.

Murray Walker, of Jasper, likes to fish so well that he has taken a daily job of fishing at Wheeler dam—the fish to be placed in an artificial lake in Blount county.

According to officials, a man in Jefferson county—being chased by an officer—was burned to death when his car containing 150 gallons of inflammable liquor hit a tree and caught on fire.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

One cold, rainy morning I was on my way to Dothan Alabama and just as I passed through Graceville, Fla., a man thumbed vigorously for a ride. I stopped my car and he staggered in. As soon as the car door was opened I could detect the odor of whiskey and I said to him, "Friend, where are you going?" "I am on my way to Bonifay Florida," said he. Learning that he was drunk, I held out my hand so as to keep him from sitting down, and I told him that he was trying to go to Bonifay by riding in the opposite direction, and he could not travel with me. He was drunk and did not know that he was going in the wrong direction. It was to his credit that he believed what I said and stepped out of the car. The last I saw of him he was paddling his way down the road toward Bonifay. It is a fact that when a man gets drunk he loses his sense of judgment and often he is found on the wrong road when he affirms that he is on the right road. How I do wish that drinking men and women would believe me when I tell them that they are on the wrong road.

The little lady was out among her beautiful flowers and along came a lady who lived some distance away. She stopped and admired the roses, the stock, the tulips and the dahlias. She had the nerve to beg like a child for an armful of those flowers that had cost so much in work and money. If she had gone to the same expense and had worked as hard as the little lady, she too could have had all of these flowers in profusion around her home. I heard an expert flower grower say that she never gave a blooming flower to any one. She was very liberal with her young plants but refused to give any one a blooming flower. It sounds very just and fair to me to be rather slow in giving flowers to people who are too lazy to produce them. It sounds like laziness and selfishness to want other people to work and produce and then envy them what they have. If you want flowers grow them. God and the soil will help you.

A little boy found a mouse in the bath tub. The little thing was plenty frightened and would run up the side of the tub until it would reach the steep incline and then its little feet would slip like the wheel of an engine, and it would fall back into the tub. The little boy ran for his cat and flung her into the bath tub with the mouse. No sooner had the cat landed than the mouse made a bound and ran up the side of the tub and over the top and made a safe get away. All the time the mouse wanted to go over the top, but for some reason, it did not do its best until the cat was near. We see people who have a desire to do certain things and sometimes they make believe that they are doing their best. Like the mouse we may scramble and fall back, but when we have an incentive that calls into action all the power that we possess, then it is that we go over the top.

One of the most horrid forms of amusement is to frighten people. Some bad boys in the days of my childhood tied a negro boy down while he slept, using fish lines with the hooks on them. Then they screamed an alarm and the colored boy jumped to his feet and jerked the hooks into his flesh. I saw a panting dog with his flesh almost torn from his bones, after he had been frightened by a can that was tied to his tail by some mischievous boys. Near Atmore Alabama an Aviator thought to frighten some laborers in a turnip field and dived his plane so low that he took the head from the shoulder of a mother. It is nothing short of brutal amusement when any one plays a prank on man or beast. Many a child has been thrown into convulsions by some one who thought to, "Have a little fun."

An appreciative church membership gave to me a beautiful fountain pen. The stock was pearl and the pen was made of gold. It was both costly and beautiful. Since the gift became mine, I have used it often, but I have made the observation that when this pen is almost empty, the ink flows freely. It is then that I am likely to make ugly blotches on the page of paper. I know to refill the pen when the ink flows freely. Did you ever observe that people, like that fountain pen, will let their tongues run freely, when the head and heart are almost empty. They gossip, slander, lying that the head is almost empty. When people have much talk, that is a dangerous sign. When the tongue flows freely, the pages of character are sure to be soiled.

99% or BETTER

"HOW do you keep our electric service so dependable?" is a question sometimes asked by customers who marvel that interruptions to electric service each year average less than half of one per cent!

There are many reasons, including 2,471 employees who, by doing their individual jobs well, contribute to the dependability of electric service. Some of them have spent a lifetime with us, or organizations which have become a part of Alabama Power Company.

26 have served more than 30 years
219 have been with us 20 to 30 years
852 started with us 10 to 20 years ago
565 are in their fifth to tenth years of service

Engineers, builders, accountants, salesmen, clerks, stenographers, mechanics, repairmen, supervisors—all by doing their particular jobs well, help make possible that dependable electric service you expect, and get, more than 99 per cent of the time!

DEVELOP A GOOD FEED PROGRAM ON YOUR FARM

A good feed program is the basis of every good farm program and is more important now than ever before. Aside from the important fact that this country needs more feed to produce pork, milk, cheese, eggs, and meat, there are several reasons found right on the farm why you should plant more oats this fall. They are:

1. Oats are the surest and cheapest feed crop that can be grown in Alabama.
2. Oats protect the soil from erosion in winter and spring.
3. Oats can be removed in time for another crop to be grown on the same land.
4. Oats are a "labor saver" cutting down on the amount of labor usually needed to raise such feed crops as corn.
5. Oats planted before November will help meet requirements under AAA conservation plan calling for one-fourth of the cropland be planted in erosion resisting and soil conserving crops. Additional plantings above requirements can be used to substitute for pasture, terracing, and perennial legumes.

We offer these suggestions on planting oats:

1. Plant one acre for each cow, or work animal, including colt.
2. Plant September 1 to October 15, the earlier the better.
3. Plant 2 bushels of a red rust-resistant variety per acre, using seed only after they have been treated for smut with Formaldehyde.
4. Where oats follow crop which has not received as much as 500 lbs. of a mixed fertilizer per acre use 200-300 lbs. of superphosphate and 50 lbs. of potash, or 300-400 lbs. of 3-8-5 or 4-10-7 per acre at planting.
5. Graze from time plants will not pull up until about March 1.
6. Top-dress around March 1 with 100-300 lbs. of nitrate of soda or its equivalent per acre.

For further information on the above turn to pages 31 and 32 of Third Edition of Handbook of Alabama Agriculture or see or write your county agent.

For 1942—a Beautiful New

FORD

"6" OR "8"

IN THESE UNUSUAL TIMES we invite you to inspect an unusual new car—new in its beauty, its comfort, its choice of two fine 90 horsepower engines, 6 cylinders or 8.

See it and you sense at once that here is new style that will stay good for years. On a lower, wider chassis, we have designed new long, low, wide and modern lines.

Interior treatment is entirely fresh, distinctive, pleasing. The beauty of this Ford will more than hold its own in any company.

Inside, the car is big—wide across the seats, generous in knee-room, leg-room, elbow-room.

On the road this year you find the "new Ford ride" still further advanced in its softness, quietness, steadiness and all-round comfort.

At the wheel, you will find driving easier than ever. Steering, gear-shifting, action of the big and sure hydraulic brakes have all been made smoother and easier.

In quality, the car is sound to the last detail. Defense requirements have all been met without a single reduction in the basic and lasting goodness of the Ford mechanically. Some new materials have replaced old ones, usually at a greater cost to us, but in every case the new is equal to or better than the old.

If your family needs a new car, go see and drive this Ford. For what it is today and for what it will be through the years ahead, we believe that you will find in it more and better transportation for your money than you have ever found before.

COURSES GIVEN AT CHILTON COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL

Several courses for adults are now being offered at the Chilton County High School building. The only expense involved will be the cost of books and transportation.

For adults over twenty-five years of age a class in Office Practice and Typewriting and Shorthand is held from four o'clock to six o'clock on Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday of each week.

For persons from seventeen to 25 years of age registered with the NYA classes are given in Office Practice and Typewriting and Shorthand from six o'clock to eight o'clock on Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday of each week. A class in Physical Education is also given from five to six o'clock each week day from Monday to Friday inclusive.

Persons interested in any of these courses are urged to call immediately at the office of B. F. Evans at the Chilton County High School.

New List Stresses Careful Selection

Need for more careful herd-sire selection is emphasized in the U. S. Department of Agriculture's 1941 list of sires proved in dairy herd improvement associations. The list, which will soon be available to Alabama dairy farmers, shows that less than half of the 3,519 sires proved during the year ending April 1, 1940, improved milk and butterfat production in their daughters over their dams.

In dairy herd improvement association work, a bull is termed a "proven" sire when the production records of at least five of his unselected daughters have been compared with the production records of their dams, explains F. W. Burns, dairyman of the Alabama Extension Service. Such comparisons indicate whether to transmit an inheritance for high, medium, or low production to his daughters.

The 1941 proved sire list may be had by writing the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Dairy Industry, Washington.

Stopping To Think

By C. B. RIDDLE

Billy, that wonderful pet name for William, lost his sight in a football game—and only thirteen years of age. The misfortune cut deep and hard into the child's heart, but it cut deeper into the heart of the father. The sight could not be restored, but Billy could have a little world of his own in which to live and be happy, although blind.

So, father with love in his heart for his unfortunate boy, and with tools and timbers and nails, built a rustic cabin in the backyard where Billy could play, listen to the birds and the radio, too, entertain the other children of the neighborhood. With all this Billy became one of the most cheerful and happy children of the community.

There are millions of such unfortunate children in the world. Some have lost their sight. Some cannot walk. Some cannot hear. The hand of fate has been laid heavily upon them.

But all their happiness need not be snatched from them. And it won't be if thoughtful parents or others will plan something to bring sunshine into their lives—something to help ease the heavy hand of time that moves so slowly and often so heavily when affliction's weight must be borne.

From a cynic's standpoint it is a selfish world, and often there is much to confirm that belief. But there is a cure for selfishness just as there is a happier existence for unfortunate children. And one of the greatest cures for selfishness is to do something to make some unfortunate child happy.

REFUGE NEWS

Sunday School is good at this place, although there is always room for improvement.

AVERAGE FARM FAMILY NEEDS TWO MILK COWS

A farm family of five needs two good milk cows, says F. W. Burns, extension dairyman, Auburn, in order that a 12-month milk supply will be provided. One of these should freshen in the Spring and the other in the Fall.

Here's how much feed two cows require in a year's time: 30 bushels of corn, 20 bushels oats, one ton cottonseed meal, four tons hay, four acres permanent pasture, and one acre temporary grazing.

PROHIBITION MEETING IN BIRMINGHAM FRIDAY A. M.

There has been called a prohibition meeting to be held at the Molton Hotel, Birmingham next Friday morning, October 3rd, at 10:00 o'clock, standard time. The purpose of the meeting is to consider the advisability of making an effort to elect prohibition members of the Legislature and Senate in 1942, and try to repeal the present State liquor law.

It is hoped that a good attendance from Chilton county will be at this meeting in Birmingham Friday morning.

The present liquor law as it is being administered in Alabama is a miserable failure at solving the tremendous problem. It has not lessened bootlegging nor the manufacture of moonshine whiskey, as was promised. Drinking and drunkenness are overrunning the State—worse than it has ever been before.

Let's have a good attendance at this meeting in Birmingham. As many people from Chilton County are urged to attend as possible can.

WELLS REUNION

Wells giving the devotional, led in prayer by Mrs. Horace Ray and a short history of the Wells family and of Poplar Springs.

Price Paid For Natchez Trace Right-Of-Way

What was pronounced by a magazine editor in a recent letter to Col. Jim Walton, of Eupora, Miss., as the most valuable historical contribution to the history of Alabama and the South in the past fifty years, was the discovery by Col. Walton of a long sought list of items paid the Indians for the right-of-way for the Natchez Trace, Dec. 18, 1801 from Loftis Heights, Ft. Adams, Wilkinson county, Mississippi to Nashville, Tenn.

The document in question was pointed out to Col. Walton by a member of the Supreme Court, and is found on page 650 American State Papers on Indian Affairs in the Supreme Court Library—James Wilkinson, Benjamin Hawkins and Andrew Pickens were the commissioners for the United States government—Mingo, chief men and warriors represented the assembled Indians. The total amount paid in kind was $702.21, as follows:

200 pounds rifle powder, $60; 500 pounds lead, $40.80; 1,000 gun flint, $10; 2 pieces Stroud $40; 40 blankets, $59.20; 100 shirts $30; 6 rifles $84; 30 axes $26; 36 hoes $22; 1 doz. black silk handkerchiefs $12.80; 2 pieces calico (28-1 3 yds. each) $9.50; 2 pieces pelicans $8.16; 12 dozen scalp knives $54; 50 gallons whiskey $25; 5 kegs whiskey $2.50 each; 200 pounds tobacco $12.50; 1 piece grey coventry (28 yds) $38.50; 1 piece striped coventry $35.25 and 3 rifles $42.

A postscript says add one gun $6.

It is presumed that an old Indian was dissatisfied with his share and the gun was to placate him.

Col. Walton, who is the originator of the modern Natchez Trace, says that the three states, Alabama, Tennessee and Mississippi have already spent nearly $50,000 for right of ways for the Natchez Trace between Natchez and Nashville, and there are stretches still unpurchased. The Federal Government has spent $10,000,000 on construction, and when finished, the Trace will be the costliest historical restoration project in the world.

It is estimated the completion cost will require from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 additional to finish the highway.

Col. Walton says, "I put the gigantic historical project across and received the stupendous sum of $50 paid in three installments for my work. The Natchez Trace crosses northwest Alabama."

A new Presbyterian church has been completed at Prattville.

National Dairy Show

The National Dairy Show will be next door to Alabama this year. It will be in Memphis, Tenn., and the dates are October 11 to 18. In addition to being a show of about 1,000 of the world's finest dairy cattle of all breeds, there are many educational features of great value, says F. W. Burns, extension dairyman, Auburn, in urging Alabamians to attend.

HIGHWAY TRANSPORTATION SURVEY TO BE MADE SOON

All farmers and others who own trucks are to be asked to help the War Department in its transportation planning for national defense, announces Director P. O. Davis of the Alabama Extension Service. M. L. Wilson, director of Extension work for the U. S. Department of Agriculture, recently asked the cooperation of all State extension services in the survey to be made.

Each truck owner will receive in the next few days a special National Defense inventory card from the Alabama Highway Traffic Advisory Committee to the War Department, with the request for immediate return of the card (postage paid) with information regarding the make of his truck, kind of body, capacity, time of year the vehicle is most urgently needed in the owner's business, and whether in an emergency he would be willing to hire or lease it to a Government agency.

Similar facts will also be requested on all buses, and on all freight trailers with a capacity of 3,000 pounds or more. The information given on each individual card will be confidential, and will be used only for planning for national defense.

and corn by two or three times. "After all our talk about the need of new crops, we find that we are not doing half what we could with the crops we have. We hope to convince the families of our program that they can do more, and at the same time have more for themselves, by wise use of cover crops."

Field Select Seed Corn

To insure a good corn crop next year seed should be selected from the field just as quickly as grains are dry and mature. The seed should then be treated for weevils and stored properly, according to J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist.

THE SMOKY YEARS

By ALAN LE MAY

INSTALLMENT 13

THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon had built up a vast string of ranches. King, who was a boy who had once been very close to her, and very dear. Suddenly she was able to glimpse the power and the depth of the animosity behind the mission of these men. Ben Thorpe too great if in the end Bill Roper was struck out of existence.

"Jim," the younger rider said so. "If Roper's got his wild bunch with him—Jim, it's such a fight as none of us have ever gone into yet! When you stop to think that any time—any minute—a bunch of 'em may come." "Charley's on lookout," Jim Leathers shrugged. "We'll know in plenty time."

A silence fell, a long silence. Heavy upon Jody Gordon was the aspect of an open creature, helpless without close walls. Her pulse was low and bitter. "You're set on holding me here?"

"No call to put it that way," Jim Leathers said, mildly. "I'm not going to. But his eyes denied that in any way, so that behind him Jody sensed again the vast animosity built by the Texas Rustlers' War."

"I want a flat answer," Jody said. "Are you, going to give me a horse, or not?"

Once more Jim Leathers' canine teeth showed in his peculiarly unpleasant grin. "Hell, no," he said.

CHAPTER XVIII

Perhaps Lew Gordon should have known that if Bill Roper learned of Jody's disappearance at all, Roper would come directly to him.

And, knowing this, he should have prepared himself. But Lew Gordon had not met Roper face to face in nearly two years; and nothing was farther from his mind than the possibility that Roper would walk in upon him now.

Upon this night Lew Gordon was pacing the main room of his little Miles City house; forty-eight hours had passed since his daughter's disappearance, and the old man had lashed himself into a state of depressed fury comparable to that of a trap-baited mountain lion, or a goaded bear. Everything that he had done to locate his daughter was being done.

He knew that Jody's disappearance was voluntary, and he knew its purpose. The brief but highly intelligent man, Jody had left him to tell him that much. It simply said:

"One of you must be made to see reason. I am going to talk to Billy Roper myself."

What this did not tell him was where Roper was, or how Jody expected to find him. Impatient of mystery and delay, he could not understand why his many far-scattered employees could dig up no word. For all he knew, his daughter was by this time lost somewhere in the frozen wastes of snow, in immediate desperate need of help.

Lew Gordon sat alone for a little while. But the more he thought, the angrier was burned down into a heavy weariness. His mind was full of his daughter, whom he persistently pictured as a little girl, much like a child that she actually was any more.

Suddenly it struck him how curious it was that in this bare room in which he sat there was no sign of any kind that Jody had ever been there at all. This was partly because she had never lived here nor been expected here; but it brought home to him sharply how much of his life had been given to the little, how little to his daughter. He made him realize how little he knew his daughter, and how little he had ever given her of himself.

This was Lew Gordon's state of mind as the door thrust open. A knock in a brief lash of wintry wind; and he wheeled in his chair to face the last man on earth he had expected to see.

Bill Roper shook a powdering of dry snow off the roll of his hat, then stood looking at Lew Gordon in a cool hard silence as he pulled off his gloves. Once this man had been almost a son to Lew Gordon—the adopted son, in the eyes of Lew Gordon's dead parent. But a definite enmity now replaced what a little while ago had been a friendship as deep and close as the varieties in their ages could permit. The meaning of their association, almost as long as Bill Roper's life, was gone, wiped out by those two many years since the death of Lew King.

For a moment or two Lew Gordon stared at him in utter disbelief. Then he whipped to his feet. "Where is she?" he demanded impatiently, furiously. "What have you done with her?"

Bill Roper no longer looked like the youngest Dusty King had raised the trail. His gray eyes looked hard and extremely competent, old

Jody Gordon, and her father. After wiping Thorpe out of Texas, Roper conducted a great raid upon Thorpe's vast herds in Montana. Roper left for Lew Gordon's home when told that Jody had disappeared. Unable to reconcile her father with Roper, beyond his age, in a face so dark and lean-carved it was hard to recognize behind it the face of Dusty King's kid. He made no attempt to answer a question which was necessarily meaningless to him. He finished pulling off his gloves, unbuttoned his coat, and hooked his thumbs in his belt before he spoke.

"I heard yesterday that Jody has turned up missing," he said. "I came to Miles hell-for-leather to see if it's so. From what I could find out down in the town, no word has come in on where she is. If that's true, I don't aim to give my time to anything else until she's found."

"You mean to deny you know where she is?" Gordon shouted.

Roper's voice did not change. "You talk like a fool," he said.

Lew Gordon's eyes were savagely intent upon Roper's face; he was trying to discover if this man could be believed.

"You may be lying," he added at last, "and you may not, but I'll tell you this—you sure won't leave here until you hold me here?"

"No call to put it that way," Jim Leathers said, mildly. "I'm not going to. But his eyes denied that in any way, so that behind him Jody sensed again the vast animosity built by the Texas Rustlers' War."

Once more Jim Leathers' canine teeth showed in his peculiarly unpleasant grin. "Hell, no," he said.

But a definite enmity now replaced what a little while ago had been a friendship as deep and close as the varieties in their ages could permit. The meaning of their association, almost as long as Bill Roper's life, was gone, wiped out by those two many years since the death of Lew King.

For a moment or two Lew Gordon stared at him in utter disbelief. Then he whipped to his feet. "Where is she?" he demanded impatiently, furiously. "What have you done with her?"

Bill Roper no longer looked like the youngest Dusty King had raised the trail. His gray eyes looked hard and extremely competent, old

Lew Gordon's eyes were savagely intent on Roper's face.

"I'll find out where my girl is. You're wanted anywhere, my laddie buck; there's a legal reward on your head, right now—and part of it was put up by me."

"I heard that," Bill Roper said. "When I get ready to leave, I'll leave, all right. My advice to you is to begin unning your head. I may be in a kind of funny position. But it puts me where I know things about the Montana range that neither you nor your outfits have got any clue to. If you want your daughter back you better figure to use what I know about the Deep Grass."

Lew Gordon compelled himself to temporize. What he couldn't get around was the fact that Roper knew something definite, specific, about where Jody had gone—or had started out to go. He must have known also, in spite of the bluff to which anger had prompted him, that he could not hold Roper here when Roper decided to leave, nor force any information from him in any way whatever.

"What is it you want to know?" he asked at last, helpless, and angry in his helplessness.

"In the first place, I want to know what made you think Jody was with me?"

"You swear," Lew Gordon demanded, "you don't know the answer to that?"

"I don't swear anything," Roper said. "I asked you a question, Lew."

Lew Gordon hesitated. It was a good many years since anyone had talked to him in the tone Bill Roper took; but for once the purpose in hand overpowered the violence of his natural reaction. He turned from his litter of papers, and handed Bill Roper the little scrap of Jody's handwriting which was all she had left to indicate where she was gone.

"One of you must be made to see reason. I am going to talk to Billy Roper myself."

When Bill Roper had read that, the eyes of the two men met in hostile question.

"This looks mighty like a false lead, to me," Bill Roper said at last. "As far as she aimed to cover up where she really went. Don't hardly seem likely she'd start out to come to me."

"I know she went looking for you because she said she did. My girl ought to."

Roper shrugged. "Why should she do that?"

Jody had set out with Shoshone Wice to find him. They were attacked by some of Thorpe's men hiding in Roper's shack. Wice escape but Jody was captured. The men decided to hold her as bait to bring Roper to them.

"It was your own man talked her into it," Gordon said with menace. "My own man? What man?"

"A little sniveler called Shoshone Wice. Everybody knows he was a scout coyote for you, before Texas ever run you out."

"Nobody run me out of any place," Roper said; but his mind whispered to something else. It was true that he talked to certain men in the town before he had come here. Now suddenly he knew that he had learned what he had come to find out. He buttoned his coat, pulled on his gloves.

Gordon confronted him stubbornly. "I mean you shan't leave here without telling me what you know."

A glint of hard amusement was plain in Bill Roper's eyes. "I know what you've told me. But I'll add this onto it. I think you'll soon have back your girl. I'm walking out of here now, Lew, because it's time for me to look into a couple of things. But I'll be seeing you—if Thorpe don't get you first."

The veins stood out sharply on Lew Gordon's forehead, highlighted by a faint dampness. "In all fairness I'll tell you this," he said. "It's true I can't lift a gun on you, or on any man who stands with empty hands. But as soon as you're out of the jump, so will you don't get loose. Twenty thousand hangs over your head, my boy!"

"Quite a tidy little nest egg," Roper agreed. "I'd like to have it myself."

A trick of the wind sent a great whirl of papers across the room as he went out.

He had not come here without providing that the horse which waited under his saddle was fresh and good. He struck westward now out of Miles City, unhurrying. At the half mile he found a broad cross trail where some random band of cattle had trampled the snow into a trackless pavement. He turned north in this followed it for a mile, then swung northwest over markless snow. Now that this horse was warned a little he settled deep in his saddle and pushed the animal into a steady trot; at that gait, even in the snow, he could expect the tough rugged pony to last most of the night.

CHAPTER XIX

A tired horse is not much inclined to shy, toward the end of a long day, and so when Bill Roper's horse snorted and jumped sideways out of its tracks the rider looked twice, curiously, at the carcass which had spooked his pony. A dead pony dead in all these winter ranges a fairly common thing, he was about to ride on, when he noticed something about this particular dead pony which caused him to pull up and mount for a closer examination.

After leaving Lew Gordon he had ridden deep into the night. Half an hour would bring him within sight of the Fork Creek camp, and he was eager to push on, so that his deduction as to Jody's whereabouts might have a quick answer, one way or the other; but when he had examined the dead pony he was glad that he had checked.

This was no winter-killed pony. The bright trace of frozen blood that had first caught Roper's eye was the result of two gunshot wounds in neck and quarters.

A dark foreboding possessed Roper as he studied the dead pony. Roper himself was short-cutting through the hills, following no trail. The coincidence that he had stumbled upon the carcass in all these snowy wastes could be accounted for only in one way: both Roper and the pony had followed a line of least resistance through the hills—a line that had the Fork Creek rendezvous at its far end. His discovery told him that there had been fighting at Fork Creek within the last forty-eight hours. If he was right in believing that Jody had come to Fork Creek—

He remounted and swung northward, mercilessly whipping up his weary pony, but approaching the Fork Creek camp roundabout, behind making his and through hidden ravines. An hour passed before he threw down his reins and crept on hands and knees to the crest of a ridge commanding the valley of the Forks.

He moved a half mile closer and resumed his watch; but for some time he could make out nothing.

Then just as the sun set, three men moved out of the cabin. For a moment or two they stood in the snow cleft together. One went back into the cabin. The two others disappeared for a moment, to reappear mounted. They separated, and Roper watched them ride in opposite directions up the nearest slopes of the hills. These passed beyond his sight, but in another minute or two their ways were retraced by two other riders.

"Outposts," Roper decided. "Somebody's keeping a hell of a careful watch."

ORNAMENTAL PLANT SEED

October is the time to collect seed from ornamental plants which bear seed in pods and are likely to shatter, says Homer Fisher, extension landscape gardener, Auburn.

Examples of plants to collect seed from: Shrub althea, Common crepe-myrtle, and Common persimmon. These seed should be stored dry in airtight containers such as bottles or fruit jars.

State Farmers Advised To Produce More Hogs:

To produce more meat for home consumption and to supplement the farm income farmers should produce more hogs, says W. D. Salmon, animal nutritionist of the Alabama Experiment Station, Auburn. The cash income from sale of hogs in Alabama amounted to less than one per cent of the cash income from sales of hogs in the United States in 1940.

Iowa alone has a greater cash income from hogs than all 16 South Atlantic and South Central States. The total income from these 16 states amounted to $108,987,000 while the income in Iowa amounted to $180,746,000.

NAVY

"You have all your food and lodging, and also your original outfit of clothing provided by Uncle Sam free. In addition there are free sports and entertainment—even to the latest Hollywood pictures. On top of this you get free travel and adventure in colorful places—a thing few civilians could afford."

When you consider the size of the country and the fact that the Navy will select only 15,000 applicants a month from many times that number throughout the United States, it is no wonder that "Many are called but few are chosen," will apply to local youth men interested.

Navy men are a "hand picked" group. Candidates must be men of more than average intelligence and ambition, of fine moral character and must have the written recommendation of at least two local townpeople.

As Navy Editor, Mr. Tucker has just received from Washington a supply of free illustrated booklets for men interested and, in addition, welcome inquiries from young men who wish to look into the new and greater opportunities the Navy offers for training for future civilian careers as they serve their country now in emergency.

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

Mike Pickens is able to be out... that comes under the head of 'good news'... Mike has scores of friends who will be glad to learn that he is able to be up and at'em again.

B. N. Studdard went to the football game the other night at Maplesville... this is going to be good... when he got up the next morning he found a badly crushed fender... B. N. didn't say anything about it to the wife... he thought he better find out just how it came to be there... you know what goes on at football games. Well, when he went home to breakfast Mrs. Studdard asked, "Did you see where John bent the fenders on your car yesterday afternoon?"... was B. N. relieved... but he didn't say a word... but upon investigation it turned out that the mashed fender had been there since the day before when brother John kissed a telephone pole in south Clanton and B. N. just hadn't noticed it.

Now is the time for everybody to start raking leaves and cleaning up... Fall is in the air and one of the best ways you can show your Civic pride is to help the city keep its streets and sidewalks clean.

Folks, guess you have read about C. C. H. S. going to have a band... Mr. Burton is the Director and from what we can learn is thoroughly capable of the job... it is the duty of every club and organization in Clanton and Chilton County to get behind this movement and to aid Mr. Burton in having the finest band in this part of Alabama... we can do it if everyone cooperates.

Mr. Mell Martin has been in the Funeral Directing business for 37 years and a funeral under his direction has never been delayed one minute on his account... a man of 45 years was overheard asking Dr. V. J. Gragg last week for a birth certificate... lets compliment Mrs. Popwell on the beautiful window display at The Blossom Shop... it's beautiful and what we need is more and better window displays in our fair city... Gordon Donnivant and Avoline Taylor went and got married last week... congratulations, the both of you and may the best of everything be yours... hope we're safe in reporting that one... it's already happened.

This Week In National Defense

FREEDOM OF RELIGION IN RUSSIA

President Roosevelt told his press conference that W. Averell Harriman, chief of the American Mission to Moscow, has been specifically instructed to take up with the Russian Government the question of religious freedom in the Soviet Union. Earlier he issued a statement that "it is hoped... an entering wedge for the practice of complete freedom of religion is definitely on its way" in Russia.

POST-WAR INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION

Supreme Court Justice Jackson told the annual convention of the American Bar Association that "at the end of this war we must either throw the full weight of American influence to the support of an international order based on law or we must outstrip the world in naval and air and perhaps in military force." The tragedy and irony of the present position of the United States, he said, is that this country which would not join a League of Nations which advocated economic sanctions, is "now imposing those very sanctions against half the world in an effort to turn the fortunes of war."

Isabella Community Fair Committee Meet

At a call meeting of the Isabella Community Fair committee Tuesday night, it was decided to call the Fair of this year due to the great number of our farmers working away from home.

THORSBY BUILDING NEW BUS STATION

Thorsby is going to have a brand new Bus Station. Work is coming along fine on the new structure and it won't be long before it is completed.

Motorists Warned Not To Use Jimeson-Calera Cut-Off

From September 15 through October 1, the local highway patrolmen, Probst and Glass report that they have made nine arrests and issued nine warning tickets to motorists. The arrests are two for driving while intoxicated, four for reckless driving, two for having no drivers license, one for failure to stop at through highway and one for speeding with a truck.

The patrolmen also report that a serious situation has developed in regard to the use by motorists of the cut-off between Jimeson and Calera which is under construction. This road is not open to the public but some motorists have flagrantly disregarded the barricades and warning signs and have made use of the road. A warning to stay off this road is issued for the situation has come to the point where it cannot longer be tolerated. If motorists continue to use this cut-off, then the motorists do so at the risk of arrest and the state stands to lose several thousand dollars in delayed work.

Chilton Tigers To Play Columbiana

The Chilton County High Tigers journey this week to Columbiana where they meet the Columbiana outfit Friday night. The locals gave Maplesville a sound licking last Friday night in celebration of Maplesville's new lighted field. The score was 40 to 6. The game tonight promises to be a much better game as Columbiana is reported to have a strong team this year.

ANNUAL SINGING AT LIBERTY

There will be an all-day singing at Liberty Hill Baptist church, four and one-half miles west of Clanton just off the Maplesville highway, Sunday October 12th.

We ask the cooperation of the county singers in making the singing a success. Bring a well filled basket and spend the day.

The Functions of the Press

This is one of a series of editorials specially designed to acquaint our readers with the various functions of the Press in a democratic community.

The Functions Of The Press

Commencing next week it is our intention to feature an editorial each week for a period of nine weeks, outlining the functions of the press in a democratic community and its relationship to the various phases of community life. There is considerable ignorance as to the position and prerogatives of the press in the area it serves. This lack of knowledge is almost entirely the fault of the press itself, because it has neglected the important duty of making its readers conversant with the fundamental principles involved in the publication of a community newspaper. The series seeks to make amends for the omissions of the past, and to present in simple language an explanation of the main relationship between the newspaper, its readers, its community, and its associations with organizations, business groups and institutions within the realm it seeks to serve.

The nine phases to be discussed are: The Freedom of the Press, The Press and Governments, The Press and the Churches, The Press and the Advertiser, The Press and Propaganda, The Functions of an Editor, The Functions of a Reporter, The Press and Local History, and The Guarantee of Freedom. We sincerely hope that our readers will carefully study and digest the series, because we believe it will give them a new understanding of their local newspaper, and the historical purpose of its mission in the community.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Alabama, which is rapidly expanding its ship-building facilities for national defense orders, will observe Navy Day Oct. 27. Gov. Dixon Tuesday proclaimed the observance, declaring that "the present World War has demonstrated to all observing people that a powerful navy is more than important—it is a vital need."

The Navy League of the United States inaugurated the observance in 1922 on the birthday anniversary of former President Theodore Roosevelt, the proclamation pointed out.

American Legion Post To Meet Friday Night

The Chilton County Post American Legion, will meet at the Court House Friday night at 7:30. Important business will be brought before the meeting and all members are urged to be present at this meeting.

Montgomery—Ten cases of poliomyelitis were reported from Chilton County between January 1 and September 25, inclusive, the State Department of Health revealed today.

Cases reported from the State as a whole during the same period numbered 709, of which 515 were reported prior to September 1. Thirteen cases were reported from January 1 to May 31, inclusive, 11 during the month of June, 168 in July, and 323 in August. LOCAL FURNITURE STORES TO CLOSE LATER FRIDAYS

Three of the local Furniture Companies have agreed to remain open each Friday night until 8:00 o'clock in order to help the Childersburg workers get their checks cashed. Of course the three stores remaining open cannot possibly cash all of the checks brought in but it is a fine spirit and one that will be appreciated by these workers. These Stores are: The Klinger Furniture Co., E. L. Klinger Furniture Co., Tiffin Furniture Co.

NOTICE TO PARENTS WITH SONS IN CAMP

Mr. Leroy Martin, local Red Cross Home Service Officer for the boys in training camps, asks The Chilton County News to say a few words for him to the parents or guardians of boys in training who expect to get discharges for reason of dependencies during the remainder of this year. Such parents will need to sign application blanks, which Mr. Martin has on hand. If these parents will drop in Mr. Martin's office when they happen to be in Clanton during the next few weeks and sign these blanks, the parents can make much easier and trouble in going to the home and getting them signed.

Mr. Martin cannot do anything for the boys to get them out other than furnish the government just the information which they ask for. This will save Mr. Martin much time and get done quicker by doing as above directed by Mr. Martin, and the same will be greatly appreciated.

"Parents cannot get their son discharged from the service by paying money to anyone for the service. Every application goes through the same rigid investigation and all are handled according to the needs of the dependents" said Mr. Martin.

"Military authorities requested the American Red Cross to obtain this Home Condition Report, which" stated Mr. Martin, "is absolutely confidential. Any father who wants to tell their son home on emergency leave, though may see Mr. Martin and he will do all in his power to help them. This must be handled through the Chilton County Chapter, American Red Cross."

High School Plans Band This Year

Mr. J. Franklin Burton Will Be The Director

Chilton County High School is going to have a High School Band this year.

Mr. J. Franklin Burton, who has had 27 years experience with Band work and has had more than 18 years with high schools and grammar schools will act as director.

The goal that Mr. Burton has set for the local school is 35 members and eighteen of these have already signed up and started practice. The 10th of October has been set as the final day for new members to sign up but Mr. Burton states that he will extend this deadline a little longer because of not being able to get word to the school boys and girls of their opportunity to get in the band.

During Mr. Burton's 18 years of Band work he has taught instrumental music in such schools as: The schools of Jefferson County; Supervisor of Instrumental music for the Birmingham Park and Recreation Board; Merrimack Manufacturing Co., at Huntsville; Military Academy, Band Director in Virginia.

All who are interested in instrumental music are requested to get in touch with Mr. Burton at once. Those who do not start this term will not be able to play in the first band until after they have taken band at least 1 year, as another class will be started this school year, explains Mr. Burton. "It would not be fair to retard the progress of the other members just because a few were late in getting started." Another class has been allowed to get started in the term of school.

For many years the Chilton County High School has wanted to have a band, and this year for the first time we have the opportunity of getting a band started. Arrangements will be made to allow credit for high school band work, provided the student does satisfactory work. The principal of the high school endorses this work, and will be glad to talk to any patron that is interested in having his child sign up for band. If any student expects to get started in the band he must enroll by Oct. 15.

Mark Remarks:

Increasing the price of liquor is not going to decrease the amount of "moonshine" and "bootleg."

We used to scare the children by telling them the bogie man would get them; now we are scaring the old folks by telling them Hitler is going to get them.

Jimmy Ayres, of Fayette, who has been off again, is now on again and gone again. Comes this week Number One, Volume One, of the Fayette County Times; it is neat, newsy and full of ads. Jimmy now seems to be getting the backing from the business men of Fayette that he needed so badly a short time ago. More power to you, old Timer.

We are saddened today by the news in The Tuscaloosa News, that Phil Blondheim, our friend of more than forty years ago, is dead. Says The News:

"Saturday morning we stood by the fresh-made grave of a very dear friend of many years standing, and our tough heart ached. Philip Blondheim, eldest son of one of Tuscaloosa's greatest women, was no howling success as measured by a hard world's standards, but a more generous, loyal or kindly heart dwelt in no man's breast."

Lest YOU forget (I'm over 70), its time to register and pay poll tax again.

THANKS!

"Mark Tucker, editor and publisher of Chilton County News, knows a lot of people and spoke to them at the gathering (Ed Taylor's barbecue in Montgomery). Mark will do to tie to because he never forgot a friend or stabbed an enemy except in front."—Atticus Mullin in The Montgomery Advertiser.

"Atticus, you have never made a truer statement. We know this to be a fact because we have had the pleasure of working with Mr. Tucker, and have never known a finer man or one who can command any greater respect from his fellow man."—LaFayette Smith.

"Thanks! Boys, thanks! There is nothing sweeter than the fragrance of the rose, still fresh with the dew of human kindness. I have another house or lands; silver or gold or stocks and bonds—yet I am more than compensated for the lack of these, by the love, confidence and respect of friends like these."

BIBB GRAVES For GOVERNOR

Not The Time For Others
To Run

Already the gubernatorial race in Alabama is waxing warm, but so far as we know not one has announced. In our opinion Col. Bibb Graves will be far out in the lead for governor next year. It would not surprise us in the least if he carried 67 counties. Judge Chauncey Sparks is almost sure to run and will no doubt get a good vote, since he was a runner-up at the last election. If Judge Sparks would but hold off for another four years he no doubt would be chosen, but next year IS NOT the time for him. Again let us predict, Frank Holcomb of Oneonta, in our opinion, will be nominated for governor by the gathering of old-age pensions advocates. Mr. Holcomb, whom we are personally acquainted with and consider a very close friend for we DO like him, and he is very capable, probably will make a mistake if he accepts the nomination. He too should wait. In our opinion no one can be elected governor on this issue. Of course, old-age pensions will be a major plank in EVERYONE'S platform, and right that it should be, but let us enact the law and build to it, not advocate too much at one time. Bibb Graves is very much in sympathy with old-age pensions and we believe, can be instrumental in bringing to the front as high paid pensions in our state as any public man in it. For one to promise the largest check may get a few votes but the way to get a pension is to be conservative and work well to that end.—Fort Payne Journal.

of these, by the love, confidence and respect of friends like these.

This is the kind of material that one day will save misguided humanity from destroying itself. It cannot be saved by building bigger bombers, bigger tanks, bigger ships and bigger guns.

CALHOUN BACKS BIBB GRAVES

As group after group over Alabama endorses the candidacy of Col. Bibb Graves for Governor of Alabama, and reports from every corner of the state indicate that his popularity with Alabama voters has not been exaggerated, it is gratifying to know that Anniston and Calhoun County are no exception.

Everywhere here one is told—"Bibb Graves is the man."

He is supported by no one faction, by no one classification of our citizenship. Merchant, professional man, industrialist, laboring man, white collar worker—the overwhelming majority of all are agreed that Bibb Graves is the man to lead Alabama through the years of stress ahead. No other man holds so much confidence of the people.

The Anniston Times traditionally has supported Bibb Graves. We have been supporting him in these last two years as he has been striding upward to the highest peak of state acclaim that any man has ever reached as a candidate for Governor of Alabama. We are proud to have had our judgment so verified by the people.

We do not offer Bibb Graves as a man of perfection. Like all men he has points of imperfection. But any fair observer, looking back at the two previous administrations of Bibb Graves, will admit that his shortcomings are outweighed by his fine qualities—PROVEN qualities, we emphasize—that no other candidate in the field can approach. His schools, his roads, his expansion of the health and agricultural services, his fair dealing with labor and capital alike—all these in two previous administrations are proof of Bibb Graves' right to a third term in the Governor's Chair.

The favorite smear-term of opposing forces is "pie". They say that Bibb Graves will serve "pie" to all his friends. The difference in Graves and some others is that he has never denied his loyalty to his friends, and has never sought to cover up the fact.

The charge is made that Bibb Graves will throw out the Merit System. The Anniston Times is qualified to say now that Bibb Graves will not throw out the Merit System.

In view of the almost unanimous support accorded him, we predict that Bibb Graves will give Alabama the best of his three administrations. We know that he has deliberately refrained from striking at certain of his opponents because he feels that this is a time when Alabama as well as the nation needs internal harmony and unity. It is gratifying to know that Calhoun County is joined in the solid ranks behind the "Little Colonel" who has led so well before.—The Anniston Times.

Food Plan Outlined
No Cotton Reduction

Auburn, Ala.—Southern farmers and agricultural workers attending the food for defense meeting in Memphis last week were assured by Secretary Wickard that no reduction of the cotton acreage below that of 1941 is being considered for 1942.

The Alabama delegation met before leaving Memphis and increased the state's 1942 goals for hogs and poultry above those proposed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Goals for dairying and beef cattle were accepted as presented. They call for an increase of 12 per cent for each of these. The same figure was requested for egg production, while hogs will be less.

It was made clear that these are not quotas, but goals toward which farmers will be asked to work. P. O. Davis, Alabama Extension Service director, said that farming in Alabama will be improved by making these increases in livestock. For these gains county agents have worked for many years.

Some doubt about peanut goals was expressed because of inability to get all machinery needed for harvesting an acreage in peanuts almost twice as big as that of 1941. W. B. Crawley, chairman of the Alabama AAA committee, explained that greater use of harvesting machinery is feasible. He predicted this increase if they are assured that satisfactory prices will be for them.

Increased production work will be started at once. Planting seed of oats, barley, wheat, rye, and winter legumes this fall is a necessary step in the production of meat, milk, eggs, and wool next year. Bigger plantings of all these for which seed are available are expected immediately.

ALABAMA ISOLATIONISTS.

We notice some few publications that come to our office are still predicting that Graves is not the man for Governor—that the "Little Colonel" has a worry on his hand if he thinks he can be elected. Well, we will just have to brand these few as "Alabama isolationists" for they surely don't know just how popular Bibb Graves is with the overwhelming majority of Alabamians, and to say that a man that is as popular as Bibb Graves has anything but majority endorsement, simply registers prejudice or ignorance we still insist the few mentioned above are "Alabama Isolationists."—Sumter County Journal.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

An army of six thousand soldiers was being transferred through the little city where I lived. Just in front of my home the trucks were directed to take a sharp left hand turn by an arrow that was placed there. I observed that as long as the trucks were in sight of each other all the drivers turned, following the one in front. When there was no truck in sight, often the driver would dash by the arrow and then streams of trucks would follow the one going wrong.

They were depending on the driver in front and when he went wrong, they went wrong with him. There is a great responsibility in being a leader. Many a young person has gone wrong for no other reason than that he was following some one who went wrong. Beware, young and old, there are others following you. Be sure that you see and heed all the pointing arrows along the road of life and then go right yourself and you will lead others right.

Mrs. Charles Lindbergh tells us in one of her books of having been with her famous husband as he visited certain places in China. They came down where there was a terrible famine, and they saw the awful distress of thousands who were starving to death. After a brief visit, they entered their plane and in a few minutes they were far away from all that suffering and starvation. In a mental sense we human beings are just as the Lindberghs. We behold suffering and want and for a short time we are horrified at the needs before us, but in a moment we turn our thoughts to other things and soon we are far away in our sympathy toward those who make an appeal to us. We can forget so easily that we rarely ever do anything about it.

The little boy informed his mother that he was not ready to take his bath as he had some thinking that he wanted to do. "Alright" said the mother, do your thinking and then take your bath." Soon he reported to his mother that he was ready for his bath and his mother wanted to know what he had to think about. "I have been thinking about gravity" said the boy, "And mother I have concluded that gravity is God and that He is in the center of everything, and that is what keeps people right side up when all the world is upside down." The little boy was right. If we can always put God in the center of everything and make Him the center of our very being, we can remain right side up when everything else turns upside down. To be sure God belongs in the very center of all things.

We made a long trip out west, going by way of Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs and on home. We made use of the hotels while traveling, but the managers never offered to be father or mother to us. It was delightful to stop over night, but they were not our abiding places. There are people who look upon their denominations as the door that opens up into heaven. Would that all Christian people could learn that our denominations are just the hotels at which we stop for a short period, as we journey on toward our heavenly home. The end of our journey is to be with God, with Jesus Christ, and how foolish for any one to think that the denomination is all. When you get home you may be surprised to find out that your Baptist church, your Methodist church, your Presbyterian church, is not known within the gates. In your travel to heaven stop over at the hotel that suits you. The Christian road terminates in heaven, and it matters not over what denominational road you traveled.

One morning a runaway team was dashing down the street of a Scotch city. Crowds rushed out from before the speeding horses. Down the way there was a little boy toddling around in the street and the crowds were aghast as the wild horses ran toward the child. Just then a Scotch woman dashed into the street, seized the child and drug him from the path of the furious team. Seeing that the child was safe the crowd rushed to the woman and congratulated her for saving her child. "My child," said the woman, "This is not my child. I never saw it before, but it is some mother's child and that is why I saved him." You see that ragged tramp. You see that lonely individual, at some time that one was some mother's babe some where. Every human being somebody to Jesus-Christ and he worth saving. Remember that he who turneth men to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever.

MISS MATTIE JO BARBER, County Home Demonstration Agent

Feeling the importance of the slogan "Food for Defense" Home Demonstration Club women of Chilton County have been discussing "Enriched Flour and Bread" at their regular meetings. They are urging that homemakers plan to include these products in their purchases. Merchants are asked to encourage the use of enriched flour and bread.

Mrs. Anna Phalin of Thorshy Club says, "I am sure we should all welcome the opportunity to tell others about the efforts that are being made to promote better health among our farm people, I, for one, am always glad to know how to make improvements in my way of living."

The home of Mrs. L. L. Traywick of Fairview Home Demonstration Club has been made more attractive as well as livable by the addition of home made furniture.

Mrs. Traywick says, "I needed more cabinet space in my kitchen than was provided by my kitchen cabinet so I decided to do something about it. I made the needed cabinet from wooden boxes in which dynamite is shipped, by putting one box on top of the other. These boxes were fastened together with strips of wood nailed at the back. I then painted the cabinet and hung a curtain made of sacks with bias tape trim over the front."

The cabinet isn't the only article of home-made furniture in use in Mrs. Traywick's home. She made the top for a dressing table from a piece of lumber that she found and used a skirt of attractive cotton print material. The top is varnished to harmonize with other furniture and Mrs. Traywick bought a mirror to hang over the dressing table.

Mrs. Traywick plans to make a book case in order that her children will have a place to keep school books and supplies. She believes this will help the children to form good habits and will be a great help in making her home more attractive.

THOUSANDS OF NEGROES NEEDED FOR THE NAVY

Fall Terracing

Cyanide Poisoning

Thousands of Negroes are needed for service in the Navy. The age limit is between 17 and 31. They may enlist in the regular Navy for six years or in the Naval Reserve for four years and be released from active duty after the national emergency.

Negro boys between 17 and 18 may enlist for minority and be discharged when they become 21 years of age unless they prefer the Naval Reserve and want to be released from active duty when the emergency ends.

Negroes enlist for the messman branch of the Navy. That is, they cook and serve food. This gives them splendid training which may benefit them in civil life should they choose to work in hotels or dining cars.

And it is also to be remembered that when the guns are fired, the Negroes take part in that, too.

Alabama has consistently led in recruiting negroes for the Navy, but more and more are needed. The quota is unlimited.

Negroes are urged to see the Navy Editor, who will have a Recruiting Officer call on them.

Following their crop harvesting Alabama farmers have begun their terrace construction and maintenance work. They have until November 30 to earn their payments for terracing.

Besides earning their payments, they can save tons of soil that will wash away on unterraced land this winter says J. B. Wilson, extension agricultural engineer, Auburn.

Poisoning, due to the ingestion of second-growth sorghum, is a frequent cause of losses among cattle and hogs at this time of the year. In the early stages, extensive damage can be prevented by the removal of, or counteracting the poison, says Dr. Frank P. Wolf, professor of veterinary medicine, Auburn. In some well advanced cases, death has been prevented by the intravenous injections of sodium thiosulphate.

Proper Way Given For Washing Quilts

INEXPENSIVE METHOD OF DALLIS GRASS INCREASE

The old maxim "cleanliness is next to Godliness" holds true in the case of bed coverings. The old-fashioned quilt, made of cotton filling, is a handy item for the homemaker.

"When the comfort herein is added it may be satisfactorily called a certain precaution are taken," she says in offering suggestions for washing quilts, to keep the cotton filling from wadding up.

Prepare heavy soap-suds in lukewarm temperature and fold quilt to fit tub. Use enough water in tub to completely cover comfort. Press and knead the quilt in this soapy water.

Remove quilt and prepare second wash water as before. Change the fold of quilt and repeat the washing process. Lift out and squeeze out suds. Rinse well, being careful not to pull or disarrange cotton filling. Press and squeeze out water.

Spread to dry on clean flat surface. A sheet or clean white paper underneath helps absorb moisture. An improved scaffold made of slats and sawhorses makes a satisfactory dryer.

An inexpensive way to increase Dallis grass in pastures this fall is to mow old stands of the grass and spread the hay lightly over areas where new growth is desired, according to Mr. James H. Wood, Soil Conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service in the North Central District.

This method, tried out by farmers in soil conservation district, has resulted in stands of Dallis grass as good as could be obtained from sowing clean seed.

When scattered over a pasture in bunches the Dallis grass will carry sufficient seed for a thick stand next spring. The hay can be taken directly from the areas where it is harvested and scattered over the pastures this fall, or it can be cured, stored, and scattered next spring, Mr. Wood points out. Seed may also be harvested by hand stripping, or by mowing, curing, and threshing.

Farmers who wish to establish Dallis grass in their pasture have an unusual opportunity to harvest seed this fall as the seed crop this year is the best that has been produced in recent years, and appears to be less affected by ergot than usual. Seed can be harvested from roadsides, vacant lots around town, or from lowland areas wherever there is a predominance of Dallis grass in the mixture.

THE FIRST THROUGH TRAIN ON THE CINCINNATI-ATLANTA LINE ENROUTE TO NASHVILLE, LOUISVILLE AND ST. LOUIS

THE FIRST THROUGH TRAIN ON THE CINCINNATI-ATLANTA LINE ENROUTE TO NASHVILLE, LOUISVILLE AND ST. LOUIS

HALF A CENTURY OLD AND STILL GROWING

On March 10, 1905, the L. & N. secured control of the Atlanta, Knoxville and Northern Railway; the first of several steps which were to culminate in a new line between Cincinnati and Atlanta, a distance of 489 miles. On April 3, 1902, it formed the Knoxville, LaFollette and Jellico Railroad for the building of a 75-mile line between Jellico and Knoxville, Tenn., and exactly three years later the first through trains were run between Cincinnati and Atlanta. The line traversed much rugged country and its Hiwassee Loop, which encircles Bald Mountain, is said to be the third longest railroad loop in the world. The subsequent construction of a "new" line from a point near what is now Etowah, Tenn., to Cartersville, Ga., in April, 1906, resulted in the birth of Etowah at the junction of the old and new lines. To underwrite the costs involved in the creation of this track, the L. & N. in the early part of 1902 issued new stock in the amount of $5,000,000. As a result of a coup by certain Wall Street financiers, involving the purchase of this stock, control of the road passed to J. P. Morgan and Company, who eventually owned or controlled 306,000 of the 600,000 shares outstanding. Subsequently, in October 1902, J. P. Morgan and Company sold their holdings to the Atlantic Coast Line, giving that railroad ownership of 51 per cent of the L. & N. capital stock, a condition that endures to this day.

A reorganization of the general immigration and industrial department, resulting in a more intensive effort to attract settlers to Southern Alabama, and the opening of sections of Alabama's Warrior Coal Field, highlighted 1903.

The policy of the Louisville & Nashville has never been to let traffic develop of its own accord. Rather, it has created traffic by building new lines into undeveloped sections and by a policy of generous encouragement to the settlers, farmers and industries located along its line. It thus has been chiefly responsible for the development and growth of many of the sections and communities the L. & N. serves.

Stonings To Think

By C. B. Riddle

They were found by a policeman in a park—just a boy and a dog, alone but not lonesome.

You don't get lonesome with a good companion by your side. And this applies with equal meaning to a boy and a dog.

Both were hungry, but the boy did not cry and the dog did not whine. The cop who found the urchin and his dog wanted to help the boy, but not the dog. He would take one but not the other.

But the boy refused to go without the dog. The dog refused to remain without the boy. The test of their companionship was real.

Our sympathies go out to a hungry child, but admiration must be doubly added when the lad is unwilling to break a companionship for his stomach's sake.

Many older chaps cannot hang up such a record. They weaken on companionship when the battle gets thick between stomach and faithfulness.

But a dog affectionately follows his master through thick and thin, whether that master be prince or pauper.

The boy the policeman found could not feed his dog, but he still loved him. This the dog knew.

The boy won, so did the dog. The crowd dispersed, having witnessed a heart-grIPPING love scene which all the talent in Hollywood could not surpass.

New Orleans, Louisiana, has the distinction of having a monument that is unique in the world. Comparatively few people have ever heard of it, and fewer still have seen it.

It is the likeness of Margaret Hauger, orphan, wife, widow, landress, businesswoman, angel of mercy, benefactor and philanthropist.

Few people in the world have filled so many roles of importance and greatness. But Margaret of New Orleans, as her name is recorded in history, won these titles with honor. Known only as Margaret, that name and that alone is carved on the monument in memory of her greatness and goodness.

Margaret was born in Baltimore, Maryland, and soon became an orphan, married in her teens, and then her young husband's health failed. The couple moved to New Orleans in the hope of the husband's restored health, but fate decreed otherwise.

Left a widow and penniless, she became a landress, and step by step won the other roles in which she served. She prospered, but with her money she did charity work, built orphanages and aided those founded by others.

When life's evening shadows began to fall, Margaret made a will, which was signed only by her cross-mark, for she could not write. That will left her all a modest estate, to the orphanages of New Orleans.

When Margaret died her body was followed to the cemetery by the orphans of eleven institutions, and thousands representing all walks of life. Soon after that occasion, the city erected a monument to its greatest benefactor.

There are other Margarets in the world today, millions of orphans, and cities yet to be touched by such kind-

FSA Plans Program To Stabilize Farm Operations In County

A program to stabilize farm operations in Chilton County, by aiding landowner and tenant alike through lease agreements of mutual advantage has been formulated after a series of meetings of Farm Security Administration officials in Region V.

"The goal," announced FSA Supervisor Marvin Durbin, "is a minimum of ten long-term leases, including definite provisions for farm and home improvement, in each county of the state. These model leases will be used to demonstrate that only through this security can the proper conservation of both human and natural resources be obtained."

These model leases will include clauses seeking to:

1. Compensate tenants for permanent improvements, either by allowances on rent or partial repayment.
2. Make use of soil conservation opportunities.
3. Provide for repair and improvement of housing standards.
4. Provide for woodland management.

5. Assure responsibility of both landlord and tenant.

6. Establish the debt-paying capacity of each farm and provide a proper farm and home plan to assure adequate income to meet all obligations.

Under provisions of the long-term leases, the FSA will offer two plans for improvement loans to tenants. Under one, the tenant will borrow the money and when the lease expires, the owner would pay him for the improvements. Five per cent a year depreciation will be calculated. Under the second plan, funds for improvements would be paid to the tenant, with the landowner repaying the money in ten installments, plus five per cent interest, out of the rent.

Minimum housing standards in the lease would require screens and proper repair for doors and windows; sanitary toilets, pure water supply, sound floors and foundations, good roofs, safe chimneys, adequate sleeping quarters, shelter for livestock and poultry, kitchens equipped for food storage and utensils, etc.

Supervisor Durbin stated also that an outstanding provision of the model lease is agreement of the landowner to give the tenant free use of sufficient pasture and garden space.

"The District Farm Debt Adjustment Specialist will work closely with the counties on this tenure improvement program of long-reaching value," Mr. Durbin continued.

AAA CHANGE MADE

The AAA order of August 12 notifying counties not to issue purchase orders for legume seed after that date unless confirmation of purchases was made prior to this time has been revoked. County AAA offices can now issue purchase orders regardless of purchase date of seed so dealers who bought seed after August 12 can now furnish them as a material under the AAA program, says A. W. Jones, State AAA administrator.

There are twenty-five different types of ships on which a U. S. Navy man may sail.

Any capable recruit in the U. S. Navy can learn how to make the standard 16 knots and splices in an hour or two, but it takes him two weeks to learn how and when to use them, and to know them by name.

MORE COVER CROPS

Farmers in Alabama and 15 other southern and east central states are being urged to expand this fall's cover crop program to include other cover crops than Austrian winter peas and hairy vetch, crimson clover, white clover and burr clover. Local announcements will be made showing what crops are approved in each state and county.

Registrants Should Keep In Touch With His Local Board

Important personal reasons why a Selective Service registrant should cooperate closely with his local board were stressed today in a statement by General Ben M. Smith, State Director of Selective Service.

Gen. Smith pointed out that the registrant's full cooperation with his local board not only expedites the operation of the Selective Service System, but also directly benefits him. "The importance of the registrant keeping in touch with his local board and immediately notifying it when he changes his address is obvious," said. "The registrant who fails in this not only violates the law and places himself in needless jeopardy of fine or imprisonment, or both, but also does himself an injustice and causes the local board much unnecessary trouble."

Gen. Smith also emphasized the fact that registrants can save both themselves and their local boards much inconvenience and possible grief by exercising care in filling out the questionnaire for classification.

"Every local board has an advisory board," he said, "and the registrant who is in doubt as to how to answer any given question should consult this board and follow its instructions. That's what the advisory board is for."

Any registrant who believes he has been placed in the wrong classification and wants to make an appeal, the Director pointed out, has at his service the Government appeal agent attached to his local board. This Government appeal agent is charged with the duty of protecting the interests of the registrant, as well as those of the Government, and the duty to assist in making his appeal.

Here's a typical day's menu in the U. S. Navy:

Breakfast: Fresh fruit, Vienna Sausage, with Tomato Sauce, assorted cereals, griddle cakes with syrup, bread, butter and coffee.

Dinner: Vegetable soup, pot roast of beef, succotash, mashed potatoes, salad, bread, butter, coffee, chocolate cake, and ice cream.

Supper: Liver and bacon, string beans, steamed rice, salad, stewed prunes, bread, jam and tea.

Surprise! Private Car Driver Gets the Blame

Those who would believe that drivers of taxis, buses and trucks were to blame for 1940's disastrous highway accident record will be surprised to learn that passenger cars were involved in almost 80 per cent of the fatal accidents last year. An even greater percentage of victims in non-fatal crashes were of the pleasure-car type.

These facts are revealed in a new booklet entitled "Here Today—" just released by The Travelers Insurance Company in the interest of street and highway safety.

Only six-tenths of one per cent of the fatal accidents last year involved taxicabs, and buses were involved in but 1.2 per cent. Motorcycles were involved in 2.1 per cent. Commercial vehicles of all types were involved in 17.7 per cent of the fatal crashes and in 12.2 per cent of those causing non-fatal injuries.

The new safety booklet shows that of the 36,870 vehicles in all of 1940's fatal accidents, 28,700 were passenger cars, 6,630 were trucks, and 1,580 were taxicabs, buses, motorcycles and other miscellaneous vehicles.

SERVICES AT COURTHOUSE

We wish to announce through your paper that our courthouse services will start again next Sunday, Oct. 12. Due to the many singings, homecomings, etc., held at the various churches over the county during the summer months, our services were discontinued for a while. But if the Lord is willing we will start again next Sunday with more vim and courage than ever to make these meetings a success for our Savior. The same schedule will be used as before with the exception of the starting time. We have been starting previously at 2:00 p. m. but will start Sunday at 1:30 p. m. with the usual hour of singing followed by a good old-time testimonial service, and this will be followed by sermon. Everybody is invited to come out and help us.—Rev. Leonard Hand, Rev. Floyd Smith.

All men in the U. S. Navy and Naval Reserve are paid twice a month. They receive no coins but are paid to the nearest dollar.

NAVY DOES NOT DEMAND HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATION

Since Secretary Knox announced the enlistment drive for Uncle Sam's new Two-Ocean Navy several weeks ago, many young men have asked if they were eligible to enlist without a high school education.

Mr. A. L. Farley, Commander Clanton Post American Legion answers this important question for the young men of Clanton County.

"Navy enlistees do not have to be high school graduates," said Commander Farley. "Any ambitious and patriotic young fellow who wants to serve his country has that opportunity now by joining the United States Navy or Naval Reserve. Of course, he must be of average intelligence, good character and be able to pass certain physical and mental examinations. Now, more than ever before, the Navy needs men of that type."

"All applicants, whether or not they have high school diplomas, are given an elementary examination containing about 100 questions," explained Commander Farley. "Those receiving a grade of 50 per cent or more satisfy Navy educational standards."

"There are certain advantages for the high school graduate in the Navy." He has a wider background to call upon in earning advancement in position and pay. For example, men who are proficient in English may be sent to one of the Navy's communications or clerical schools. Recruits with a knowledge or aptitude for handling tools might be marked for trade or engineering courses. Men with college educations may qualify for midshipmen's training courses in the Naval Reserve and after their schooling period they will report for active duty as officers with the rating of ensigns. "The Navy has four excellent trade schools to which new recruits in either the regular Navy or the Naval Reserve may be sent after a training period, providing they pass entrance examinations with sufficiently high grades. At these schools they will be trained in any one of nearly fifty skilled trades or vocations to which their aptitudes suit them and will receive free schooling valued at hundreds of dollars in addition to their regular Navy pay. Such an education is valuable for advancement in the Navy and in later civilian life," he concluded.

More Sheep For Alabama Farms

Alabama's 50,000 head of sheep should be materially increased for National Defense.

Sheep, when given proper attention, will usually give higher returns on investment than any other class of livestock, reports W. H. Gregory, extension livestock specialist, Auburn. Sheep do best when furnished green feed during the winter. Penning them in a lot near the house and supplying ewes with bells prevent losses from dogs.

FEEDER CALF SALES

Some $200,000 were paid Alabama livestock producers for feeder calves at auction sales at Selma, Demopolis and Epes the past week. The sales were sponsored by the Black Belt Feeder Calf Association.

MORE LIVESTOCK NEEDED

More farmers should follow the practice of producing workstock as a sideline to farming. Statistics show that the number of workstock in Alabama has decreased since 1935 from 322,000 to 316,000 and the value per head has increased from $113 to $132. These figures explain why Alabama farmers have to go out of the state when they get ready to buy their stock.

ALABAMA LEADING STATE IN SWEET POTATO PRODUCTION

Official estimates are that Alabama is leading all other states in the United States in producing sweet potatoes this year.

Alabama's production is set at 8,330,000 bushels or an increase of 3,410,000 bushels over last year's crop which is due to a very favorable year for production this year and a poor one last year.

The production for the United States is 19 per cent higher than 1940 and one per cent higher than the ten year average production 1940 to 1939.

Battleships in the Navy are named after states, cruisers after cities, aircraft carriers after historic vessels or naval battles, and destroyers after heroic officers and enlisted men of the Navy and marine corps, former Secretaries of the Navy, members of Congress and prominent inventors.

INFLATION CONTROL

Police Administrator Henderson, speaking in New York, said that the country is now experiencing the "jagged, irregular price advances" with which inflation starts. Unless inflation is restricted, he said, it will prevent arming and undermine the priorities system because "the getting of materials will depend not on the buyer's need but the seller's greed."

He said a doubling of prices means a reduction in value by 50 per cent of every insurance policy, annuity, savings account, pension or other form of savings.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, speaking in Chicago, said the Treasury is anxious to divert into defense stamps and bonds spending produced by pay increases and bonuses. He suggested every Christmas bonus be paid in defense bonds or stamps.

Partially to combat inflation, the President plans to ask Congress to extend the Social Security program to 80,000,000 persons—double the number now covered. Increased payroll taxes under the program would remove additional funds from circulation.

TAXATION

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, in his Chicago speech, also said defense expenditures are "inadequate" and the 1941 tax bill was "a good start" but not large enough to raise the necessary revenue, check inflation or take the profit out of war. He said the U. S. is trying to be the arsenal of democracy by devoting only 20 per cent of factory and mining output to defense, only 30 per cent of durable goods produced, only 16 per cent of national income.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue announced it will prosecute dealers attempting to make large profits by misrepresenting the new Federal taxes as larger than they are or by pretending to absorb the taxes themselves when actually passing them on to the consumer.

FARMING OUT

OPM Contract Distribution Division Director Odum called on smaller manufacturers to "drum up a sub-contract on your own, if possible," and asked larger manufacturers to pass on their backlog of work to small concerns facing shutdown for lack of civilian materials or defense orders.

Bradley D. Nash, of the Financial Section of OPM's Contract Distribution Division, told the American Bankers Association in Chicago the Division field offices will be prepared to consult and advise prime or subcontracting groups and their financial representatives to inform of availability of properly equipped subcontractors, location of machinery and other equipment which may be required. Mr. Odum said as many as 200 offices might be opened.

Undersecretary of Navy Forrestal instructed all bureaus and offices of the Navy and the Marine Corps in ways to help spread Navy defense work among smaller manufacturers.

EMPLOYMENT, LABOR TRAINING AND SUPPLY

Labor Secretary Perkins said total non-agricultural employment of 39,542,000 last month was 3,640,000 workers more than in August, 1940, and 1,166,000 more than in August, 1929. Miss Perkins said the "unusual" demand in the canning industry is giving the country its "most extraordinary any expansion of employment in his story."

The OPM Labor Division reported it has given assistance to almost 1,800 defense contractors employing more than 2,500,000 workers during its first year, and has established 22 District Offices. The WPA said its in-plant defense training program, which trains workers for four weeks in plants which usually later hire them, is operated in 72 cities and 24 States. Federal Justice Administrator McNutt announced shortages of qualified workers exist in 126 of 514 occupations selected as essential to defense, and are expected in an additional 38 occupations before November 1.

SHIPS

The Navy announced 38 keels were laid and 26 ships launched from September 1 to October 3. The Department predicted "even greater acceleration in October." The Maritime Commission chartered two ships to the Irish Free State to be under Irish flag with Irish crews, and chartered three more to carry nitrates to the U. S. from South America.

CIVILIAN DEFENSE

The Department of Justice announced the OCD and FBI have completed plans for "FBI Civilian Defense Courses" in 55 U. S. cities and territories where FBI field headquarters offices are located. The courses will train police and other officials for various law enforcement duties in emergencies. OCD Director Laguardia said 85 hospitals have started courses in the program to train 100,000 nurses' aides and 153 Red Cross chapters have also started their courses. He announced a committee of public and parochial school administration is preparing a manual of instructions to protect lives of elementary and high school children and school buildings in event of emergency, and the Advisory Committee on Civilian Fire Defense is studying auxiliary fire-fighting apparatus.

ARMY

Lieut. Gen McNair, director of the Louisiana maneuvers, blamed officer leadership for a "mess of faults"—including weak discipline—revealed in the war games. He said leadership would be improved by removal of unqualified officers but this does not mean there will be a "purge." War Secretary Stimson denied rumors there is a plan to reduce the Army's man-power to free more equipment for Britain and Russia. He said "our Army has an enormous task that is no longer confined to the defense of the U. S. but has the work of manning a large line of outposts." He noted present Army strength is merely 1.4 per cent of U. S. population and about the size of the quickly-defeated armies of Holland and Belgium.

Every large ship in the U. S. Navy and many of the smaller ones publish a daily press sheet in mimeographed form; the items are picked up by radio.

DEPT. OF AGRICULTURE ADVISES SAVING SEED

Farmers who are harvesting annual lespedeza for hay will find it advisable to save as much acreage as possible above their actual hay needs to furnish a seed crop for next year's planting, says Mr. James H. Wood, local representative of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in the North Central Soil Conservation District.

Those who are able to save more seed than required for their own needs will probably find a strong demand next spring for any surplus they may have, Mr. Wood pointed out. The applies to sericea seed.

In that connection, he said, every available acre of sericea regardless of size, can profitably be harvested for seed.

It is also highly advisable to save sufficient cowpeas and soybean seed for interplanting with corn (and in sandy areas to harvest and amply supply of crutalaria seed for interplanting with corn and for planting on small grain.) Saving of Dallis grass seed, which formerly has been largely imported, is especially important during present unsettled world market conditions.

Farmers who are unfamiliar with seed harvesting methods, can obtain information from County Agent, Mr. Pat H. Smith or from the local Soil Conservation Service office, Camp SCS-7 Clanton, Alabama, he said.

"Splinter protection," a new advance in the form of topside armor, is being installed on many of the ships of the U. S. Navy to protect gun crews, observers and signalmen.

AN EXCURSION TO THE WATER WORKS

At the beginning of this school year the sixth grade of the Clanton Elementary School decided to study water. Almost instantly we decided we should like to visit the water works. Each person wrote a list of questions he, or she, wanted to know. We used several books and found answers for most of our questions. Those left over, we decided to ask at the water works. On Thursday we wrote Mr. Stapp to ask his permission to go. He wrote us and told us Mr. Thompson would show us through the water works.

On Friday we organized ourselves into four groups. There were about eleven in a group. Each member of a group stayed with his, or her, group on the trip.

Tuesday, the twenty-third was the big day. We had a program for some teachers from the county about our former trips and how we decided to study water. The teachers and our class started walking to the water works about nine o'clock. When we got to the water works, Mr. Thompson met us and first answered some questions read by a committee.

After he answered some of our questions he took us on a tour of the water works.

Mr. Thompson tests the pure water seven times a day. Alum, lime and chlorine are the chemicals used to purify our water. The water is run through big rocks, little rocks, and sand to clean it. The dirt is removed from the vat every three months. The water plant was built in 1939 at a cost of $81,000, of which $45,000 was borrowed. From 1943 until 1953 $1,000 a year will be paid. From 1954 until 1964 $2,000 a year will be paid. From 1965 until 1968 $3,000 a year will be paid.

Someone thanked Mr. Thompson and we started back to school. At a filling station we got drinks. They really were good after our walk on such a hot day!

—JOE MULLINS.

THE WATER PLANT OF CLANTON

About nine o'clock Tuesday, Sept. 23, we started to the water plant of Clanton. We stopped in front of Mrs. Upchurch's home to look at her flowers. While we were stopped we rested some. Then we went on to the water plant. As we started to cross the street we had two boys to hold out their hands so the cars would stop.

When we got to the water plant Allen introduced the class to Mr. Thompson. Then Mr. Thompson took us upstairs. He showed us three machines, two of them put lime into the water and the other one puts alum into the water. He also showed us the filters. He said they were about four feet deep in water. The vats were about twelve feet deep. Mr. Thompson told us the tank of purified water would hold 150,000 gallons. He said the pumps would each pump 500 gallons of water per minute. The vats are cleaned out every three months. The mud in one of the vats was about four inches deep.

On the way back to school we stopped at a station to get drinks. Nearly everyone got drinks. About two or three got milk. We stayed there about thirty minutes. Then we went on back to school. When we got to school we started to work on our letters.

Permanent Pastures

Now is a good time to plant permanent pastures on well followed land if pastures have not already been planted.

The first of October is the best time to plant orchard grass, Kentucky bluegrass, redtop, white clover and black medic. Dallis grass and lespedeza can be added the latter part of February or the first of March.

Food Production

The greatest national food producing campaign in history, in which Alabama will play its part, has been launched by the Alabama agricultural agencies. Every farmer will be contacted to determine what he can do toward reaching the goals.

Good Cotton Seed

Keep breeder cottonseed pure is the advice of J. T. Belue, cotton improvement specialist of the Alabama Extension Service. Arrange gin and get in touch with your neighbors and gin on the same days. Save enough good seed, absolutely pure, for your next year's crop and some for sale, he adds.

IMPERATIVE ALABAMA GROW OWN WINTER LEGUME SEED

Auburn, Ala.—A purchase program assuring legume seed producers good returns for 1942 production makes it most important for Alabama farmers to plant patches for producing winter legume seed.

To encourage seed producers of the Pacific Northwest to increase by 50 per cent their 1942 acreage to be harvested for seed in 1942, the Commodity Credit Corporation has announced that it will support prices for top grade seed as follows:

Austrian winter peas, 5c a pound hairy vetch, 10c; Williams' velvet 6.5c; common vetch 5c; crimson clover, 10c (11.5c of Mississippi river); and ryegrass, 5c.

Seed purchased by Commodity Credit Corporation will be transferred to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration to be offered farmers in Southern and East Central States in lieu of payments under the Agricultural Conservation Program.

"The present defense emergency is increasing the importance of the winter legume seed program," Harry W. Schuler, Acting Administrator of the AAA said in commenting on the announcement. "In the first place, the war has entirely shut off from American buyers the European seed producing areas which, during recent years, have furnished United States with as much as 50 per cent of the crimson clover and 40 per cent of the hairy vetch seed.

"Secondly, the use of leguminous cover crops will release for defense needs large amounts of nitrates hitherto used as fertilizer.

"In addition to these two factors the conservation phases of the farm program have resulted in greatly increased use of winter cover crops and indications are that the use will continue to increase.

Production of armor, guns and projectiles for the Navy has increased more than eightfold, according to a announcement from the Navy Department recently. The cost — $236,765,000.

HE SMOKY LEADS

By ALAN LE MAY W.N.U. Release

Dusty King and Lew Gordon had built up a vast string of ranches. King was killed by his powerful and unscrupulous competitor, Bill Roper. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, was determined to avenge his death in spite of the opposition of his sweetheart, CHAPTER XIX—Continued

To Roper's right, surprisingly close, came a tall, slender figure. He would neither see the man who had fired nor guess his target. He waited five minutes, gun ready, then stood up and moved his pony down-slope into a shallow draw which it was hidden by the brush. Moving cautiously, he proceeded north along the cut, seeking the position of the man who had fired.

Through the hillside brush a figure moved, crouching so low that his dark shape resembled a bear. After a moment Bill Roper was able to make out that the approaching man carried a light carbine.

The man with the carbine moved swiftly down the hillside, sliding on the hard crust of the snow, but surprisingly slow in the brush. The man watched him as he moved, angling toward the bend where Roper stood. Bill Roper pulled himself out of the gully. He was crouched in dense brush, gun in hand, as the scout appeared below him.

Roper stood up. "Steady," he said. "The man in the draw jumped as if he had been struck; but as he raised his hands he straightened so that Roper saw his face.

His captive was Shoshone Wilce. "By God," said Shoshone, "I never saw so glad to see anybody in my life!"

Roper's voice bit like frosty ice. "You know where she is?" "Yeah," said Shoshone. "Yeah, I know where she is."

Roper dropped into the gully to start close into Shoshone's face. "Is she alive? Is she all right?" "Oh, she's sure," Wilce assured him. "She's alive, all right. Don't seem like she's hurt any."

"Don't seem like?" Roper repeated. "Damn your hide, where is she?"

"Bill, seems like them buzzards have her down there at that cabin, and never leave her loose."

"Who won't?" "Bill, I don't know who."

"Well, how the devil did she get there?" "Me," Shoshone said. He met Roper's eye bleakly. Obviously, he knew that he was in trouble here. "I brought her."

"Why in all?" "She would have come anyway, Bill. She was dead set on locating her. She didn't have nobody else to ride with her. I figured you'd sooner try to bring her direct to you, so somebody would be with her, than have her wandering loose in the country by herself."

"Barrender in Miles told me you were here, and we rode here. And then—then—"

"Bill, then—what?" "As I come into the valley," Shoshone said, "seemed to me like something was wrong. But I couldn't make out what. We came up to the cabin careful and slow, in the dark. But they seen us coming and they said for us, I guess. Before we knew what had busted, they gunned her pony down, and they drilled mine twice so bad that I had to turn around loose. Most likey he's dead now. I—" Shoshone hesitated.

"And you run out and left her," Bill filled in for him. "I swear, I wouldn't have done nothing like that, not for no amount. Thing was, they was all around me; I couldn't see where to shoot or who they was. I figured first it was your own boys, making a mistake, and after I seen 'em, I just figured to keep in a fighting position, you might say, and close in first chance. Only—"

"Only you never saw any chance," Roper said with contempt. "Well, no; there's seven of 'em down there, Bill, and they keep an awful steady watch. And I been watching 'em steady ever since. Sometimes I get in a long shot at one or another of 'em. This carbine don't carry so very good, but I plugged two of 'em; don't know how bad."

"How do you know she wasn't shot or hurt when her horse went down?" Roper demanded. "By God, Shoshone, if you let anything happen to that girl—" "They let her walk outside sometimes during the day," Shoshone said. "That's how I seen she's all right."

"Can you make out who the bunch was that shot her?" "I figure they're some Thorpe gun squad, out after your scalp. I figure they was laying to gun you. And I know that they got the girl, I figure they aim to hold her for bait, and of—"

Shoshone tell silent, and Roper, bent in thought, let him rest. "You're most likely right," Roper said more slowly at last. "There's four or five of these Thorpe was parties out after me; and this could easy be true. But of all the infernal luck I ever saw—What did Jody want with Did she tell you?"

"Thorpe has made up his mind to kill her old man," Shoshone said. "I went and told her, because I thought you'd want her to know, so she could maybe look out for him some. But the old man wouldn't

"They're taking an awful chance," Roper said, iron death in his eye. "If I rode in here, warned, with my wild bunch—"

"It ain't no bad chance they're taking," Shoshone contradicted. "Night and day their outposts are out. Two men can check the whole country daytimes, so they can see when you come in. They only got here because you come up through the timber to the south, on the trail from Miles—the last way they'd figure you'd come. "Maybe there's some way we could take it, so they'd give up and clear out. I figure they'd leave the girl behind if ever they set out to run."

"I'm going down and smoke 'em out," Roper said through his teeth. "I'm going to smoke 'em out before the sun ever comes up again, and you're going to help me."

Shoshone nodded. "If we tackled 'em just before daylight, when the outpost is strong and the cabin is weak—"

"They talked it over for a long time. In the hidden gulch where Shoshone had been hiding up they made coffee and cooked meat, and completed their plans."

"We can get in," was Shoshone's verdict at last. "We can get in, and we can take the cabin. But God knows how we're ever going to get out."

"He've got a plan for that," Roper said. "We can get in," was Shoshone's verdict at last. "We can get in, and we can take the cabin. But God knows how we're ever going to get out."

ONE LINE OF DEFENSE THAT Must REMAIN IMPREGNABLE

Of vital importance to the South's security is the dependability of its far-reaching telephone lines.

On their constantly maintained efficiency depends continuity and flexibility of communication between military, industrial, and civilian forces necessary to the nation's defense.

In this crisis, Southern Bell is faced with the three-fold task of giving "all-out" service to defense, industry, and the public—a task requiring every ounce of its resources.

In most cities and towns in the nine southern states we serve, the demand upon our services is without precedent. In many of these places, mass troop and civilian concentrations, in addition to increased industrial demands, have made the continuation of normal telephone service difficult.

In these critical times, telephone workers ask your cooperation and appreciative understanding of the problems which confront them, knowing that you, too, are "all-out" for defense, and that it is our common problem to keep telephone lines of defense impregnable.

"NAVY INTELLIGENCE"

Is it necessary to be a high school graduate in order to enlist in the Navy?

No. Navy enlistees need not be high school graduates. All applicants will be given an examination containing approximately 100 questions. A grade of 50 per cent or better on this examination is sufficiently high to pass the Navy educational standards. However, a high school education will be valuable to the seaman during his Navy enlistment.

If I enlist in the Navy or Naval Reserve, will I be sent to a Navy Trade School?

All new recruits are sent to one of four Naval Training Stations and after a training period they make examinations for entrance into Navy Trade Schools. Those recruits who pass their examinations with sufficiently high grades are sent to Navy Trade Schools before assignment to the fleet. While attending these schools, they will receive regular Navy pay and charges regulated at $1500.

What is the greatest possible pay I can expect to earn during my first term of enlistment? It is possible to earn as much as $126 a month by the end of your first term of enlistment, and remember that your clothing, lodging, medical and dental care are all supplied free.

After I have served my term of enlistment, what benefits do I get for re-enlistment?

Depending on your rate and length of service, you can get a cash bonus up to $300 plus 30 days leave with pay.

What does the term "ash can" mean in the Navy?

An "ash can" is a slang term applied to the depth charge used to combat submarines. The average "ash can" is a container filled with approximately 300 pounds of T.N.T. and can be dropped overboard from a ship and so controlled as to explode at depths ranging from 35 to 300 feet. These are generally carried by the fast ships in the fleet, as a boat drops its depth charges, it is liable to explode at 70 feet depth most away from the explosion area at a speed of 25 knots or more. These "ash cans" are either rolled off the stern or shot from "y-guns" which hurl one right and one left simultaneously.

BIRTH RATE TURNED UPWARD

Montgomery, Ala.—After dropping steadily for two centuries, the long-range United States birth rate has at last turned sharply upward, according to information received by the State Department of Health from the Bureau of the Census of the United States Department of Commerce and made public today.

"Provisional tabulations show 2,353,988 births reported in 1940—an increase of 91,260 over final 1939 figures," the Census Bureau statement declared. "The birth rate per 1,000 population jumped from 17.3 to 17.9."

PLEASANT HILL

There will be a cemetery cleaning here Thursday week, October 16th. Everybody has an invitation to come and bring your tools to work with.

"Imagine me, steering a Destroyer!"

"And I've had two pay raises in only eight months! I'll say you can't beat Uncle Sam's Navy!"

YOU couldn't ask for a greater thrill than that which a fellow gets when he comes back home wearing a trim Navy uniform. The folks crowd around. They all want to know where you've been, what you've done. And man, do you have stories to tell!

GREATEST LIFE IN THE WORLD

You're proud. And you should be. For you've been leading the greatest life in the world. And it's a thrill to tell about it, too. A thrill to see the admiration in the eyes of the One and Only Girl as you tell about the first time you steered a Destroyer. Or handled a P.T. Boat at more than 45 miles per hour. Or stepped out in front of your shipmates to receive your first promotion.

And with that promotion came an increase in pay. And there were more to come. Second Class. First Class. And then Chief Petty Officer. Many might even go to Annapolis. Or to Pensacola with the flying cadets!

Exciting? You bet, and fun too. Something doing all the time. Real he-man's stuff. Boxing. Baseball. Football. Swimming. AND MOVIES... previews, too!

ENROLL IN THE NAVAL RESERVE ... BE RELEASED AFTER THE EMERGENCY

The Secretary of the Navy has announced: "All men now enlisting in the Naval Reserve will be retained on active Navy duty throughout the period of the national emergency, but they will be released to inactive duty as soon after the emergency as their services can be spared, regardless of the length of time remaining in their enlistment. Remember—the regular Navy and Naval Reserve offer you the same travel, training, promotions, pay increases. Physical requirements in the Naval Reserve are more liberal.

Rev. B. Lawrence former pastors of Mulberry church.

For the drinks and the seating accommodations we commend the W. M. S. for their excellent work. Such a spiritual gathering will help to get one's balances adjusted and restore unto him a sense of the true values of life. The day gave us a grand and glorious religious experience. Rev. Marion Mims suggested that this be an annual event of the church. The grounds were thronged with familiar faces and old fashion christian fellowship. Those absent missed a rare experience. The long to be remembered day was brought to a close by the singing of the sacred hymn, "When the Roll is called up Yonder, I'll be there." The assembly was closed by prayer by the pastor, Rev. Paul Oden.

J. R. HARDY HAS NEW MODERN FEED CRUSHER

Mr. J. R. Hardy has just recently installed a new power unit for his feed crusher and grist mill out in West End, Clanton. He is now in position to do all that Fall crushing you may have promptly. His crew of men, including "Uncle Bill" Daniel, really "Know their Stuff" when it comes to crushing feed and grinding corn.

Within 4 months after enlistment, U. S. Navy recruits automatically receive a 70 per cent increase in pay and a promotion to a higher rating.

The South. The welcome address was made by the devout and consecrated pastor, Rev. Paul Oden. The response was given by Mrs. J. P. Hayes, of Clanton. The long looked for message of the eleven o'clock hour was a spiritual feast indeed. Above all things Mulberry church takes great pride in the fact that the Williams boys were converted and led to the ministry within her walls. We sat together in heavenly places and feasted on manna from above. Our mountain top experiences were glorious and we like Peter, wanted to remain there; but we remembered the words of the Master when he told the disciples: "Son go labour in my vineyard." The jammed audience listened reverently to the address of Dr. J. O. Williams, the business secretary of the great Southern Baptist convention.

The noon hour was filled with genuine wholesome fellowship in which old acquaintances were renewed and friendship strengthened. The outdoor table seemed to groan under the bountiful spread. Many happy faces were mingled amid the array of assorted colors of clothing on this late summer day. It would bring to one's mind the feeding of 5,000 for the hostesses of the day seemed to have as much to carry home as they brought.

At the call to worship in the afternoon, Rev. Hardin, pastor of Isabella M. E. church led a very impressive devotion. The marvelous, glorious music seemed to sing us into the kingdom of God. Brief addresses were given by Rev. Grady Williams and

We want to thank everybody who gave flowers, also the men who came down from Birmingham and showed their kindness toward us and the beautiful flowers they gave, and everybody that spoke a kind word of comfort to us in the time of our bereavement. We thank the doctors and nurses for their kindness, J. Mell Martin and Sons for what they done and the kind words from them. We thank Brother Hughes and the quartet for their singing. May the Lord bless everyone.

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

All of Clanton was in turmoil Wednesday... the citizenry was jittery... stranger coming through would have noticed at once that something grave consequence to the community had happened... we noticed it and started an investigation... about ten-thirty we learned the trouble, the coffee urn at the Dixie Cafe had gone on the blink.

Clanton boasts two policemen on duty Saturday afternoon now on the block between 6th and 7th Streets on Second Avenue... the busiest block in town and to our way of thinking, one of the best things that our city fathers have done yet... those cars should be kept moving.

J. G. Newton, down at Mitchell place is psychic or something... Sunday morning he was telling us about the awful eye-sore at the corner of Second Avenue and 7th Street in that old building, "Temporary Home of the First National Bank" when he comes along Monday morning and we find a complete remodeling job going on... and while on the subject we went to thank Mr. Newton and Mr. Hollis for a wonderful day Sunday. B. N. Studdard and Ben were host to a large number of friends from the city and the Power Company officials were kind enough to give us the Guest House for the day. Lots happened down there that day that we could talk about this week but we promised to make it a day off and forget it all.

Yes, air, two wagons had a wreck in front of the Court House Saturday afternoon... both two-horse wagons too... didn't seem to be near as much damage done however, as when two cars run together... no radiators busted or tires busted... a couple of the mules bent their fenders, though.

You won't find it in the social columns this week but Otto and Betty Jones had visitors last Saturday morning... they were not at home and the fellow didn't leave his calling card but he had 'borrow' some mighty valuable silverware.

Christine Conway is going to make The Birmingham News about next Sunday... Geo. Nagle is running a romance story about her and her flying abilities... seems that she learned to fly a plane before she learned to drive an automobile... Geo. took a lot of pictures out at the Airport Tuesday morning... oh yes, and there will be another familiar mug in the picture... her instructor, Charles Wade.

What is this we hear about Mullins and Scott moving into new quarters about the first of January... we understand that they will go in to the building now occupied by the Parisian Store.

Our good friend, Parker Taylor and the Missus, Agnes, have taken over the management and ownership of City Grill... we thought "Bulldog" was doing a pretty good job but he found greener fields somewhere else and now we believe Mrs. Taylor is doing even a better job... anyway, here luck to them in their new business.

Here's Jimmie Bell again but doggone it, we can't help it, he done it... we're gonna get him... Jimmie is furnishing football lineups again this week for the high school game Friday night between C. C. H. S. and Prattville... the cards came in handy for the older fans who do not know the players and their numbers... Prof. Hicks also helped out in getting the information contained thereon.

YOUNG PEOPLE RALLY AT THORSBY NEXT SUNDAY

There will be a young people's rally next Sunday, October 19, at Thorsby Baptist Church at 2:00 o'clock. The program is as follows: "Sweet Hour of Prayer," Thorsby Girls. "The Secret of Effective Prayer," Annette Merchant. "Praying Hands," Liberty Hill. "Beautiful Garden of Prayer," Ruby Raybon. Story of the season of prayer for Foreign Missions, Bethsalem. Everybody is asked to come to this meeting.

Home of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Jones Is Burglarized

Burglars entered the home of the Otto Jones' last Saturday morning, before 8:00 worth of silverware was taken. According to Mrs. Jones the burglar must have watched until she left for work and knowing no one was there ransacked the place. No jewelry or money was taken, however, the culprit did search the entire house. Mrs. Jones thinks that it might have been the same one who entered the home of Mrs. Hosca Downs a week or so ago.

Chilton County To Have Housing Authority

Chilton County is soon to have a housing authority. Steps are now being taken to complete the organization of the county and notice has been given by the commissioners court of a public hearing to be held Tuesday morning at the court house to determine the need of such an authority. This meeting, which will be held at 10 o'clock, is for the purpose of determining whether unsanitary or unsafe inhabited dwelling accommodations exist in the portion of Chilton County which lies outside the territorial boundaries of any city or incorporated town and whether there is a lack of safe or sanitary dwelling accommodations in the part of the county before mentioned.

A petition signed by a number of citizens of this county calling this meeting has been filed and evidence will then be taken to determine the advisability of such authority. This authority functions under an act of the legislature of 1935 providing for county housing authorities. Chilton is one of the last counties in this district to be organized.

Following the meeting Tuesday, 5 commissioners will be appointed by the court. And Chilton should secure an allotment of 25 units during the first year under the authority. This county has long felt the need of such an organization and stands to benefit greatly from improved sanitary facilities and improved rural dwelling accommodations.

NEUTRALITY LAW MODIFICATION ASKED

Stating "we will not let Hitler prescribe the waters of the world on our ships may travel..." the President asked Congress to repeal Section 6 of the Neutrality Act which prohibits arming of American merchant ships and to examine other phases of the law. The President said this action "is a matter of immediate necessity and extreme urgency."

The President said conditions have so changed since enactment of the law, it is no longer truly a neutrality measure. He said "it is time for this country to stop playing into Hitler's hands and to unshackle our own." He said the U. S. should not be forced to masquerade American-owned ships behind the flags of our sister Republics.

"Most of the vital goods authorized by the Congress are being delivered," Mr. Roosevelt said. "Yet many of them are being sunk; and as we approach full production requiring the use of more ships now being built it will be increasingly necessary to deliver American goods under the American flag."

Club Provides Glasses For Underprivileged Children

Since the schools have opened, the Clanton Lions Club has started its good work of buying glasses for needy school children. Three children have been taken to Selma and examined by Dr. Grayson during the past two weeks. Two of these children were able to see only about half as much as with glasses. The teacher reported after the child had been wearing glasses for a couple of weeks that he had improved so much in her work over what she did last year. We hope that the Lions will continue to bring new sight to deserving children. Such work may be considered a very definite part of national defense. Enabling children to see enough to make real progress in their school work will help them to develop into better citizens.

Homecoming Day At Clanton Baptist Set For October 26

Clanton Baptist Church will celebrate its Homecoming Day on October 26th. More than 500 present is the goal set for the day and a fine program has been planned for the occasion.

Dr. Lawson H. Cook, of Memphis, Tenn., secretary of the Baptist Brotherhood of the South will preach. The members of the Clanton Baptist Church and Sunday School are trying hard to make this a day that will long be remembered in the history of the church and ask all of their friends to help them in accomplishing their aim.

Special music is being prepared for the homecoming.

Chilton Meets Prattville Here Friday Night At 7:30

The Chilton Tigers return to their home field Friday night of this week for the remainder of the season. Most of the local fans have not seen their own home boys in action as yet and the largest crowd of the season should be on hand Friday night to see the local boys go against Prattville. The visitors took on Verbera last week to the tune of 32 to 0, and word comes that this victory are out to take the second victory on a Chilton team in one week.

The Tigers seem to have the best team in six years. To date they have played three games and have scored 94 points to their opponents 6. Friday night last week they took on the Shelby County High team of Columbiana by the score of 34 to 0. Columbiana has a good team and the local boys had to put forth some real effort to run up this score.

Due to a new federal government tax going into effect Oct. 1 of this year on all amusements, the price of admission to all future foot ball games in Clanton has been raised to 25 and 50 cents. This charge includes all taxes. The high school athletic department regrets that this was necessary, but this is in line with all other high schools throughout the state.

The game Friday night begins promptly at 7:30. Adult tickets on sale all day Friday at Alfred Drug Store.

AID TO BRITAIN AND RUSSIA

The American Red Cross instructed the British Red Cross to forward immediately to Russia 800 tons of medical supplies. The American Red Cross will send replacement supplies to England.

PRICES

Retail food prices continued to rise between mid-August and mid-September, increasing 26 per cent to reach the highest level since January, 1931, the Labor Department reported. Consumer Commissioner Elliott reported food prices have risen 29 per cent since the war began as compared to 18.4 per cent in the comparable World War period and farm products have risen 43.1 per cent as contrasted to 126 per cent during the last war.

Price Administrator Henderson, speaking in support of the pending price regulating legislation, said "even though the price level is at the present level of price advances is the fact that these advances have been gathering momentum since the early months of the year." He said the cost of living last August was 7 1/2 per cent.

THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

Great men of history who have left us the legacy of democratic government all seem to have been of one mind, that the preservation of freedom depended to a large degree on the preservation of the freedom of the press. That is why in all truly democratic states a free press is more than just a tradition—it is an essential principle of democracy.

One of the prerogatives of an autocracy is the abrogation of the freedom of the press, because this freedom has essentially, through the centuries, shown itself to be one of the forces which has seen to it that the freedom of the individual has been preserved. When freedom of the press is abolished other freedoms go with it. There is little need at this time to stress that point. There are so many poignant and tragic examples in the world today of a subservient press that it must be obvious to any intelligent person that the freedom of the press is synonymous with the freedom which is democracy.

There have always been those who, often for reasons of personal aggrandizement or lust for power, would rob the press of this precious jewel in the crown of liberty. There have been others who cry out for personal freedom of expression, but who would deny this right to the press. It has become a cliché that the freedom of the press is synonymous with the freedom which is democracy.

Actually the press enjoys a freedom which gives it no privilege above the individual. It must conform to the laws of the state. Its freedom is bound by the laws of the land and the law of the press. It certainly offers no greater opportunity for defaming any person or institution, than does the inherent right of free speech with which every citizen is endowed as a birthright. Abraham Lincoln in a debate on the constitution once said: "The liberty of the press is the tyrant's scourge; it is the true friend and the surest supporter of civil liberty." The principle of freedom of the press, as it exists today, is the result of a long and bitter struggle between those who believed in civil rights and constitutional authority, and those who feared the exercise of these rights.

It is significant that the first amendment to the Bill of Rights of the American Constitution, adopted in 1791, is the one that relates to the freedom of the press. It reads: "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or the free exercise thereof, or the abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for redress of grievances." The very wording of this amendment places freedom of the press on the same level and of equal status with freedom of religion, of speech and of assembly.

A Rhode Island State provision sums up the question of a free press in a few words when it says: "The liberty of the press being essential to the security and freedom of the state, any person may publish his sentiments on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty, and in all trials for libel, both civil and criminal, the truth, unless published from malicious motives, shall be sufficient defense to the person charged." Many other democratic countries have passed similar legislation, because from a wide study of the dangers of a subservient press, they have learned that a free press is the best assurance of a free country.

To be fully comprehended, the freedom of the press must be accepted by democratic peoples as a typical example of the privileges they enjoy as individuals in a democratic state. To

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

When Marion Anderson, the great Negro contralto, sang in Washington, before her sat a blind girl. After the singing was over, this blind girl expressed a desire to shake her hand and this was arranged by her companion. As she grasped the hand of Marion Anderson she said, "O that God would give me sight to see her face just for a moment." Her companion thoughtlessly said, "That does not matter, she is only black." "No," said the blind girl, "She never could have been anything else." That blind girl saw with no eyes, more than her companion could see with eyes. It is the teaching of Christ to see more in people than can be seen with the eye. There are none who are so blind as those who willfully refuse to see. It matters not what color if there is a great soul within.

When the British soldiers were in great danger at Dunkerque, a minister saw a little boy come into his church and kneel at the altar and pray a long time. As the lad arose the minister asked, "Do you often come here to pray?" The boy replied that he had been there four times within the last five days. The minister suspected that he had a relative in the army and asked, "Have you some one fighting in Dunkerque?" Yes, replied the boy, "I did. But he got home today and I came this time to thank God that he had answered my prayers. There were ten Lepers healed but only one came to say, 'Thank You Jesus.' How many times have you put yourself to as much effort to thank God, as you have to petition Him?"

In Shanghai there is an old Chinese who owns and keeps a very fine residence. Some call him foolish and eccentric. This old man already has more room in his house than the families could occupy, but he is all the time adding new rooms and making it larger. Some one asked him why he did this and his reply was, "If I stop building on this house I will die." That old Chinese had the true philosophy of life. We see this very thing working all about us. The tree that grows in the forest, as long as it continues to grow, it lives, but the moment that it ceases to grow it dies. When our bodies no longer build new tissues and cells, then the body dies. We must build each day, or we must soon die. Oliver Wendell Holmes said, "Build thee more stately mansions O my soul, As the swift seasons roll. Leave thy low vaulted past." Build and keep on building the soul.

The dogs were chasing a little rabbit and it came near me and crouched on the ground. Its attention was so directed toward the dogs on its track until it did not know that I was near until I held it in my hands. Then it surged for its liberty, but my grip was secure. I could hear and feel the heart of that little rabbit as it throbbled with fright. It was afraid of me, but I was saving its life. Sometimes we are running here and there all excited over the uncertainties of life. God reaches down his great hand and picks us up. Doubtless He can hear our heart throbs. We surge for our liberty, but God's hold on us is secure. He knows what is best. We may be afraid but God is saving our lives. Present illness may seem to be cruel, but that may be God's plan to lift us over some future calamity. Jesus said, "It is I, be not afraid."

When he was a young minister, Stanley E. Jones, was one day resting under an apple tree. He was holding a revival and he was heart sick because no results had been evident. The apple tree turned into a Juniper tree to the young preacher as he lamented over his failure. Then he heard a voice say to him, "Stanley, look up." He saw that he was under the apple tree and that above him were hundreds of large apples hanging on every branch of the tree. The tree started talking to the minister, "There you are all down in the dumps because you do not bear fruit. Look at me. I am well rooted in this rich soil and I do not worry about producing fruit. All I have to do is to keep contact with the soil and the fruit comes of itself." Then Stanley Jones said that he became ashamed of himself and never after that did he worry about results. He said that he was tremendously concerned about keeping himself well rooted into God's rich soil.

What The River Can Do

The Journal takes pleasure in printing today a communication from S. Wilton Richards, editor of The Marine News of New York, regarding navigation development of the Coosa-Alabama river. He cites the valuable use being made by Germany of the Reich's inland waterway system to the United States. It is important to the United States to develop to the maximum its own waterways which are potentially the greatest on earth. In such system the Coosa-Alabama would be a very important link.

For many years the Journal has urged development of the Coosa-Alabama river, not only for the hydroelectric power production, but for navigation and flood control on a scale that will make the stream serve the rich region it traverses in much the same way that the Ohio and Hudson rivers serve the regions they reach.

Senator Charles McNair, who has long been an advocate of Coosa development has recently indicated that there is much encouragement in the prospect of early action, because of the needs of important governmental munitions industries which are being located along the stream, and because the government engineers have made more favorable reports with regard to the industrial plants that will be served all the way from Mobile to Rome, Georgia. This is an exceptionally promising time to urge favorable action.—Alabama Journal.

Stopping To Think

Tax experts estimate that 30 per cent of the people of the United States will sign on the dotted line on or before next March 15 and file a return on which they will pay taxes to the Federal Government. Some ten million of these people will for the first time pay a tax to their National Government.

But the pinch felt by this direct tax paying will be small indeed in comparison to the amount paid by those people before that time—and for many months or many a year thereafter.

"Patriotism Day" started in this country on October 1. And PATRIOTISM is right, for the prices of hundreds of items were then increased over already relatively high prices. But the United States is by far the greatest and finest country in the world. To foreigners reaching its shores, and to those who have lived in other lands and returning, it is a heaven.

Tax payments for most people are not easy, and those who can well afford to make them often complain, possibly without stopping to think. The price required to live in the good old U. S. A. is worth it. If added cost of living and more taxes will drive home this thought, there will arise a new Americanism and a new appreciation of the land and over which the Stars and Stripes wave. And that is what this country needs.

What would happen if I enlisted in the U. S. Navy and became sick? You would receive the finest medical care from trained Navy doctors and surgeons absolutely free.

Who pays for my meals and carfare when I am first sent to a U. S. Navy Training Station? The Navy furnishes us all transportation and meals.

soil and I do not worry about producing fruit. All I have to do is to keep contact with the soil and the fruit comes of itself." Then Stanley Jones said that he became ashamed of himself and never after that did he worry about results. He said that he was tremendously concerned about keeping himself well rooted into God's rich soil.

cent higher than two years ago. Since March alone, he said, the cost of living is up 5 per cent.

PRIORITIES

The Supply Priorities and Allocation Board ruled that no new public or private construction can be started unless it is essential for defense or the health and safety of the people or does not involve use of strategic materials. The ruling applies to Federal, State and local government building and all commercial building. Efforts will be made, however, to aid completion of construction already substantially finished.

The SPAB also voted to permit building of 228 commercial aircraft—with the reservation that Army can take them if they are needed.

PHYSICAL REHABILITATION FOR SELECTEES

The President announced plans to "salvage" 200,000 of the 1,000,000 selective service registrants who have been rejected for health reasons. He also announced he would initiate a long-range program of Federal, State and local cooperation to remedy conditions which have resulted in 50 per cent of men of army age being physically unfit for military service. The Federal Government would pay for medical and dental treatment of those men certified by local boards as subject to health improvement.

Selective Service announced that starting January 1 all registrants will be given only the physical exam—by the Army. At present registrants are examined by local doctors and then by Army physicians and cannot tell until the final exam if they will be accepted.

AIR

OPM announced 1914 military aircraft were delivered during September—a new monthly record. The War Department announced it will allow Army aviation cadets 30 hours credit for flight training prior to enlistment—thereby cutting in half the flying time necessary in the Army to win wings. Mimic air raids began along the East coast from Boston to Savannah to test ability of civilian spotter and their communication system.

NURSING

The Red Cross announced a program to instruct 500,000 American housewives in home nursing in the next year. Courses will take six weeks of class work and practical experience. Miss Olivia Peterson, director of public health nursing for Minnesota, will conduct the program.

EMPLOYMENT

The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice asked any one denied a defense job because of creed, color, race, or national origin to write the Committee at Washington so an investigation can be made and remedial steps taken. The OPM Labor Division issued new reporting forms to speed up surveys by the U. S. Employment Service local offices of situations where civilian factories are closed by material shortages and priorities. The OPM advised the War Department that 34 companies making most of the nation's washing machines can produce defense articles and asked they be given preferential treatment to avoid lay-off of workers.

LABOR

The President, in a message to the AFL convention in Seattle, said the time has come when Federal mediation machinery "must be used," before any recourse is taken to a strike or lockout." He said organizational conflicts must be discarded for the duration. Labor Secretary Perkins told the meeting "It is of extreme importance that trade-unions develop in the near future a pattern of self-imposed discipline." She said the closed shop should be "revisited with a view to the public welfare" and to provide for those who "are not joiners by nature."

LABOR SAFETY

Navy Secretary Knox told the 30th National Safety Congress in Chicago a killed or injured worker is as much loss to defense as a wounded soldier because "we have no time to train replacement workers." He said time lost through injuries last year would have built 45 battleships, 75,000 fighter planes or 15,000 heavy bombers.

PRODUCTION

OPM Director Knudsen, speaking in New York, said despite tremendous increases in British and American production the Nazis will continue to hold their lead in certain important war items "for a long time unless we step up our present pace." OPM Chief Statistician May said in a New York radio speech that the U. S. is devoting only 15 per cent of its resources to defense while Canada and Great Britain are devoting 50 per cent—close to the absolute maximum. Mr. May said to put U. S. production on a plane with Britain's means drastic diversion of materials, man-power and facilities from civilian to military uses. He said, for example, auto production would have to be cut from 50,000 to 1,000 cars a week.

FOREIGN TRADE

President Roosevelt told the 28th National Foreign Trade Convention in New York that equality of treatment and mutual benefit to all nations could be the only basis for post-war commercial relations if peace is to be enduring. Under Secretary of State Welles told the convention that trade agreements similar to those made before the war by the U. S. would be one of the post-war economic tools. Under Secretary of Commerce Chatfield Taylor told the group "we must not repeat the mistake of Versailles, of stressing territorial and political adjustments and asking provision for the basis of sound trade and economic reconstruction." He said England and the U. S. must have the productive facilities, natural resources and capital necessary for world economic order.

HELPING SOUTH AMERICA

Speaking in Boston, Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs Rockefeller said the U. S. "has practically taken up the slack left in the trade of the 20 Republics due to their loss of the continental European markets" by increasing import business from $450,000,000 to nearly a billion dollars a year. He said the $700,000,000 available to South America for loans is being used by Latin countries to build up industries and agriculture "worth fighting for." He said actually only $37,000,000 is currently not repaid and that not all funds available were borrowed.

ATHLETICS IN NAVY STRESS GOOD SPORTSMANSHIP

Physical Education Director Says

Nearly Every Sport is Played

You wouldn't think that Uncle Sam's men who go down to the sea in ships would have much time for sports—but they do. The navy considers athletics to be an integral part of a well-balanced Naval life. F. H. Spicer, director of physical education of Chilton County High School, explaining the Navy teaches teamwork, individual resourcefulness and good sportsmanship.

"Nearly every popular American sport is played in the Navy," says Mr. Spicer. "There are football, baseball, and basketball teams. Boxing, wrestling, track and field and swimming meets are enjoyed. Every ship and station has an officer in charge of athletics. He, in turn, has several assistants. All work together in producing winning teams, building competitive spirit between ships and fleets."

To play on Navy teams, a man must be physically fit for every contest. Boxers and wrestlers are examined carefully before every match to make certain they are "in the pink."

Each ship has its own baseball and football teams and when a ship comes into a Naval base a series of games are arranged with the teams of other naval units. Spirit runs high and rivalry is keen. During baseball season, when the ships are at anchor at sea, the sailors rig up large nets on deck and stage batting practice just as easily as if they were on a baseball field. Some bluejackets even take their golf clubs along and practice driving into the nets.

"Healthy athletic competition puts a never-say-die spirit into the men," adds Mr. Spicer. "It tends to develop efficient units, just as it welds unity in high schools and colleges. It develops an esprit de corps that is remarkable."

Mr. Spicer recently ran across an excerpt from the Battle Fleet Athletic Rules reprinted in the U. S. Navy Bluejacket's Manual. "It could well serve as a guide for our own school and town," he said. It reads as follows: "The commander in chief desires to urge upon all that athletic competition unless it is characterized by clean sportsmanship, free from any taint of suspicion of sharp practice, and free from any unfairness, is not the spirit of true Americanism, which is to play fair and give a square deal. Winning or losing, the main thing is to show yourselves good and clean sportsmen—modest winners if the breaks are with you and good losers if the breaks are against you."

When do I get my first leave after I have enlisted? In a few weeks after you have completed your Recruit training period.

FARMERS URGED TO PLANT WINTER LEGUMES FOR SEED

The shortage of winter legume seed due partly to the shut down of European markets as a result of the war and lack of transportation facilities at home, makes home production of seed more important than ever this year, says Mr. Parrish, supervisor of the North Central soil conservation district.

With the approach of the fall planting season, farmers are urged to select suitable areas of moderately good soil and make necessary preparation for planting winter legume seed patches. Of the legumes that may be expected to produce fair crops in this section, (Williamette Vetch, Monan-lot Vetch, Crimson Clover,) are best adapted.

Farmers who plant winter legume seed patches this fall can avoid buying seed in 1942 and may even add to their cash income from the sale of any surplus produced, Mr. W. L. Parrish says.

Although it is advisable to plant seed patches on soils that are sufficiently fertile to insure a satisfactory growth, most legumes produce larger yields of seed on soils of moderate, rather than of very high fertility, such as areas around barn lots where there is an excessive amount of manure, he points out.

In addition to the fact that winter legumes are very important erosion control plants, there is also a strong probability that the supply of commercial nitrogen available for use in fertilizers may be seriously reduced next year. This will make the growing of legumes to furnish nitrogen of even greater than usual importance.

CANE CREEK

Mrs. Jesse Weldon of Central Park, Birmingham, visited his parents Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Weldon last Wednesday evening.

One of the sad events of our community was the death of Mrs. Annie Mae Rhodes Giles on last Wednesday morning at 10:15, October 8. She had been in ill health for some time. She was a Christian having consecrated her life to God when a young girl. She had 41 years of age and will be greatly missed. Funeral services were held Thursday at Mountain Springs church at 3 o'clock, burial in adjoining cemetery. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Floyd Smith and Sam Connell. Martin and Son was in charge. She is survived by her husband W. W. Giles and one son Odie, one daughter O'Neil, three brothers, Robert, Oscar and Rube Rhodes, one sister, Mrs. Resie Knox all of Chilton county. Pallbearers were J. E. Jones, Hobson Jones, Floyd Giles, Walter Giles, Grady Knox and Earnest Littleton.

Bluegrass Is Best For Winter Lawns

To give your winter lawn time to get a good start before cold weather, winter grass such as Kentucky bluegrass should be sown now says E. L. McIlwain, professor of horticulture, Auburn.

Kentucky bluegrass is recommended for winter lawns rather than Italian ryegrass because it does not kill out established sod as does ryegrass. Kentucky bluegrass also gives a permanent sod in shady places, says McIlwain.

Ryegrass on fertile soil often kills out well established Bermuda lawns or retards its growth to such an extent that the Bermuda does not give a satisfactory summer lawn until late.

Seed of Kentucky bluegrass should be broadcast on the permanent sod at the rate of two to three pounds per 1000 square feet. If Italian ryegrass is used plant five to ten pounds per 1000 square feet. Apply two to three pounds of cottonseed meal to 100 square feet at time of sowing. Seed sown should be raked or brushed over to get the seed in contact with the ground.

Food Pledge To Britain

"We are planning," says Secretary Wickard, "to send the British during 1942 dairy products that will require between 4 1/2 and 5 billion pounds of poultry meat (chicken for the most part); almost a billion and a half pounds of pork and lard. We have promised to send almost a billion and a quarter tons of fruit and more than two and a half million cases of canned vegetables."

COTTON ALLOTMENT SAME

Alabama's cotton allotment has been set at 2,129,407 acres for 1942 which is the same as that for 1941, reports A. W. Jones, State AAA administrator. An additional small acreage reserve has been set up for new cotton farms.

All county allotments are expected to be approved around November 1 and farmers notified of allotments and yields at the time farm plans are completed this fall for the 1942 crop year.

Proof Of The Value Of Food For Defense

Proof of the value of the Food for Defense program started last May by the Farm Security Administration is in plain sight, said Marvin Durbin, FSA supervisor for Chilton County.

The program, farming, stock raising, and other projects, has been successful in seeing prospects of real and continuing profit in cash, as well as in better balance of his operations.

With the flock of Food for Defense chickens culled out by sale of fryers and broilers, there remains from the baby chicks bought in May a permanent investment of pullets that have been producing eggs in some cases or that will soon begin.

In the four states of the Southeast which comprise Region V of FSA (Alabama, Florida, Georgia and South Carolina), nearly two million of these pullets are expected to produce 16 million dozen eggs in the next year to supply the nation's need of this valuable food commodity—a need for eggs for its own tables, for the market, and for shipment to friends of democracy overseas.

In this county an estimated 16,470 added hens would produce 137,250 dozen eggs, Mr. Durbin said.

And this is only one part of the story, said the FSA supervisor. From every part of the region reports are coming of new milk routes that have been established as the 20,000 new milk cows added to the stock of the 32,649 participants in the campaign, begin producing. This should mean, he said, 35 millions more pounds of milk in the region. In this county, 109 cows were added, with the prospect of 39,240 more gallons of milk to enrich diets of the small farmers and to be made available for the market, bringing more cash income.

The first step in production and cash returns from the Food for Defense campaign was the sale of fryers and broilers. On this operation, the families more than broke even in most cases, counting the investment of chicks, feed and equipment. Now they will begin to take in more profit.

Yet to come is the next step of increased production for the enlarged Food for Defense program just announced by the Department of Agriculture. From Security families in this county, encouraged to grow more feed for their poultry and stock, are in better shape than ever to cash in on the new type of farming that they have learned is to pay big dividends both in money and better living.

VAN BLARCOM-CALLAWAY NUPITAL SERVICE IS NOTABLE EVENT IN DUKE UNIVERSITY CHAPEL

No recent ceremony in the Duke University Chapel has held wider interest nor presented a more beautiful picture than the marriage of Miss Jasper Lamar Callaway to Dr. Van Blarcom, which took place Saturday night in an 8:30 o'clock service, the Rev. Frank Hickman officiating.

How did the term "cut of his jib" originate? In the days of sailing vessels, nationalities of boats could be distinguished by their jibs (type of sail). A Spanish ship had no jib, English ships had one jib and French ships usually two. The phrase was likely used to apply to men and gradually came into general usage.

INSTALLMENT 15

THE STORY SO FAR:
Gordon, and her father. After breaking Thorpe in Texas, Roper conducted a great raid upon Thorpe's vast herds in Montana. Unable to reconcile her father with Roper, Jody set out with Shoshone Wilce to find him. They were attacked by some of

After that a full minute passed and stretched to a minute and a half. Evidently the outposts had been farther away from the cabin than Shoshone had calculated; but Roper heard none of them.

He thought, "If I can keep them interested just ten minutes more—"

Now a furiously ridden horse was coming up. Roper flattened himself against the wall beside the open door, and waited until he heard the man drop from his pony just outside. He stepped to the door, fired once; and a man crashed face downward upon the door sill itself to lie utterly motionless.

With his boot Roper pushed the inert heap off the door sill, so that the door might be closed at need. Because there were only two more shots in his gun, he picked up one of the weapons he had collected, and checked its loading.

"I'd stand real still if I was you," he warned the two who stood with their hands up. He fired one more shot between them, for purposes of general discipline. "I ought to kill you; maybe I will in a minute—haven't decided yet."

Now another horse was coming in fast; in another second or two it would string into view around the corner of the cabin.

"I'd stand real still if I was you."

Roper cast a quick glance to see that his captives were where he thought they were. They had not moved. He dropped to one knee beside the door and fired twice quickly as a shape, dark on darkness, whirled around the corner of the cabin.

That was all—the end of the one-man war he had started to cover the retreat of Shoshone. He never remembered the shock of the blow that downed him. All consciousness ended at once, as sharply as if cut off with a knife.

He never knew which of the two men behind him sprang forward to smash him down; but he knew as soon as he knew anything at all, that a long time had passed—more time than he could afford to lose.

CHAPTER XXI

Nobody but an old range rider could have located in the dark the brush corral where Shoshone Wilce and Jody Gordon were supposed to wait for Bill Roper. What would have been a simple problem by daylight, in darkness became a test of scouting ability and cowman's instinct. Yet somehow, by the throw of the land, and by his deep knowledge of the habits of thought of cowmen, Shoshone Wilce nosed out that circular corral of brush, in a darkness so thick that he was uncertain he had found the landmark until he had touched it with his hands.

A faint line of grey was already appearing on the rim of the world, and a whisky-jack was calling raucously somewhere in the scrub pine.

"It's almost daylight already," Jody Gordon said, fear in her voice. "If he doesn't come soon—if he doesn't come—"

She broke off, unable to go on. "He's at home," Shoshone Wilce said. "We'll wait half an hour."

"And then—?"

"We've got to go on."

"I can't! Not if he doesn't come. We'll have to go back. We'll have to try—"

"He said go on. We have to do like he said," Shoshone's voice dropped to a curious fierce whisper. "Whatever happens—you remember that! You have to go on!"

They waited then, while five min-

Thorpe's men hiding in Roper's shack. Wilce trapped, but Jody was captured. Roper left to look for Jody when told she had disappeared. He accidentally met Wilce. Together they prepared to rescue her.

utes passed. Shoshone Wilce kept his pony moving slowly up and down to prevent its stiffening up by too rapid a cooling after its run, and Jody followed him.

"Listen here," Shoshone Wilce said at last. He dropped his voice, and sat motionless. For a moment or two there was no sound there except the rhythmic breathing of the hard-run ponies. "I want to tell you something," Shoshone resumed, his voice low, husky, and strangely unsteady. "It looks like I run away and left you when your pony was shot down. I see now it looks like that. But I want you to know I didn't go to do nothing like that, Miss Gordon."

"Know," she said, "it was the only—"

"I shouldn't have done it," Shoshone said. "I wouldn't do it if I was doing it again. I figured I'd be more use to you if I could keep my horse out of the way. I figured I could best handle it like an Indian would—pick 'em off one at a time, and make sure. But I'd do different if I had it to do again."

"What else could you have possibly done? There wasn't any chance for anything else."

"I should have stood and fought," Shoshone said. "Like he would have done."

"It was better this way," Jody told him. "Don't you worry about it, Shoshone."

Shoshone said vaguely, "I want you to tell him about it. I want you to tell him I'd do different if I had it to do again."

"Why don't you tell him yourself?"

"Maybe I will. But if anything comes up—so's I don't get the chance."

"Of course I'll tell him."

They fell silent, and after that a long time passed. Shoshone stopped walking his horse, and sat perfectly motionless close to the wall of the brush corral. The grey light increased, while they waited for what seemed an interminable time.

It seemed to Jody that in a few minutes more they would have admitted that daylight was upon them; it seemed to her that an hour, two hours, had passed, instead of the half hour which Shoshone had decided they could wait. But still Bill Roper did not come.

"Do you suppose he could have ridden past?" Jody asked.

"No," Shoshone said, very low in his throat.

When she could stand the suspense no more, Jody Gordon dismounted; the inaction and the cold was stiffening her in the saddle, and now she led her pony while she stamped and swung her arms.

She thought, "I'll lead my pony five times around the outside of the corral. He'll be here by then; he must be here by then."

"What was she doing?" she slowly led her pony around the circle marked by the walls of brush, what she would do if Roper did not come—if he never came. Perhaps go on? Perhaps go back?

Jody Gordon was fighting back an overwhelming, impossible panic.

She knew the cool, hard sufficiency of the man against whom Roper had pitted himself. From the standpoint of her father, who had turned against him, she knew the unassailable bitterness, the vast sinister malevolence which Roper had raised against himself by the miracles of the Texas Rangers' War. If he were caught now in the grip of that malevolence—

It took all her will power to restrain herself from breaking into a run, or from mounting her pony and racing him—where? Any place, if only her high-strung nerves could find expression in action. But she forced herself to lead her pony slowly, measuring her strides while the daylight increased.

Then, as she completed the circuit of the corral, and came again to where Shoshone's pony stood, she saw that Shoshone Wilce no longer was there. At first she thought that he had hid his pony and walked away; but as she came nearer she saw that the little man was down in the snow, huddled against the rough brush of the corral barrier.

Jody sprang forward, calling out his name.

She sprang forward, calling out his name, and there was a meaningless, nightmarish quarter of a minute while her pony reared backward from the sudden jerk upon its bridle and had to be quieted before she could advance again.

"Shoshone! What's the matter? Are you—are you—?"

Shoshone's eyes were half open; he was not asleep, but he did not answer. And now as she dropped to her knees beside him in the snow she saw that a bright trickle of red had traced a line from the corner of his mouth, crookedly across his chin.

"Shoshone—"

It was the ugly panic that swept her it was many seconds before she could fully comprehend that Shoshone Wilce was dead.

SECRETARY WICKARD URGES PLANT WINTER LEGUMES

Pointing out that Secretary of Agriculture Wickard has called for a considerable increase in large crops, both as livestock feed and as a substitute for nitrogenous fertilizer, W. L. Parrish, supervisor of the north central soil conservation district, is urging farmers to plant as large an amount of winter legumes as possible this fall.

Most of the nitrogenous fertilizers needed for the production of non-leguminous crops can be produced right on the farm, thus releasing commercial nitrates needed in the manufacture of explosives, Mr. Parrish says.

Winter legumes not only add to the fertility of the soil, but also furnish excellent protection against erosion in the early spring at a time when erosion is usually severe and a great deal of land in the district is idle.

Another way in which farmers can contribute to the Agricultural Defense Program is to save and handle barnyard manure so that little of the nitrogenous elements are lost, he says. He also cautions against burning straw. When spread upon the ground and then plowed under, straw furnishes valuable fertilizing elements.

With the harvesting of crops making rapid headway, farmers can begin making plans for the planting of winter legumes. Planted early and properly inoculated, they will make good growth before cold weather.

Gives Way Increase Poultry 12 Percent

Auburn, Ala.—The U. S. Government has asked Alabama farmers and poultry keepers to increase their total egg production for the next year by 12 per cent. in order to have sufficient eggs for a minimum adequate diet in this country and enough additional eggs to ship to Great Britain and her allies fighting aggression.

"This makes it most important for all pullets old enough for winter egg production to be put in their laying quarters," says John Ivey, Poultryman of the Alabama Extension Service. "The birds should be carefully inspected for external parasites and if lice are present they should be treated with Sodium Fluoride, using the pinch method, or using two drops of Black Leaf '40', applied on the thigh underneath the wing."

Frequent oiling of the perch poles with discarded crank case oil or an annual treatment of creosote oil or carbolineum will control mites.

When putting the pullets in the house, divide them into several groups placing the ones that are now laying in one pen in the house, the later maturing ones in another pen and the still later maturing birds in another.

The birds, for the remainder of the year, should be kept confined to the house until at least noontime. This stimulates mash consumption and increases egg production.

Feed grain at the rate of 10 to 12 pounds per 100 birds daily. Feed 3 pounds of wet mash and at least 3 4 pounds of green feed per 100 hens per day.

FREE SUBSTITUTION AIDS IN EARNING AAA PAYMENTS

Alabama farmers can now substitute any conservation practice for any other practice under the 1941 AAA program, according to a recent announcement by A. W. Jones, State AAA administrator.

This free substitution should make it easier for farmers to earn all credits necessary to draw full conservation payments.

Formerly three requirements—terracing, pasture improvement, perennial soil conserving crops—could be substituted for one another upon approval of county AAA committee. The fourth requirement calling for 25 per cent of the cropland to be planted annually in erosion resistant crops could not be substituted for.

The shortage of seed and materials and the poor planting season has made it hard for farmers to plant as much pasture, perennials and annual cover crops as would otherwise be expected. The ruling allowing free substitution should ease this situation as terracing can now be used to a greater extent in earning credits.

Does the Navy offer retirement pay? Yes, it is possible for an enlistment man to receive as much as $133.75 a month in retirement pay.

Food Plan Outlined; No Cotton Reduction

Auburn, Ala. — Southern farmers and agricultural workers attending the food for defense meeting in Memphis were assured by Secretary Wickard that no reduction of the cotton acreage below that of 1941 is being considered for 1942.

The Alabama delegation met before leaving Memphis and increased the state's 1942 goals for hogs and poultry above those proposed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Goals for dairying and beef cattle were accepted as presented. They call for an increase of 12 per cent for each of these. The same figure was requested for egg production while hogs will be less.

It was made clear that these are not quotas, but goals toward which farmers will be asked to work. P. O. Davis, Alabama Extension Service director, said that farming in Alabama is being improved by making these increases in livestock. For these gains, county agents have worked for many years.

Some doubt about peanut goals was expressed because of inability to get all machinery needed for harvesting an acreage in peanuts almost twice as big as that of 1941. W. B. Crawley, chairman of the Alabama AAA committee, explained that greater use of harvesting machinery is feasible. He predicted this increase if they are assured that satisfactory prices will be for them.

Increased production work will be started at once. Planting seed of oats, barley, wheat, rye, and winter legumes this fall is a necessary step in the production of meat, milk, eggs, and wool next year. Bigger plantings of all these for which seed are available are expected immediately.

Care of Machinery Lengthens Its Life

Feeling that steel for farm machinery is going to be scarce and prices will be high, Alabama farmers are planning on taking special precautions in caring for their machinery this winter.

J. B. Wilson, Extension agricultural engineer, Auburn, says that farmers should receive from ten to sixteen years of service from their machinery if it is properly cared for. Here are a few suggestions he gives to lengthen life of the tools:

1. Place the machinery out of the weather when not in use.

2. Tag machinery for replacements, buy the needed parts, and make repairs.

3. Paint machinery, using either ordinary outdoor paint or paint with a mineral base.

Belle Isle, the 3,000-acre island park near Detroit, Mich., was bought from the Indians, for eight barrels of iron, three rolls of tobacco and six pounds of war paint.

Blue Lupine Included

Blue Lupine has been included as a soil-building practice under AAA requirements calling for 25 per cent of the cropland annually to be in erosion control crops, announces A. W. Jones state AAA administrator. The rate of seeding under the requirements is fifty pounds per acre. Fertilizer requirements are the same as for other crops included in this practice.

What is the cost of torpedoes used by our Navy? Modern U. S. Navy torpedoes cost from $6,000 to $15,000 each. They are 21 inches in diameter, are driven by a mixture of compressed air and alcohol and carry up to 600 pounds of T. N. T. The speeds vary from 25 to 30 knots as they travel from 6,000 to 30,000 yards.

If I join the Naval Reserve, how long must I serve? Naval Reservists serve for four years. Reservists will be returned to civil life as soon as possible after the National Emergency is over, so that the term of active service may be less than 4 years.

We see by the papers that Sam Johnson and Percy Pitts, Jr., have been "pinned" by two of the University Fraternities... Sam by Phi Delta Theta and Percy by Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

And while we're joining Fraternities we learn this about Josephine Stanley... she is a member of the Alabama College Glee College, at Montevallo this year.

...and Alex Arnold is the "junk man" in his outfit at camp... Alex is with the Quarter Master Corp., and we just learned that the Quartermaster Corp's job is to gather all the junk and sort it... of course positively does not go back into the lard or the soup we are told.

They're in the Air Corp now... we mean Holloway Bickerstaff and Alex Hayes... they left last week for Canada to join the RAF... by now they should be well on their way.

Mr. C. N. Rasberry brought a real "tater" to the News office this week... weighed about 6 1/2 pounds, and then part of it had been cut off with the plow when it was uncovered... anybody hungry for sweet "tater" pie come around next week and bring along a few quarts of good sweet milk and we'll celebrate something.

Does anybody have more fun out of living than Buck Elice... Buck is always happy, about something, we don't know what, he's a married man too.

Dr. Parrish, the veterinarian, reports the birth of a baby at his place this week... but Doc ain't fooling us... as soon as he said it was 36 inches high, walked the first day and was trying to eat grass, we got suspicious and found the baby to be a mule colt.

Judge L. H. Reynolds is one of the few remaining members of the Constitutional Convention of 1901... The survivors are in convention this Friday at the Jefferson Davis hotel in Montgomery... here's hoping they have a glorious time... the ranks are thinning and each member who is left served State and Country well.

Those Chilton County High Tigers are really playing football this season... looks like we have a championship team... better not try to mention all the stars, there are too many and then there are two who everyone will agree stand out... those two are Bobo Collins and James Payton.

Mr. Mell Martin is just back from the National Convention of the Funeral Directors Association... by the way he is Vice-President of the State group... they held their meeting in St. Louis this year and Mr. Mell wouldn't tell us all that happened but he reports a BIG time. Mr. Mell went as official delegate and has gone to several of these conventions as delegate... he has served the State Association for eleven years as Secretary and is a member of the National Advisory Council, second only to the Board of Governors which is composed of Past-Presidents.

We got an "office cat" now, the wife rescued him, it or she, out of the street the other mid-night for fear some careless motorist would run over him, it or she... John and Ewart have kept him, it or she stuffed with hamburger meat and the like until him, it or she, is beginning to look like a cat... we call him, it or she Napoleon at this writing but we may have to change the name later... we'll keep you posted.

Keep Your Chickens In Your Own Yard

We keep getting complaints about people's chickens overrunning flower beds and garden of the neighbors... There is a City Ordinance providing that chickens be kept up in the yard of their owners and to disregard this ordinance is punishable by a heavy fine. Let's keep our chickens in our own back yard.

Chilton Defeats Prattville Eleven Friday 33-0

Strong Centerville Team Plays Chilton Here Tonight At Seven Thirty

In the first of a series of six games to be played here on the local high school gridiron the 1941 edition of the Chilton Tigers ran rough shod Friday night over a thoroughly outclassed Prattville eleven and emerged the victor by the lopsided score of 33 to nothing.

The Autauga County eleven was completely outclassed in all departments of the game and was never during the sixty minutes of play in a scoring position.

Chilton scored in each quarter. The regulars were replaced by second string men in the fourth quarter and the substitutes also succeeded in scoring against the Prattville boys.

This game marked the first opportunity that local fans have had to see the team in action. They were in no wise disappointed for Coach Cox seems to have developed a team which works well as a unit, functioning smoothly on both the offense and defense. They have the size, too. There appears to be a wealth of substitute material also which augurs well for the next several years.

Chilton meets an arch rival here tonight when the Centerville or Bibb County High eleven invades the local gridiron at 7:30. Chilton has always had a strong team and the fans are assured of a real nip and tuck game.

Having played four games to date and losing one Centerville's record, while not as good as that of Chilton, it is by no means to be taken lightly. She lost to Holt early in the season by a score of 6 to 0 and then defeated Montevallo 20 to nothing and Stilluria 32 to 7.

Last Friday Centerville met and defeated by a decisive margin, a strong team from Tallapoosa.

The probable lineup of each team for the game is as follows:

Chilton
Johnson 180	LT
Captain "Bobo" Collins 180	LE
Mizzell 137	LG

Why Keep On Advertising?

TO YOU WHO ADVERTISE:

For many years you have used the columns of The Chilton County News to talk to the men, women and children who read this newspaper.

Each day, side by side with the news stories your messages, in the form of advertisements, have been accepted and expected by our readers as the news of What, Where and How they can buy the things they want and need.

Not always have our readers wanted or needed the things you have offered, WHEN you offered them. But, as you have continued to ASK them, to URGES them, to APPEAL to them to buy from you, our readers have learned to depend upon you for their daily requirements.

Now, you say, "We're oversold! Why keep on advertising?"

In answering your question, let us speak — Not for the News, but FOR the Readers of this newspaper.

Now, we realize that now and then you will be oversold. We know that there will be times when you cannot supply some things we want. We expect some prices will go up; and that it may be necessary for us to go without some things in these days of national emergency.

But, we want to know: (1) Why, and When, and How Long we cannot get the things we want; (2) What we can get to take the place of things to which we are accustomed; (3) Where and When can we expect to find our requirements at prices we can pay.

Are you going to keep us informed with your advertising, or are you—because you are sold out for the time being—going to forget us and our problems?

You have come around often enough when YOU wanted something from US—but when WE want something from YOU, where will you be?

Now, more than ever before, we need your merchandise news. We now ASK you to let us know what is happening with even more frequent and informative Advertising.

TAINT DIME TO DOUGHNUTS IT'S NICKLES TO CLANTON MOTORS

Ras Langston, the popular mail carrier and baseball umpire, of Jemison, created quite a furor Monday afternoon when he brought 5700 nickels of the new Monticello variety into the Clanton Motors to make payment on a new 1942 Ford. Mr. Langston didn't say how long he had been gathering this many nickels but we figured that 5,700 nickels amount to $285.00. That it is also 28,500 pennies, that they weighed exactly 63 pounds and that laid end to end they amount to exactly $284.95 more than we have at this writing.

This Week In National Defense

The Navy announced the destroyer Kearney was torpedoed while on patrol duty near Iceland. The boat was able to proceed under its own power and no casualties were reported. The President told his press conference the vessel was clearly within American defensive waters when attacked.

*NOTE: Since the above was received the Kearney is reported to have reached a North American port, with 11 members of the crew missing, and 10 others injured.

ARMING OF SHIPS

The House passed a bill modifying the Neutrality Act to permit arming of merchant ships. Navy Secretary Knox told his press conference the Navy is ready to put guns aboard American merchant ships as soon as Congress authorizes the action. He said there are sufficient guns for all merchantmen although not all can be used against both airplanes and submarines. He said arming merchant ships will slow down submarines, and impair their marksmanship because they will have to stay below the surface and use their limited supply of torpedoes instead of attacking with shellfire.

LEND-LEASE AID

Navy Secretary Knox announced two average submarines are being transferred to Britain under the lend-lease program. The President announced lend-lease transfers during September reached a record $155,000,000 in equipment and services—about three times the monthly average of the past six months. The President said aid is going to Britain, China, South America, and the refugee Polish and Norwegian governments. Russia he said, is paying in gold and strategic materials for supplies sent to that country.

Homecoming Day At First Baptist Church Sunday

Large Crowd Is Expected To Attend Services At Church Here Sunday

Sunday is to be a red letter day for the members of the First Baptist Church. It will be Homecoming Day, and extensive plans have been made to accommodate large crowds on that day. According to Rev. Oscar A. Davis, pastor, all is in readiness for the occasion and Sunday is awaited with much interest—it is the Clanton Baptist Church's first Homecoming.

Dr. Lawson H. Cook, of Memphis, Tenn., as reported last week, will do the preaching. Below is a brief history of the church.

Church was organized by Rev. James A. Mullins and Rev. P. H. Lundy, November 5, 1872, with nine charter members.

Church admitted into the Unity Baptist Association in 1878.

Dr. John R. Sampers, Louisville, Ky., assisted in a meeting in 1885, with 21 additions. Dr. Sampers, at age 77, preached for the same church in a meeting last July, with 15 additions.

The church has worshiped in three different buildings since its organization. Mr. Alfred Baker gave the lot for the first building. Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Johnson gave the lot for the erection of the second building in 1893. The present commodious building was erected in 1921, under the leadership of Rev. P. G. Carter, at a cost of about $40,000. The three story educational building was erected during the sixteen years' ministry of Dr. S. J. Exell. The church plant is now valued at about $52,000.

Within the last twenty years, the age of the present building, the Clanton Baptist Church has contributed to all causes over $155,000.00. During the same period more than 400 persons have been baptized and some 600 others received into membership by letter. Total membership is now above 800, with a resident membership of 350 persons.

Since May, 1938, Rev. Oscar A. Davis has served the church as pastor. More than 200 additions have been added to the church since his coming, with total contributions in excess of $28,000.00.

Winter in Eskommo Land

During 1941 Chilton County Should Double Its Production of Beef and Dairy Cattle, Hogs, Poultry, Mules, Sheep and Goats. Strawberry, Peach and Potato Production Should Be Increased One-third. At Least A Dozen Small Industries Should Be Located In Chilton County. It Can and Should Be Done.

Find A Remedy

Why don't the City Fathers and local business men prepare some place for these over-length trucks to park that come to our city to trade?

These trucks present a dangerous traffic hazard when they are forced to park on the main streets for the want of a suitable parking zone. It is especially bad on Saturdays and at night, when too little room is left for the motoring public to drive safely.

This condition could be remedied by giving these trucks a vacant lot close in, in which to park, or giving them a block on which parking is allowed only on one side of the street, or better still give them a block where they can park these long trucks parallel.

With all the improvements that have been made in our parking and traffic problems in recent years, surely some satisfactory answer can be found to this important question.

As we have stated before, Clanton is a small City and no longer a country town, traffic is heavy and fast getting heavier. This would be one more step to better Clanton's already good name as a fine place to come to trade.

Graves Will Be "IT"

The Chilton County News, of Clanton, owned by Old Mark Tucker, seems to have two ambitions—to tell the world that Chilton County is the best county between Montgomery and Jefferson, and to keep the voters conscious of the fact that next year there will be a gubernatorial race, and one David Bibb Graves will be in it. According to Mark the second to the last word in the preceding sentence can be omitted—Greenville Advocate.

Where do you get that "Montgomery and Jefferson" county stuff? Chilton is THE BEST COUNTY in Alabama, and Bibb Graves is going to be tagged "IT" with the ballots of the Alabama voters, come the next May primary election.

"SCARES"

We used to scare the children by telling them the boogie man would get them; now we are scaring the old folks by telling them Hitler is going to get them—Chilton County News. Life, we reckon, is just one "scare" after another.—DeKalb Times.

MASTER LOW-COST DIET GIVEN BY SPECIALIST

"The less money there is to spend for food, the more important is a homemaker's good food judgment to the health of her family," points out Mildred Simon, extension nutritionist, Auburn.

"As a help to the homemaker operating on a limited budget, Dr. Hazel K. Stiebeling, food economist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and her co-workers have developed a master low-cost plan," says Miss Simon.

Here, in brief is the plan:

MILK—3 to 4 cups daily for children; 2 to 3 cups for adults; 1 quart for every expectant mother; 1 1-2 quarts for a nursing mother.

FRUITS and VEGETABLES.—Potatoes and sweetpotatoes, about twice a day. Dry beans, peas, peanuts, two to four times a week. Tomatoes, citrus fruit, or other vitamin-C rich food, five times a week; every child under five, however, is allotted one serving a day, and a nursing mother one to two servings daily. Leafy green and yellow vegetables at least six times a week.

EGGS—3 to 4 a week for everyone. LEAN MEAT, FISH or Poultry—small servings weekly.

CEREAL DISH—Once a day, sometimes twice. BREAD—In some form at every meal.

DESSERT—Once a day if desired. A family of four—two moderately active grown-ups and two children of school age—can get meals that measure up to the yardstick of good nutrition for $6.50 to $9.00 a week, using this low-cost plan. The farm home makers can get the same diets for much less outlay of cash by a well-planned home-production and home-canning program.

Watheline is right, Alabama's Wild Life Association is not composed of Honky-Tonk devotees.

Freedom of the press is best exemplified in the weeklies.—Montgomery Weekly.

Sure thing, Frank, most everybody thinks that everything done by the weekly newspaper should be free.

Frost is not far away—neither is the next social security payment to Uncle Sam. But we can't make the payment with "frost." So what?

The Functions of The Press

This is one of a series of editorials specially designed to acquaint our readers with the various functions of the Press in a democratic community.

THE PRESS AND THE GOVERNMENT

Misconceptions relating to the right of the press to criticize, commend or suggest to government bodies, local, state or federal, is often assailed. For that reason it is essential that the position of the press in its relationship to governmental bodies should be examined.

Many well-meaning people conscientiously believe that the press should express no conviction upon local, state or federal affairs. They assume that to offer criticism is to become partisan. They confuse the meaning of the words "independent" and "neutral." There is a very real and vital difference between the two. To be independent is to reserve the inalienable right of every citizen to approve or disapprove of any public matter without thought of servitude to any particular party or group. To be neutral is to avoid reference to any contentious matter. To sum up, two it would be fair to say that independence was that same privilege of the individual to decide for himself, for which party he shall vote, or which church he shall attend without pressure from party executives or religious dignitaries. To be neutral is to admit that one is not prepared to come to a decision or make a stand on any matter, and therefore to leave it alone.

Members of civic bodies sometimes point out that newspapers have such a tremendous influence in the community, and that their circulation is so wide-spread that they have an advantage over those with whom they disagree. This is true only in so far as the individual refuses to take advantage of the privilege granted by almost every newspaper of using the columns of the press, to express his or her views. There is, however, a much more important angle to this question. Newspapersmen are equipped to give more adequate study to municipal affairs than most individuals. At their fingertips they have information which is not so readily available to every citizen. Their representatives attend meetings of civic bodies, and therefore have the opportunity of getting a better understanding of municipal affairs than the average voter. Of even greater importance is the almost universal attitude of the public to expect advice and leadership from the press. The newspaper is often the only medium through which citizens may keep in touch and abreast of the affairs of the community. They expect, and have the right to expect, that their newspaper will keep them advised of what is going on, and will also, through the information at its disposal, endeavor to interpret the news. The newspaper which fails to do this, is failing in what often amounts to its supreme task in the community.

Another assumption of some men and women in public office is that any criticism offered in a newspaper is personal, rather than objective. That is not true. Newspapers have been known to conduct violently personal campaigns, but it is the exception rather than the rule, and if any individual, the individual always has recourse to the courts.

The newspaper which comments on public affairs, far from being presumptuous, is but fulfilling one of the most important and vital functions of the press. If it is genuine in its desire to be of service to the community, it will open its columns to signed letters from those who disagree with its editorial opinions, but all too often those who have this privilege fail to avail themselves of the opportunity, preferring to carry on a street corner or platform feud against the newspaper. By intelligent comment on public affairs the newspaper prevents the rise of unscrupulous men who seek office for private gain, and it often brings to light factors in a situation that have been entirely overlooked by the civic administrators and the public. In this service alone newspapers have saved their communities from colossal financial loss and from racketeers who would use public office to enrich themselves.

A Tribute to Veterans of Service
NEARLY half of our present 2,471 employees have spent ten years or more with us. Distinctive among them in length of service are Mrs. Liely Saywell Russey, Anniston, and Mr. J. G. McKinney, Birmingham. This advertisement is published as a tribute to them, and the other 1,095 employees who have been with us ten years or longer, and whose attention to duty has helped make possible the dependable electric service to which you are accustomed. We hope it will be our good fortune to have them—and other employees who have not yet become "veterans"—associated with us for many years to come.
MRS. LIELY SAYWELL RUSSEY
Mrs. Russey has the distinction of having the longest service record of any of our women employees—35 years. She is secretary to Division Vice President O. K. Seyforth, Anniston, where her knowledge of the many details of division headquarters duties helps lighten the responsibilities of a busy executive.
J. G. MCKINNEY
If on a visit to our general office building in Birmingham you aren't quite sure whom you should see about the matter you want to discuss, you will find "Mr. Mac" at the reception desk, ready to greet you pleasantly and direct you to the proper person. Mr. McKinney is our oldest white employee in point of service, with 46 years to his credit. He was first employed in Anniston in street railway work and continued his employment when that company became a part of Alabama Power Co. With the discontinuance of street cars in Anniston, he was transferred to Birmingham. Although old in years, Mr. Mac is young in spirit. While on a recent vacation in Anniston he surprised a group of younger friends by going swimming with them.
The duties of Mrs. Russey and Mr. McKinney and other employees performing similar work are not connected directly with the production or delivery of electric power. However, by doing their jobs well, they help make possible that dependable electric service which you have learned to expect.

PATES CHAPEL

Sunday and Sunday night was our regular preaching time. And Bro. Nix delivered two wonderful messages. His text Sunday night was "Religion in the Home." An old seemed to me that he did not leave one place vacant. Those who did not hear him missed a good message. As we know our religion starts at home. What we practice at home we sure will practice it away from home. So let's everybody try and walk a straight and good life in our homes. So we will do this out of our homes. We also had a good B. Y. P. U. too. It seems to be growing stronger each week. Let's make it worth while and every body come and back it up. In last week's paper we stated that Mrs. Maurice Rainwater's mother was dead, but it was Mr. Maurice Rainwater's mother.

Mrs. Limmie Bell Pate's father and mother was her guests Sunday. Mrs. Emily Bolton was the week end guest of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Pate.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil Childress and Mrs. Glennie Childress were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Pate also.

Misses Elva Mae and Doris Rhodes and Miss Merle Franklin were guests of Miss Leona Dawson Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Franklin had as their guests Sunday Mr. Ben Cox and family from Birmingham. Also Bro. and Mrs. Nix and daughter Elaine, Saturday night and they all attended church at Macedonia where Bro. Nix delivered a message Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Childress was the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Franklin Sunday evening.

Misses Catherine Maddox, Marie Hayes, Leatrice Clecker, Mr. Charlie Hayes visited Mr. Burber Price family down near Selma Sunday. Mrs. Martha Gibson and family Sunday evening with Mrs. Lillie Franklin and Mrs. Lonnie Rhodes.

Bro. Nix's family took supper with Mrs. Martha Gibson and family Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Franklin and Cecil spent a while Saturday night with Mr. Claude Dawson's family.

Bro. Nix and family were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hayes.

Let's everybody remember that Bro. Jones will preach for us on the 3rd Sunday. Come one come all, and let's show Bro. Jones that we are behind him, with our greatest help and strength. We all know that we all need help.

All who attended the Association reported a nice time with many good messages and a bountiful dinner which was enjoyed by all.

W. M. S. - G. A. and Sunbeams bands meets every first Saturday p. m. at 2:00 at the church.

We give a cordial invitation to all the women, girls and children to come as we need help.

Let's everybody come to Sunday School next Sunday a. m. and B. Y. P. U. Sunday night, and keep our little church lights burning to lead one more to our little group.

Employers the country over are eager to employ Navy-trained men.

Good fun, good food, good friends

THE BIRTHDAY OF THE U. S. NAVY

One hundred and sixty-six years ago a committee of three men John Adams, Silas Dean and John Langdon purchased the merchant ship Black Prince of Philadelphia. Renamed the Alfred, this vessel had the distinction of being the first ship in the United States Navy. These men were appointed by Congress through the efforts of George Washington, as a Naval Commission responsible for the purchase of two vessels. An original appropriation of $100,000 was increased several days later, making possible the purchase of four ships in all—the latter three named the Columbus, Cabot and Andrew Doria.

The date October 27, on which Congress acted to establish our Navy, is celebrated annually as Navy Day. The purposes of Navy Day are to pay a deserved tribute to the splendid service the men in the navy here rendered in making and keeping us a nation and to better inform the American people of what our Navy is and does for them. When originally chosen, October 27 marked not only one of the most important dates in U. S. Navy history, but also the birth date of Theodore Roosevelt whose life was devoted to furthering a sound naval policy for the United States.

In its early days, the history of our Navy was a turbulent one. During the revolutionary period 73 vessels of all descriptions were used, but through sale, capture and destruction only one was left in 1785 and during that year Congress abolished the Navy, leaving the burden of the protection of our country in the hands of an army of only 80 men. In 1794 our Navy was revived by a Congress which authorized the construction of several frigates to deal with the Algerine pirates and the first U. S. Navy Department was established four years later. One of these new frigates purchased as a result of this act of 1794 was the Constitution—the first of the great frigates, the President, Congress and Chesapeake, which was a Navy which, through successful encounters with French frigates and privateers, established an enviable reputation for itself. In 1812 a series of engagements with the Barbary states and the ensuing treaties rendered commerce in the Mediterranean safe from attack and ended the payment of tribute by Americans.

The outstanding performance of our Navy and privateers during the War of 1812 insured freedom of the seas for our commerce and further increased our national prestige abroad. The effective work of the Navy during the World War is still fresh in the minds of most of us. The astonishing fact that no American soldier escorted by the U. S. Navy lost his life in transit across the Atlantic amazed even those in the highest positions of authority.

All American foreign relations, all American participation in the life of the community of nations must find its expression through traffic on the seas. Ships, both commercial and naval, are the means of giving outlet to America's right to participation in international trade and politics.

ALABAMA FARM MEN AND WOMEN TO ATTEND FARM CONVENTION

Plans have been completed for the 20th annual meeting of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation and the 15th annual meeting of the Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Clubs to be held in Montgomery, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, October 27-29. Some 4,000 farm men and women from every Alabama county are expected to attend.

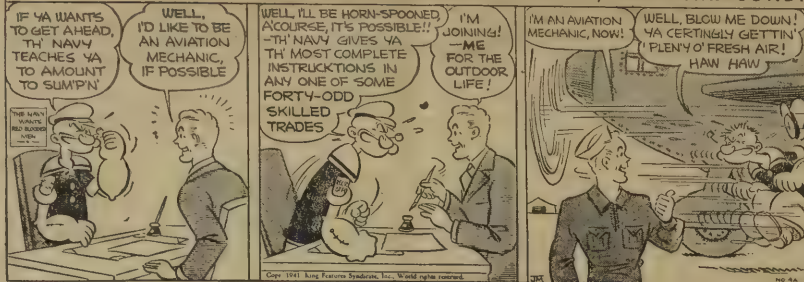

As announced by Walter L. Randolph, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, and Mrs. C. M. Murphy, president of the Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Clubs, some of the leading speakers on the program include: Senators John H. Bankhead and Lister Hill, Governor Frank M. Dixon; R. M. Duncan, President, Alabama Polytechnic Institute; P. O. Davis, Director, Alabama Extension Service.

The tentative program also provides for several important conferences on dairying, forestry, livestock, peanuts, poultry, rural youth, and truck crops. Farmers attending the different conferences are expected to make definite plans for increasing the production of meat, milk, eggs and vegetables for home use and for national defense.

Some 200 farm women will enter the cotton dress revue to be presented by Alabama home demonstration club women with Carolina Haynes, clothing specialist, Alabama Extension Service, in charge. A memorial service, with Mrs. W. F. Jeffers, Glencoe, in charge, will be held in recognition of leading club women who have passed away.

Officers to serve the organizations the following year will be elected at the concluding session Wednesday.

Source Of Vitamin A

To insure a good quality milk that is high in Vitamin A and to remove the danger of contracting diseases due to Vitamin A deficiency, farmers are planting oats and rye to be grazed by cattle this winter when other pasture plants have died. Field plants, these crops can easily be turned into temporary pastures by putting up a couple of runs of barbed wire.

METHODIST CHURCH NEWS

The Pastor, Dr. T. C. Cassaday, will preach at 11 a. m. on the Subject, "The Crucified, Risen, and Exalted Redeemer is the supreme need of the World!" And the only hope of the individual.

At 7:30 p. m. The Use of Talents.

EARLY SEEDING SMALL GRAIN AND WINTER LEGUMES IMPORTANT

Early seeding is important for both small grain and winter legumes, according to Mr. James H. Wood, representative of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in the North Central soil conservation district.

Increased yields and more grazing in the winter and early spring are among the advantages of planting small grain early Mr. Wood points out. Any excess acreage above the farm needs for grain, hay and grazing can be turned under to add organic matter to the soil. The earlier the grain is planted, the more growth there will be to turn under.

Many farmers in the North Central District are planting grain this fall as the first step in setting up a systematic rotation in which lespedeza (crotalaria on sandy land) will be sown on the grain in February or early March.

A strip rotation can be established in this way by sowing the grain in strips this fall, or by planting the lespedeza (or crotalaria) in strips in the spring in solid fields of grain. Protection against erosion can be provided on more land if crops are planted in strips than can be obtained by the same acreage of crops in solid fields, Mr. Wood explained.

VEGETABLE PRICE PROSPECTS

With a higher average level of consumer purchasing power in prospect for 1942, producers of vegetables in general may expect to receive higher prices and incomes from the production of these crops in 1942, says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Increased plantings of most of these crops are in prospect for 1942, and if yields average close to those of 1941 production will be somewhat larger. It is expected, however, that demand will be sufficiently improved to more than offset the influence on prices of the larger supplies.

More Turkeys This Year

Alabama will eat more turkey this Thanksgiving than last due to the fact that the number of turkeys in the state has increased 19,000 since last year. To get turkeys ready for market they should be fed all they will eat of scratch grain and moist dry mash or scratch grain, which after the scratch grain can consist of corn and alfalfa and the mash can consist of cornmeal and a protein supplement.

Farmers Urged Plant Grains and Legumes

Increased demand for food and feed crops and conservation of the soil and plant food materials make it necessary for Alabama farmers to plant a good scratch grain crop as oats, wheat (for home use), rye, barley, Austrian winter peas, vetch, crimson clover, or mixtures of three crops, report workers of the Alabama Extension Service. Says that these close-growing crops protect the soil from erosion and leaching, give early grazing, hay or grain, and when incorporated in the soil as a green manure crop, add organic matter and nitrogen collected by the legumes and return the nitrogen taken from the soil in plant growth.

IN BUSINESS HALF CENTURY

On the 23rd of this month, Mr. H. Strook of Verbena, will celebrate his 50th anniversary, as a merchant. He opened his store October 23, 1891. During the intervening years Mr. Strook has seen many panics and depressions in the life of the American people; and a great change in our national economy. He has seen merchandising problems change materially in those fifty years.

Not many concerns can boast such a long and successful record. Many claim to be one of fifty years have in that time undergone very internal changes, so that an individual record of continuous successful management for half a century is a outstanding one.

According to a study made by Dr. Bradstreet a few years ago, more than 12 per cent of all concerns in business are more than twenty years of age. The Dun & Bradstreet figures were projected by the Fiftieth Years in Business Club of Nashville, Tenn., and it was concluded that more than one out of every one per cent of the 2,252,000 concerns in business are fifty years of age. That refers to the firm itself. Obviously, a very much smaller per cent reach fifty years with the original management in continuous operation throughout the period.

THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lord Gordon had built up a vast string of ranches. King was killed by his powerful and unscrupulous partner, Ben Thorpe. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, was doing his best to keep the empire of the opposition of his sweatshirt.

CHAPTER XXII

We're making a big mistake, not to hang him and be done with it," Red Kane said.

They were two days from Fork Creek now. This long and narrow room, which Jim Leathers paced so restlessly, was the kitchen of the main house at Walk Lasham's southwest camp—a convenient stop-over on the way to Sundance, where Roper was to be turned over to Ben Thorpe.

"The quicker we hang him, the better we'll be off," Red Kane said again.

Wearily, doggedly, Jim Leathers read a cigarette. He took his time about replying. "Seems like you already said that once before."

"I'm liable to keep on saying it," Red Kane told him. "Things is different now."

In the doorway, behind the two men who were talking, Bill Roper now appeared, a slim, full-breasted girl, whose dark, slanting eyes had sometimes troubled Bill Roper before now.

He had not been surprised to find Marquita here in Walk Lasham's southwest camp, to which his captors had brought him. He had guessed, when he had last talked to her in Miles City, that she was Lasham's girl, and in spite of her expressed eagerness to leave Lasham and ride with Roper, he realized that Marquita still had to live in the way.

Girls of the stamp could not afford to throw down such a man as Lasham, until more interesting opportunities offered.

Her face was impassive now, but underneath the smiling dark rows in a definite signal to Roper. The combination of Spanish and Indian blood in this girl from the Texas border gave her a lithe, lazy grace, Lasham's girl, and in spite of her expressed eagerness to leave Lasham and ride with Roper, he realized that Marquita still had to live in the way.

For a moment Bill Roper realized the fact that he couldn't be interested in any girl except Jody Gordon—a girl who didn't want him or need him. All the worst aspects of his own situation were apparent to him, and he knew, with a certain sickeningly likely to precipitate a lot of immediate disturbance.

Troubled, he wished to shake his head, or in some other way caution her that she must make no attempt to interfere. Roper had an intention of ever coming into the hands of Ben Thorpe alive. Somewhere between this place and Sundance, where Thorpe waited, he would make his play, but he knew that any attempt to precipitate a lot of immediate disturbance.

Yet he would rather take his chances with some unforeseen opportunity later, when they were again on the trail, than to be plunged into some helpless, unresisting situation which the girl might devise with danger to herself and questionable advantage to him. She had never brought him any luck.

He was unable, however, with the eyes of his enemies upon him, to signal her in any way.

"Ben wanted him alive, if I could get him," Jim Leathers said stubbornly. "Well, I got him alive, and I aim to keep him that way. You bums ain't going to talk me into anything different just because you figure a dead man is easier to pack."

Bill Roper listened sardonically. In the two days spent in traveling from Fork Creek rendezvous, the scalp wound which had brought him down had nearly healed; but when he faced his fingers behind his head he winced and dropped his hands again.

It was typical of the quality of his captors that his hands were not tied or manacled. They told him where to sit, and they made him stay put, and they were careful that no opportunity was given him to snatch a gun from an unwary holster; but these were merely the routine precautions of menial men. For these riders were the picked gunfighters of Ben Thorpe's scores of outfits. They did not fear Roper, though they had feared him to be armed.

Bill Roper had no doubt that Red Kane was perhaps one or two days off, but he was sure that the others would kill a doomed prisoner for no more reason than Jim Leathers had suggested.

Jody Gordon and her Roper breaking Thorpe in Texas. Roper conducted a great raid upon Thorpe's vast herds in Montana. Jody was captured by seven of Thorpe's men. Roper and Shoshone Wife rescued her in a surprise attack. Shoshone Lasham's southwest camp was broken, and seemed to have been little understood by the men who had brought it; but Roper, with his inside knowledge of the force he had turned loose against Lasham, could piece together its meaning well enough. Lasham's southwest outfit, with its big herds of picked cattle wintering in this deepest and richest of the Montana grass, had been more powerfully manned than any other Lasham camp. But twice in the past week frantic calls for reinforcements from the outfits to the east had drained most of this man power away—first five picked gunfighters, then a dozen cowboys more, until only five men had been left.

The messengers who had killed their ponies to come for help had brought the camp so fragmentary that, which gave Roper the deepest satisfaction.

In their tales of incredible losses, of raiders who struck night after night at far separated points, driving cattle unharmed of distance to disappear weirdly in the northern wastes, Roper read the success of his Great Raid.

Dry Camp Pierce was sweeping westward across Montana like a destroying wind; by unexpected daring, by speed of movement, by wild riding relays which punished themselves no less than the cattle they drove, Dry Camp was feeling an uneasy, shivering fear.

Into the hands of Iron Dog's bands, who spirited the beef forever from the face of Montana. By the very boldness of its conception and the wild savagery of its execution, the unbelievable Great Raid was meeting with success.

And now Dry Camp had struck even deeper than Roper had planned, lifting the best of Lasham's herds from almost within gunshot of Lasham's strongest camp. So well had Dry Camp planned, and so steadily did the luck hold, that a full day had passed before the loss inflicted by the raiders was discovered. The five remaining cowboys at the southwest camp were only tightening their cinches as Jim Leathers rode in.

Most of the Leathers party had joined the Lasham men in pursuit of Dry Camp's raiders. Only Jim Leathers himself and the unwilling Red Kane remained to convoy Roper to Ben Thorpe at Sundance.

Because of the confusion involved in the organization of the pursuit, the night was now far gone; already it was long past midnight.

"There's still another reason," Red Kane said, "why it would be better to hang him now. Suppose that wild bunch of his knows he's here?"

"How the devil would they know that?" Leathers said with disgust. "Maybe they would scout us and spy glasses as we come over the trail today."

"If they was, they would have landed on us right then, in place of waiting till we got into camp."

"The girl! You make me sick."

"Have it your own way."

"You're darned right I'll have it my own way. I don't want to hear no more about it. And I'll tell you this: if your trigger finger gets itchy while you're waiting tonight, you better soak it in a pan of water, and leave the gun be. Because if anything comes up while you're on watch such that you got to shoot him, by God, next morning, you got to shoot me—you understand?"

"Red, get back! Get out of line!"

With the quick instinct of a man who has always been in trouble, Red Kane jumped back into the room, carrying Bill Roper with him. They all could hear now the sound of running horses.

and Jody rode to a prearranged spot, but Roper was captured while fighting a rear guard action to assure their escape. While waiting for Roper to meet them at their secret hiding place, Jody saw the shoe fall down dead.

"I guess it could be done," Red Kane said nastily.

Leathers nodded this, and Red Kane disappeared. This time the door shut after him.

Leathers said, "Get me a drink."

Marquita unbenturedly set out a bottle and a glass on the table beside Jim Leathers' elbow.

"A deck of cards," Leathers said. She produced this, too.

Marquita strolled over to Leathers, the high heels of her slippers clicking lazily on the punctured floor. "Why would you so cross with me?" she asked reproachfully. She moved behind Jim Leathers, and slowly ran her fingers through his hair.

"Ain't going to get you a thing," Jim Leathers said sourly.

"Not a word," Marquita. For a moment one hand was lost in the folds of her skirt; then, deftly, unhurriedly, she planted the muzzle of a .38 against the back of Jim Leathers' neck.

There was a moment of absolute silence, absolute immobility. Jim Leathers' eyes were perfectly still upon Bill Roper's face, as still as his hand, in one of which a playing card hung suspended. But though his face did not notably change, Marquita, with her 38 pressed hard against the back of the gunman's neck, had turned white; her mouth worked as she tried to speak, and her wide eyes were upon Bill Roper in terrified appeal. Perhaps no more than a second could have passed in that way, but then all seemed as if time had stopped, so that that little fraction of eternity held them motionless forever.

Bill Roper, moving up and forward, exploded into action smoothly like a cat. It was the length of the room between them that saved Jim Leathers then.

Leathers twisted, lightning fast. Marquita's gun blazed into the floor as her wrist swept down in the grip of Leathers' left hand; and Bill Roper checked a yard from the table as Leathers' gun flashed into sight, becoming instantly steady. Marquita sagged away from Leathers, and her gun clattered upon the punctured floor; but although Leathers' whole attention was concentrated upon Roper, a swift, grim remained locked in his grasp.

The gunfighter's voice was more hard and cold than the steel of his gun; it was as hard and cold as his eyes.

"Get back there where you was."

Bill Roper shrugged and moved back.

Leathers flung Marquita away from him and with his left hand pulled up her arm as the door of the storeroom was torn open and Red Kane bulged in.

"What the—"

"This thing come behind me and stuck a gun in my neck," Leathers told him.

"The devil! You hurt?"

"Hell, no! I took it away from her."

Gently, tentatively, his long fingers ran over his wounded leg. That bullet went in as the door of the storeroom was torn open and Red Kane bulged in.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

Something went wrong with the engine of the plane and the pilot shouted, "Bail Out." His helper hesitated as he looked toward the earth that was a mile below. More animated than the first came the second order, "Bail Out." This time the young man knew it was now or never and so he climbed into position and took the leap. Those of us on the ground do not know the amount of faith and courage that it takes for a man to leap into space a mile above the earth. The pilot must trust himself to the engine and take the leap. We talk much about trusting in Jesus Christ for salvation. As the pilot must have courage and faith to take the leap, so we must have courage and faith to trust Jesus for our salvation. As the air is about the falling man to save him, so Jesus Christ is about us to save us when we are in Him.

In a certain Southern City there was a man who rode a bicycle with a crooked handle bar. One day he parked his wheel on the curb and ran into a grocery store for supplies. Along back of the store, where the crooked handle bar and knowing that he had straightened it with little effort, he did so and went on his way. Out came the owner of the wheel and leaped into the saddle. Dashing away as usual he and the wheel were both piled against a telephone post. He had ridden that wheel with crooked handle bar so long until he could not ride with straight handles. How like that man do we find scores of men everywhere. They have been living crooked so long until they do not know how to live straight. Crooked men can not travel on a straight road.

Over in South Africa a wealthy Englishman had twenty seven laws passed to cheat the natives out of their holdings and their liberty. After he had done this he then said, "Now that we have clipped their wings, we must be kind to them." Over here in America some land holders will be unjust to their sharecroppers, clip their wings, and then say that they must be kind to them. Some housewives will clip their servant's wings with a starvation wage and then try to be kind to them. When Christ was on Calvary a man heard His cry and ran for a sponge and lifted it to His lips. Jesus refused to drink from it. Jesus had not been kind to the Jews, had he not been just toward Him and He spared them. To be unjust to clip their liberties, to deprive one of his rights and liberties and then try to be kind is mockery. First practice justice and then be kind.

I was holding an experience meeting and one man got up and with a ring of truth in his voice he said, "Preacher, I can put all of my troubles into two short phrases. One is, I can't and the other is tomorrow. I will find myself saying, I can't go to church, I can't pay the preacher, I can't teach a class, etc. All the time I know that I can. Then when I do have an impulse to do what I should I am beset with putting it off until tomorrow. If I could just get I can't out of my system, and if I could just shove tomorrow into the creek, I would be a much better and a more useful man than I am." As he sat down I said, "Amen." That man put his finger on the sore spot with most of us. Too many professed Christians are like that. They can't idea and too many are putting it off until tomorrow the thing that should be done right now.

In the Ashram at Blue Ridge there was a beautiful young woman who used crutches. She carried more sunshine to the sunnier side of her face than any other person there. One morning she got up to say that she was a happy, hopeful Christian and then she said that she did not want to be too sure, but she had hopes that some day she would be able to let go her crutches and she would run around just like other well women. To say the least she had faith and hope. She was crippled but she was hoping to lay aside her crutches. With the most of us, when we are beset with hindrances, we settle down to be content with them. Why not brace up and say, "Some day I am going to stammer, stop it. If you are timid, push to lay aside these crutches." If you do it away. If you are ignorant, use your time and learn. Get away from your crutches. There is lots of liberty and fun in the world if we will only pay the price and take it.

ALABAMA WEEKLY WEATHER AND CROP REPORT

Only a few widely scattered light showers fell in Alabama during the past week, and the moisture added to the soil was negligible. The temperature was high throughout the week and averaged 10 degrees above normal. Maximum readings above 85 degrees were the rule in middle and southern portions of the State, with 80 to 85 in the northern counties.

The dry weather is causing further delay in fall plowing and in the planting of small grains and winter legumes. Germination of seed in fields already planted is poor in many localities. Harvesting of crops continued to make good progress. Cotton picking is completed in most southern and central areas and even in northern sections little cotton remains to be picked. Ginning activity is now on the decline. Most of the hay has been saved and quality is reported as better than usual.

The digging of peanuts continues under favorable circumstances; and while the bulk of the peanuts have been dug, the liberalized provisions of the AAA permitting the harvesting of more peanuts than originally planned will enable the marketing of some peanuts that were planted for hogging. The better than average corn crop will tend to offset any shortage of feed occasioned by this shift.

Upland pastures have made little growth recently due to the lack of moisture. The warmer than usual weather, on the other hand, has been favorable especially on lowland pastures. Cattle are in good condition but are being put off until tomorrow the thing that should be done right now.

WAYS GIVEN FOR MAKING LEAVES AND STRAW ROT

Don't burn leaves and straw, for when decayed they form humus that is valuable in the garden, says W. A. Ruffin, extension gardener, who advises that humus helps keep moisture in the ground and aids in building the soil.

DEFENSE

speaking in Detroit, said although the Price Administrator Henderson, U. S. is producing 35 per cent more than ever before—45 per cent more than in 1929—only 12 to 14 per cent of national income is going into defense. He said America is giving only one hour of eight for defense work. Although OPM schedules show this will be increased to two out of eight hours by next June, he said. Hitler is using five of every eight hours for German war efforts.

OPM Research Chief Stacy May, speaking in New York reported spending for defense in September rose to approximately $1,347,000,000—203,000 higher than August. He said Hitler could be beaten if the U. S. shifted 50 per cent of its productive capacity to armaments and suggested a $50,000,000-a-year defense program.

The War Department announced medium tank production almost doubled in September as compared with August, and light tank production showed a "good gain." Congress passed legislation authorizing a $1,500,000,000 increase in RFC borrowing and lending power to be used partially to expand steel producing facilities by 10,000,000 tons at a cost of $1,000,000,000. OPM ordered auto production for January, 1942, cut "at least" 51 per cent below last January levels.

The Navy instructed its officers to impress on companies behind schedule on ordnance contracts the necessity of speeding deliveries even if it means working three shifts, seven days a week until caught up. The Department asked manufacturers who can increase production by revising their contracts to start new negotiations at once.

SUBCONTRACTING

The OPM Contract Distribution Division announced large defense orders will be withheld from firms refusing to farm out a sizable part of the work. The announcement said small businesses must be mobilized quickly because more than 60 per cent of all industrial workers are employed by firms having less than 500 workers each.

The War Department reported a 105mm. howitzer was successfully built from parts made by a refrigerator firm, an oil-well supplies manufacturer and a railroad car builder, none of whose employees had prior cannon producing experience. The Navy reported as an example of its subcontracting policy that 75 small shops in New York are working on parts for naval gun mounts.

PRIORITY UNEMPLOYMENT

The Federal Security Agency asked all employers who anticipate layoffs due to shortages to report their problems at once to the nearest State Employment Office—the first step in obtaining Government action to give plants defense orders. The Agency said State Employment Offices already surveyed 200 plants threatened with shortages and made reports which may result in placing of defense orders to prevent unemployment.

AGRICULTURE

The Agriculture Department reported the farm labor supply at 64 per cent of normal and 25 per cent below last year, and said farmers have been able to keep their hired men from taking industrial jobs only by sharply increasing wage rates. The Agriculture Department announced national prospects for all crops improved about two per cent during September indicating one of the largest total farm yields on record. The Department said farmers do not need priority orders to purchase farm machinery except special classes, because ratings are assigned to manufacturers and warehousemen who supply farmers.

PRICES

The Bureau of Labor Statistics index of 900 wholesale prices remained unchanged during the week ended October 11 although in the past year average wholesale prices have risen 17.3 per cent and are the highest since early 1930. Price Administrator Henderson notified tire manufacturers he "would not object" to advances in consumer list prices on tire and tubes to not more than nine per cent above June levels. He also announced an investigation of crude oil prices because of suggested price increases.

PRIORITIES

Priorities Director Nelson extended priority assistance to virtually all industrial plants needing maintenance and repair parts. The order was in line with SPAB policy of keeping all industrial machines in good running order. Mr. Nelson suspended until March 31, 1942 the aluminum operations of the General Pattern and Foundry Co., Chicago, because it allegedly diverted aluminum to non-defense uses such as the manufacture of slot machines. Mr. Nelson also imposed rigid controls of certain chemicals, including some used for dry cleaning.

SHIPS AND OIL

The Maritime Commission awarded contracts for construction of 49 tankers which it said will be part of the largest and most modern tanker fleet in the world. Including those building or ordered by the Commission and private interests, 208 new tankers of 2,196,300 gross tons will be finished by the end of 1943, bringing the total available to 568. The Commission reported launching this week of two more of these tankers and also adopted a program calling for construction of 15 reinforced concrete barges suitable for carrying oil.

The Chilton Co. News:

Dear Sirs:

On Oct. 12 at the home of J. C. Morris the children met there for a family reunion. All the children were present but one son who died last Nov. 13 and a host of relatives.

Those present were E. C. Morris, and two daughters of Verbena, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Morris and son all of Verbena, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Morris and five children of Birmingham, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Kennedy and daughter, of Birmingham, Mr. M. Moore and wife of Bessemer, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hutchinson and daughter of Bessemer, Taylo and Lucile Castleberry of Bessemer, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Moore and children of Bessemer, Mr. and Mrs. Houston

Wilder and children of Bessemer, Mrs. J. C. Driver of Montgomery. At noon the table was set out on some trees in the yard and plenty of good eats were enjoyed by all. We just had a wonderful time all day. The family just hope and trust God will permit us all to meet again next year for a day of enjoyment.

The colors are fresh and bright again. The tweed texture is as soft and rich as ever. That little rip is sewed up. And the dress fits just like new!

CONCRETE'S

"ribbon of light"

makes roads safer for night driving

If you had to pile your family in the car and speed across Alabama tonight, you'd wish for the visibility and safety of "concrete all the way"—wouldn't you?

As a matter of fact, if Alabama paved with concrete all the way on main roads such as U. S. 80, U. S. 31 and U. S. 78 — to name a few—it would be real public economy as well as adding to the safety and the comfort of all motorists. Cost of maintenance of concrete on Alabama's main highways is only one-third that of other surfaces. Actual figures in Alabama and all over the country prove concrete's economy.

NEWS and FACTS of Statewide Interest

BOTH THE SPIRIT and the LETTER OF THE LAW

STRICT compliance with both the letter and the spirit of state and local laws by the brewing industry is the objective of the Brewers and Alabama Beer Distributors Committee through its self-regulation program.

However, the efforts of this Committee go much further than cooperating with law-enforcement agencies to suppress law violations at some retail beer outlets. Through a statewide program of education, it teaches beer retailers proper practices. It promotes pride in the retailer in maintaining an establishment as wholesome as the beverage he sells.

Alabama's aggressive ABC Board recently said that our Committee has contributed importantly to the good conditions which now surround the sale of beer in every part of Alabama. To maintain these conditions our Committee will carry on without let-up in its "Clean Up or Close Up" campaign.

BIBB GRAVES FOR GOVERNOR
Not The Time For Others To Run
ADVOCATES REVENUE CHANCES FOR GREATER BENEFITS TO CITIES AND COUNTIES
Former Gov. Bibb Graves advocated reallocation of State revenues to provide greater benefits for municipalities and counties in an address at the Alabama State Fireman's Association Convention at Gadsden.

He spoke against what he called the "shifting of revenues" from local governments and said it had caused maladjustment.

Graves, who was introduced by Mayor J. H. Meighan as the next governor of Alabama, said:

"I judge if it is in my power to help do so, we will reallocate that revenue. I pledge this to the counties and pledge this to the cities."

It was learned today that representatives of Alabama city and county governments intend to confer with Graves next week in an effort to have the local governments pledge themselves definitely to a program of a larger share of State-collected taxes and liquor revenues for local governments.

HONORED BY STATE FIREMEN
By unanimous vote the Alabama Association of Fire Chiefs, meeting at Gadsden, elected Col Bibb Graves an honorary member of their organization. Col. Graves was nominated for membership by a Gadsden fire department official, with a second from the Birmingham delegation.

Col. Graves praised the firemen, emphasizing the major part they would have to play in event this nation became involved in war, declaring "your organization has back of it the most patriotic and altruistic service that the world has ever known. Of all public service groups, the least compensated for most risks taken are law enforcement officers and firemen. We've got to, for our self-protection, show our appreciation to those of you we depend on for so much."

Turning to the part firemen have in the defense program, the former chief executive said "You are now being trained for what, God grant, may never come. But I don't believe our army and navy are going to let a blitzkrieg come to America. If it does come, our lives and fate will be in your hands—the hands of the firemen."

Col. Graves, who served in the last war, added "I don't want any declaration of war—I hope it never comes to America. But if it comes—if our leaders in Washington say we are ready to fight, I say then we are not afraid. The South has never been afraid to fight."

Calling for a spirit of unity, he warned against rocking the boat, asserting "this is no time for anybody to try to get ahead of anybody else."

"It doesn't make any difference whether you were for Mr. Roosevelt, he's president now. We've elected the right man, the greatest Democrat of them all, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and let's back him."

STATE CAN DEAL WITH ANARCHY SAYS BIBB GRAVES. BEGS DOTHAN EAGLE NOT ROCK THE BOAT AT THIS TIME
A few days ago Governor Dixon sent a telegram to President Roosevelt, in which he said "lawlessness and anarchy prevailed in Alabama." This prompted The Dothan Eagle to query Alabama's senators and congressmen, Col Graves, and Judge Chauncey Sparks, thus:

"You have seen the patriotic and straightforward plea which Gov. Frank Dixon has made to the President asking that he act to put an end to paralyzing strikes in Alabama defense industries. In urging presidential action, Gov. Dixon gave voice to the thought that is uppermost in the minds of patriotic Alabamians in this grave hour of emergency."

"We believe the time has come when you, as Alabama's congressional delegation, and you men who aspire to the high office of governor of Alabama, should express yourselves clearly and unequivocally on this

BELL BROTHERS GROCERY
(By MICKEY BROWN)

There has been a drastic change in the method employed by the retail grocery business in the past few years. New methods of keeping and displaying food-stuff has greatly reduced the time required for shopping, and has increased the sale of various new food products.

A marked advantage of the service rendered by the BELL BROTHERS GROCERY, located at 1223 Alabama Avenue in Selma, Alabama, phone 871, is the fact that one can secure most everything needed for the table and does not have to shop from store to store to complete their marketing. DOMINO PARLOR LUNCH ROOM
(By MICKEY BROWN)

Statistics show that the inability of a large percentage of people who are unable to eat what they most desire is brought about by eating inferior, improperly prepared foods. Good food well chosen and well prepared is absolutely essential to good health.

There is something about the way foods are prepared at the DOMINO PARLOR LUNCH ROOM, located at 1121 Water Avenue, in Selma, Alabama, phone 918 that sets it apart from the other eating places and makes it highly satisfactory. The extreme care and thought that goes into the cooking, serving and arrangements create a lunch room to be visited regularly.

Individual farmers are not required to have priority ratings of any kind under the defense program in order to purchase ordinary farm machinery, equipment, repair parts, fertilizers, insecticides, nails, fencing, roofing or similar items, announces the Department of Agriculture.

There may be things farmers will not be able to get, such as aluminum pressure cookers, but in cases like this the manufacturer and not the individual farmer is the one affected by the priority rating.

Farmers who are asked to secure "priority ratings, before making purchases of ordinary equipment or supplies should advise the Department of Agriculture immediately of the name and address of the dealer and the product on which a priority rating was requested.

OUR COMPLIMENTS TO

THE COFFEE SHOP

(By MICKEY BROWN)

Whether you eat to live or live to eat, you must have wholesome food in order to allow your body to function properly. Improper food improperly prepared breaks down the body's resistance and makes one susceptible to diseases.

It is a pleasure to have a modern place such as THE COFFEE SHOP, located at 105 Water Avenue, in Selma, Alabama, phone 9107, that can be recommended to the stranger, as well as the local people. It is one of the most popular, as well as one of the cleanest, most sanitary cafes serving palatable foods to be found in this section of the state.

Cleanliness is one of the outstanding features which is not confined to the tables, silverware and food that is brought to the attention of every one, but extends to the kitchen where the dishes are all sterilized and everything kept scrupulously clean.

The management has made a special study of the business and consequently is striving to give the people just a little better all the time. The place is arranged so as to be attractive and the service is kept prompt and courteous.

In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue, the writer wishes to compliment them upon rendering such an excellent food service in such an immaculate manner and suggests that you will find it an ideal place to go for lunch or for your regular meals.—Adv.

(By MICKEY BROWN)

In the annals of transportation history, never was a dependable taxi service more essential. The crowded condition caused by the increasing number of cars make it practically impossible to go to and from a place without delay.

Local people will find it to their advantage to leave their cars in the garage and call a cab from the 25 TAXI COMPANY, located at 1001 Washington Street, in Selma, Alabama, phone 25. It will arrive promptly and deliver you at your destination safely in half the time required to drive and park your car. Not only will they save you time, but the convenience of a smash-up in which you might figure.

It goes without saying that a reliable taxi service is indispensable to any city. Such a service solves the transportation problems in this crowded auto age. They take you to and from trains, buses, office, schools, and other places more safely, economically, and quicker than any other available method. So, make it a habit to call 25 or 1505 instead of driving your car. They have recently taken over the 25 and the 1505 companies.

In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue, the writer wishes to compliment them upon the important position they occupy in the transportation life of the period and suggests that you allow them to assume all worries, and responsibilities, while solving your transportation problems.—Adv.

EASTVIEW

The Women's Society of Eastview Congregational Church will meet at the parsonage, Thursday, Nov. 6, at 2 p. m. At the meeting at the church last Saturday the following were present: Mrs. Clara Rushing, Mrs. J. Thomas Moore, Mrs. Keener Wells, Mrs. Sally Gray and Mrs. Elsie Ballou. Plans were made for the year.

Way Select Good Cows Is Outlined

Dairymen over the state are selecting milk cows to carry over the Winter. Low producers will be unsuitable and will be nothing more than "boarders" during the Winter. Two methods of selecting a good milk cow are as follows: 1. eWigh milk and feed one day and test milk for butterfat. By multiplying one day's milk and butterfat by number of days in the month a cow's monthly production is determined. Feed production is determined similarly. This method followed yearly will eliminate unprofitable cows. 2. General appearance of the cow. Select a cow with a good head, good body, and a good udder.

Europe will need our surplus cows to replenish its depleted herds as soon as the war is over. Save all heifer calves sired by production bred bulls to help supply this future demand.

OUR COMPLIMENTS TO

DE BARDELEBEN COAL COMPANY

(By MICKEY BROWN)

The purchase of coal for heating and other purposes is of great importance to consumers. Great care should be exercised in selecting coal for heat purposes otherwise your fuel bill will exceed the amount necessary to supply the required amount of heat.

You will never go wrong when you place your order for coal with the DE BARDELEBEN COAL COMPANY, located at 1109 Franklin Street, in Selma, Alabama, phone 47. This firm sells and installs the Iron Fireman automatic stokers which are well washed and re-washed oil stoker coal, especially prepared for the stoker. Thousands of homes throughout the country have installed the Iron Fireman. Wherever you find a home so equipped, you will find it healthier cleaner, and a chimney practically free from soot.

This firm also installs Butane Gas Systems. Butane is a natural gas which is put through a refining and liquefying process. It is placed in containers and piped to stoves and heaters. The most remote communities need not suffer for want of a modern gas service as this dependable firm will install a system which will solve your cooking, heating, and refrigeration problems.

In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue, the writer wishes to compliment them upon rendering such a dependable, coal, Stoker, and Butane Gas service and suggests that you will find it to your advantage to investigate their service before purchasing.—Adv.

OUR COMPLIMENTS TO

DALLAS COMPRESS COMPANY

(By MICKEY BROWN)

For years, cotton was handled and shipped in the bale as it came from the gin. Due to its light weight, it made a bulky bale which required so much space that shipping large quantities was difficult. This created the demand for a compress to reduce the size of the bale for the convenience of shipping.

Many citizens acquire the habit of taking the services of important industries, such as the DALLAS COMPRESS COMPANY, located at 2010 Alabama Avenue, in Selma, Alabama, phone 1330, as a matter of course. However, they should pause occasionally and consider the value of such important concerns to the progress and expansion of the Nation. It is such progressive institutions as this one which not only compresses cotton for the convenience of shipping, but makes this one of the liveliest and most prosperous sections of the state. They offer an excellent warehouse service to cotton producers. The efficient methods in the storing and compressing of cotton is responsible for the high position they have attained in the industrial world of this section.

In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue, the writer wishes to compliment them upon their excellent warehouse and compressing service and suggests that producers investigate their facilities before storing their cotton.—Adv.

Baptist Homecoming

Those who missed the "Homecoming Service" last Sunday at the First Baptist Church in Clanton, certainly missed a glorious day. There was an over the goal, attendance at Sunday School and the morning services, and a mighty fine attendance at the evening services.

Mr. Lawson Cook's talk at the morning service was most inspiring and enjoyable and several vocal numbers were rendered by the church choir.

A fellowship luncheon on the church lawn was enjoyed by all who could stay and at 1:45 Mr. Cooke spoke again on "Christian Stewardship" which was very convincing.

Special music was arranged by Mrs. Raymond Mims and she sang "God So Loved the World," a very lovely solo.

The evening service featured the two important ordinances of the Baptist Church, "Baptism" and "The Lord's Supper."

The following candidates were baptized in a most impressive service in the new baptistry: Mrs. Walter Pickett, Mrs. John D. Thomas, Julia Nell Parrish, Emma Jean McRae, Dean Easterling and Ben Popwell.

Special music was arranged by Mrs. youth choir and Mrs. Erle Ellis sang, "Open the Gates o' Zion Temple."

Following the baptismal service "The Lord's Supper" was administered in a most impressive manner, by candlelight.

It would be a grand and glorious thing if we could have "Homecoming Days" every Sunday.

and burning, managed to get out and lay down behind the bus, still burning. He died.

It was the most horrible thing I have ever seen in my life and as I'm telling you this the thoughts of what I saw leap turning over and over in my mind.

I think eight got out of the bus. I carried four to the hospital in Clanton in my car. A negro in a pickup truck carried one and an ambulance brought two.

A fire truck from Clanton came out to the scene. The men got into the bus, which was being removed by a shell, and attempted to remove bodies and seek means of identifying the baggage as that was the only way of knowing who was on the bus. They looked for papers and any means of identification possible.

DRIVER

and they were as fire all over. The driver told me, as I drove him to the hospital, that the bus had caught fire before it struck the bridge and the gasoline spread over the passengers.

"I heard a woman screaming but it was all over in a few seconds. It looked like those in the back had been knocked out."

Ralph Dennis, who lives nearby, said he heard a sound like an explosion, and ran out to see "everything on fire."

"What made it so bad," Dennis said, "was that there was not a thing we could do. We could hear the people screaming but we couldn't get to them."

"It looked like the whole road was on fire."

The heat from the blaze melted some of the tar surface of the highway just off the bridge where the bus came to rest.

CLANTON, Ala., Oct. 26—AP — At least 14 persons were burned to death tonight in a flame-engulfed Montgomery - to - Birmingham bus which struck a concrete bridge railing and caught fire four miles south of here.

The 14 bodies, all charred beyond recognition, were brought to undertaking establishments here, and State Highway Patrolman E. D. Probst said the toll might be higher because of the state of victims. None was identified immediately, 3 have died since.

Eight others, including the bus driver, were in a hospital here, two in critical condition.

Probst said the gasoline tank apparently exploded at the time of the crash, throwing the flaming liquid over the passengers. One man knocked out a window, Probst said, climbed out and beat out the fire on his clothes. He was not seriously burned.

George Easterling, passenger in a car which was following the bus, said it struck a concrete railing on the bridge and "fire ran all over it in a few seconds."

"We could see the passengers running and screaming as the fire spread. It was all over in a few minutes."

Eight persons, including the bus driver, were in Central Alabama hospital here, most of them seriously burned.

There were 19 passengers aboard the ill-fated Greyhound bus when it left Montgomery last night at 8:30 o'clock, Stancel Ingram, local ticket agent told The Advertiser.

Story of the Terrible Disaster as Told by a Birmingham News Staff Writer.

By WILLIAM M. HINDS

CLANTON, Ala.—Turned into a roaring funeral pyre almost the instant it struck the guardrail of a bridge, a Greyhound bus burned here Sunday night to claim the lives of 15 persons and burn seven others and caused what is believed to be the most terrible automobile catastrophe in the history of the state. (Two others have died since.)

So rapid was the spread of the flames, so intense the heat, that some of the passengers were struck off the bus and their charred bodies were found in position almost as they were sitting before the crash.

All the dead were burned almost beyond recognition and relatives Monday found it necessary to resort to small details to determine the identity of their loved ones.

W. P. Alton, driver of the bus, died a hero's death.

He escaped from the burning vehicle only to return once, if not twice, into the flaming interior to rescue passengers aboard the ill-fated bus.

He died at 3 a. m. at the Central Alabama Hospital here. His clothing had been burned off him in his rescue efforts.

Positively identified Monday were Miss Mary Eleanor Finney, of Buffalo, Ala., a teacher at Montevale High School, and Mrs. Clyde Kennedy, of West Point, Ga.

Five of the 14 bodies in morgues here Monday were believed to be those of Negroes.

Coroner Mel Maglin, released the names of the following persons as those who have been missing since the crash and to which evidence in-employment on the Childersburg plant project. She was en route to Birmingham to join him.

The metal body of the truck was literally melted away in spots and formed part of the ghastly debris which was swept off the highway to clear the road for traffic.

The bus is nothing but a tangled mass of wreckage and twisted it almost out of all semblance to what it originally had been.

Hardie Jones, carpenter who lives 100 yards from the scene, ran out to see Alton, the driver, tumble from the bus, dragging a man by the arm.

"The driver went back into the bus," Jones said, "and came out with some more people. His clothing was on fire, and he ran to the roadside. We cut his clothes off and sent him to the hospital."

Alton made the trip Sunday night as a substitute for Robert Johnson of Montgomery, who arranged the change to have the night off.

Screams Heard

Mac Stephens, another witness, said cars gathered quickly after the crash and explosion, and horrified spectators heard screams of the victims.

Stephens quoted Alton as saying the bus caught fire just before he struck the bridge railing, although the explosion came after the crash.

Sides of the smoking wreck were red from heat when state highway patrolmen arrived. Most of the dead were in a mass near the rear seats.

C. V. Cooter, of Montgomery, manager for Southern Railway Greyhound Lines, said approximately 22 passengers were on the bus, "the second section of a three-bus local run between the Alabama cities."

Crumpler, least injured of the surviving passengers, said he would have escaped unharmed had not his feet been pinned in a window by a second passenger before he was completely free.

Crumpler, who was en route to Nashville to take a course in aviation mechanics, was burned on the feet and legs, but his feet were saved. He said his feet suffered severe burns of the entire body.

Crumpler said the bus struck the south end of the bridge and almost instantly became a seething mass of flames inside and that all passengers escaped the mangled fate of getting out.

He said that after he gained safety outside Alton, his clothing a mass of flames, came to him and said: "Buddy, I'm burning to death."

Crumpler said he took his knife and cut Alton's belt and tie and that except for remnants of underclothing he was free.

Cloning had been entirely burned away.

So great was the heat of the flames that the metal of the bus body and some of the engine was melted into molten masses, while the asphalt beneath the bridge melted.

Two extra bushels of corn or 300 pounds of high quality hay per cow will get this extra milk required for home use and National Defense. If every cow is fed 15 bushels of corn, 500 pounds of cotton seed meal and two tons of hay in addition to ample pasture we can easily supply enough milk for home use and to keep our cheese plants, creameries and condenser operating at full capacity.

OUR COMPLIMENTS TO SHADY NOOK CAFE

(By MICKEY BROWN)

Recreation is a word universally misunderstood and misinterpreted. It means to recreate. When we get fed up, so to speak, mentally if not physically, we must adopt ways and means of recreating our minds for the stress of new business and social demands.

When you get fed up with the world, try a brisk trip to the SHADY NOOK CAFE, located on the Meridian Highway, West of Selma, Alabama, phone 9135. You will find a repast of the finest foods and entertainment the market affords. These foods are served immaculately and with a courtesy that is the last word. In the midst of pleasant surroundings and friendly hospitality, you may dance to the finest music, as well as enjoy the most delicious and savory

Chilton Defeats Centerville 25 to 0; Plays Wetumpka Here Tonight at 7:30

Before the largest crowd ever to witness a football game in Chilton County a strong and stubborn Centerville eleven Friday night bowed to the might of the Tigers from the Chilton County High. The game was officially scored as 25 to nothing but the cold figures of the score belie the stubborn and bitter contest that Centerville put up before she succumbed to the superior power and drive of the Clanton boys.

Chilton scored in each quarter and converted only once for the extra point. Centerville was never in a position to threaten the Chilton goal until late in the last quarter when they opened a desperate passing offensive against the Chilton second string that carried them deep into Chilton territory.

Chilton received the kickoff but fumbled and the ball was recovered by Centerville. Centerville seemed to make the first down she was forced to kick. Payton received the kick and running up the north side of the field crossed the goal line but the play was called back to where he had stepped out of bounds. It was drive of power that carried her deep into Centerville territory. A forward pass climaxed by a lateral marked up the first score for Chilton.

In the second quarter Cost drove over tackle and Collins converted for the extra point. In the third quarter Payton broke loose and scampered from the twenty yard line around the end to go over standing up. In the Fourth quarter Cox skirted left end to bring the score to 25-0 where it remained.

The play of both teams was hard and penalties frequently marred the play. Both teams drew 50 yards in penalties.

Centerville completed four out of 6 attempted passes and Chilton completed five out of nine.

The great difference between these teams seemed to be one James Payton, who is undoubtedly the best backfield man seen at the local school for a long time. While in no way minimizing the splendid game played by Cost, Collins, McLain, McGee, Mizell and the other boys it was nevertheless Payton's running and passing that enabled Chilton to defeat a hitherto almost unbeatable rival by such a large score.

As for the Centerville team, Gaddis simply deserves the all state recognition given him last year.

Tonight Chilton will meet Wetumpka on the local gridiron. Wetumpka will no doubt be pointing for this game and we should see some real football. In Macon and Jernigan they have two boys who can give any team a headache. The time 7:30 at the high school field in Clanton.

We are not going out on a limb and are sure a score for the game tonight but when you add the total points scored by Chilton you will find that she has averaged better than 30 points per game against her five opponents.

Chilton Defeats Centerville 25 to 0; Plays Wetumpka Here Tonight at 7:30

What two teams from the same locality will do when they meet often upsets a lot of pre game predictors equilibrium. Chilton and Isabella meet here week after next. Isabella while not having an undefeated team still has a record of giving plenty of trouble. She bounced back from a 34-0 defeat at the hands of Centerville to soundly trounce Verbena 31-6 last Friday.

OUR COMPLIMENTS TO LOYD BAKERY

(By MICKEY BROWN)

The baking industry has progressed from a modest beginning until today, it occupies a prominent place in the industrial world. The housewives have placed the burden of baking bread for their families upon their shoulders in order to be able to attend their social and educational duties. It has been truly said that the taste tells the tale. This is one reason why the products produced by the LLOYD BAKERY, located at 231 phone 550, are so popular with the Broad Street, in Selma, Alabama, people of this section. Great care has been the care to produce the best possible bakery products and no detail has been overlooked in equipping their plant with modern machinery for the production of that famous Lloyd Bread and other delicacies.

Only the purest and most wholesome ingredients are used in the manufacture of this bakery's high class products. This combined with the fact that they have most acute taste and employ master bakers who follow directions explicitly, account for the great success of their products. When you purchase their products, you can be sure of their cleanliness and genuineness.

In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue, the writer wishes to compliment them upon rendering such an excellent bakery service and suggests that you give their products a trial.

OUR COMPLIMENTS TO

DEASON STANDARD STATION

(By MICKEY BROWN)

All manufacturers of motor vehicles recommend high grade gasoline and motor oils, as well as the proper lubrication, in order that they will render the maximum in service. The proper lubrication of a car or truck requires expert training. Unless your car is lubricated by a specialist, serious trouble may develop.

Save yourself this trouble and expense by having the DEASON STANDARD STATION, located on the corner of Broad and Jeff Davis Avenue, in Selma, Alabama, phone 603, service your car at regular intervals. They render a service that is unsurpassed, even by the metropolitan stations of much larger cities. The management, having made a special study of the business, has provided the very best gasoline, motor oil, charts, and lubrication equipment in order that you may have a complete service without delay.

This station has established an enviable reputation for specialized service. Their products have proven their superior quality in some of the most severe tests possible to give gasoline, motor oils, and lubricants. The real test comes from the tank, crankcase, and working parts of your car or truck.

In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue, the writer wishes to compliment them upon meeting the needs of motorists in a most thorough manner and suggests that they deserve your loyal patronage. —Adv.

OUR COMPLIMENTS TO

THE HUB

(By MICKEY BROWN)

Where we eat and what we eat is of utmost importance to our everyday life. Too few of us stop to consider how vitally important food is to our minds and bodies. When we do, not only do we consider the quality of food, but the sanitary manner in which it is prepared and served.

Before you eat, stop and consider the most likely place to find high quality food which is served in an immaculate manner and invariably you will go to THE HUB, located 3 1/2 miles East of Selma, Alabama, on the Old Montgomery Road, phone 9124, where the finest foods the market affords are served in an immaculate manner. The service will be found of the unusual type, rapid, efficient and courteous.

Their display of food consists not only of the prime necessities of life, but many delicacies are offered which are inviting and tempting to the taste of the most fastidious. The foods served are deliciously appetizing and have that recognized taste of the home cooked meal which is so much in demand.

In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue, the writer wishes to compliment them upon their excellent food service, as well as upon the immaculate manner in which it is served, and highly recommends THE HUB to you without hesitation. —Adv.

FOUND BEST TO SELECT SWEET POTATOES IN FALL

Auburn, Ala.—Tis sweet potato digging time in Alabama and it's also the best time to select seed potatoes for next year's crop, says Lyle Brown, horticulturist of the Alabama Extension Service.

"To maintain high producing stock of sweet potatoes of good color," he says, "it is necessary to select foundation seed stock each year. A method of seed selection that will insure the best quality of Porto Rico sweet potatoes for next year has been worked out by the Alabama experiment station. By using this method growers can prevent their stock from running out."

"Sweet potatoes should be selected when the potatoes are being harvested. The first step is to choose high yielding hills that have four or more No. 1 potatoes, and then save for seed only No. 1 potatoes free from blemishes. Each potato should be examined both for skin and flesh color. The skin of potatoes saved for seed should be a copper-red color and the flesh a dark yellow (salmon pink)."

The flesh color is best determined by cutting the potato in two about one-half to three-fourths of an inch from the end attached to the plant. If the flesh is not a dark yellow color, the potato should be discarded so far as seed purposes are concerned.

"When this cutting operation is performed in the fall," Mr. Brown says, "the cut surface will have a chance to cure during the curing period and decay losses from the operation will be held to a minimum. If growers wait until spring to cut their potatoes in examining for flesh color, and then bed them immediately after, a larger portion of the potatoes will be lost through decay."

OUR COMPLIMENTS TO

SELMA BRICK COMPANY

(By MICKEY BROWN)

There is nothing more important to the progress and expansion of the section than the continued development of the building industry. The building industry of this part of the state has been encouraged and benefited to a large degree by manufacturers of building materials.

It is doubtful if any enterprise in this section has been more beneficial to the building industry than the SELMA BRICK COMPANY, located on the Southern Rail Road, in Selma, Alabama, phone 1826. Their plant is modern in every particular and is equipped with the latest machinery for the production of brick which aids in maintaining the volume of building and expansion of the city, as well as surrounding territory.

This establishment is under the direction of men who are thoroughly familiar with every feature of the business. These men have been responsible for the tremendous strides made by this company and have always been ready to lend their business wisdom, as well as personal assistance to all propositions that promise aid to the development of this section.

In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue, the writer finds it pleasing to compliment them upon rendering such a beneficial brick service to the people of this area and suggests that you consult them in regard to building material for any purpose. —Adv.

COTTON QUIZ

WHO WAS THE FIRST EUROPEAN TO RECEIVE A GIFT OF AMERICAN COTTON?

ANS. QUEEN ISABELLA OF SPAIN. COLUMBUS BROUGHT BACK SOME COTTON IN 1493 AS PROOF THAT HE HAD DISCOVERED A NEW ROUTE TO INDIA!

Continued bad weather and sufficient rain had caused fields recently gleaned of their Summer crop to bloom and produce a second crop of bolls.

Farmers estimated that if cold weather held off for another 10 days,

How many people have in Chilton County who would like to see this county free of the awful curse of liquor? How many mothers and fathers have who would like to have a county that would be free of the modern Honkytonks and road houses that are operating along our highways, ruining the morals and innocence of our young boys and girls?

Places where liquor can be obtained at any time, where evils and vice are committed, breaking up homes and causing children to go hungry and naked. An effort is being put forth to have a better country in which to rear our boys and girls. There will be a temperance speaker at our regular second Sunday service at the Chilton Courthouse on November 9.

Everyone is urged to come out at 1:30 p. m. and have a part in this great work.

Rev. Leonard Hand, Rev. Floyd Smith.

Now is the time to make plans for additional milk markets for Alabama farmers. By building a few additional cheese plants or creaming stations where ample milk is available and by extending milk routes to reach established plants we can do much to help produce more cheese and evaporated milk for Defense needs.

OUR COMPLIMENTS TO HOTEL ALBERT

(By MICKEY BROWN)

It is astonishing to observe the rapid advancement in hotel accommodations throughout the Nation. The modern hotel of today, in comparison to the bowl and pitcher days, is an accomplishment which we must attribute to those hotel proprietors whose business judgment and keen foresight enable them to improve hotel accommodations to such a high degree.

One which will contribute to the comfort and convenience of the traveling public will be found at the HOTEL ALBERT, located at 232 Broad Street, in Selma, Alabama, phone 1700. It is an institution where the best of everything is to be had at a moderate price. From the moment you arrive and register you are relieved of all details and your comfort becomes their first consideration.

Your slightest wish is their command and is executed in a courteous, efficient manner which is recommended by all. The courteous attention you receive at the Hotel Albert makes one feel that he is in a real home.

In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue, the writer wishes to compliment them upon the important position they occupy in the business and social life of this section and suggests that the service you receive in such a friendly manner is the sign posts by which the Hotel Albert is marked out along the highways of the traveling public. —Adv.

T. C. Cole, planter of Pemiscot County, Mo., told the writer that he had been picked, "the stalks took on a complete new growth."

"The plants bloomed, squared and balled in 10 days," Cole said. "If we don't have a freeze, we will make a complete new crop."

Cotton fields in West Tennessee and east Arkansas were reported as producing a second crop.

Cotton men on Memphis' Front Street, world's largest cotton market, estimated an additional 500,000 bales would be picked if cold weather did not ruin the crop.

Their reputation is sustained by the local people, as well as the traveling public in general.

It has been said that the way to a man's heart was through his stomach. From the way this modern Curb Dinette is building its business there must be truth in the above statement.

The tasty delicious foods they serve would win the good will of the most fastidious. Their service, like their food, is unsurpassed. The courteous attention of the attendants is a feature which receives more than passing notice from their patrons.

While parked in your car or restaurant, the waiter comes to you and is delighted with the home-like atmosphere which prevails. Not only will the food be prepared as mother cooks it, but the service is most efficient and secured from which to make your selection.

In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue, the writer wishes to compliment them upon the excellent service they serve in such an immaculate manner and suggests that you drop in for a meal you will also praise their excellent food, as well as their prompt and efficient service. —Adv.

(By MICKEY BROWN)

There is no factor in the club life of any community which has been of greater benefit to the people than that of the country club. It offers the people a select type of recreation that is appreciated.

The founders of the SELMA COUNTRY CLUB, located on New Orrville Road in Selma, Alabama, phone 303, could not have selected a more picturesque spot for its home. It offers a variety of landscaping and privileges which give life a touch of color. There are no dull moments at this club as there is always some desirable person around to aid in relieving the monotony of every day existence.

The club house, golf course, and other facilities are the best obtainable.

ed it will yield thick, heavy cuts which are difficult to cure. The meat also carries a large proportion of fat which makes it much less desirable as a food. Farmers who kill heavy hogs carrying an excess of fat are sacrificing the quality of their meat for the sake of getting more lard.

Medium Hogs Best

The best hog for killing is one moderately fat, thrifty, gaining weight from 200 to 300 pounds, six to ten months of age, says D. M. Turney, animal husbandman.

If the hog is too fat when it is killed, it will yield thick, heavy cuts which are difficult to cure. The meat also carries a large proportion of fat which makes it much less desirable as a food. Farmers who kill heavy hogs carrying an excess of fat are sacrificing the quality of their meat for the sake of getting more lard.

THE SMOKE YEARS

By ALAN LE MAY W.N.U. Release

INSTALLMENT 17:
THE STORY SO FAR:
Jody Gordon, and his father, After wiping Thorpe out of Texas, Roper conducted a great raid upon Thorpe's vast herds in Montana. Both Thorpe and Roper had placed him heavily rewarded upon Roper's head. He was captured by Leathers and Kane, two of Bill Roper's men, and taken to the Roper ranch on earth—

Jody did not seem to see him; she appeared to be thinking only of the slim youngster whom the cowboy carried. The cowboy laid the limp figure on the floor of the kitchen, ripped off the own neckerchief and spread it over the youngster's face. Jody Gordon methodically shut the door. Then she dropped to the floor beside the fallen youngster, lifted his head into her lap, and gave way to a violent sobbing. The high keyed nervous excitement that had sustained her through the hard necessities of action was unstrung abruptly, now that her work was done. It left nothing behind it but a great weariness, as the bleak consciousness that this boy was dead because of her.

Roper and the King-Gordon cowboy stood uncertainly for a moment. Then the cowboy picked up Leathers where he lay struggling for breath, carried him into the back room and put him down on a bunk. For a moment he hesitated; then closed the door between the two rooms, leaving Jody alone.

"Seems like the kid got Jim Leathers' kid," said Jim Leathers to the kid.

"Daidd!" Old Joe asked.

"Daider'n hell! Jody takes it awful hard."

The cowboy cut loose Bill Roper's hands, and together they lifted Old

Joe onto the back of the ten-hen window at the end of the room smashed out with a brittle ring of falling glass. The face of a boy and wild-eyed, so young-looking that he might almost have been called a child. The heavy 44 with which he had smashed the window thrust through the broken pane; it blazed out heavily, twice.

Jim Leathers, staggering backward as if he had been hit with a log ram, fired once, from the level of his belt. The face vanished, but a moment after it was gone the hand that held the gun dangled limp within the room. Then the gun thudded on the floor, and the lifeless hand disappeared.

As Leathers went down, a broken roar of guns broke out in the store-room. Leathers groped for his gun, tried to rise, but could not.

Roper, who had been dragged into the dark store-room by Kane, felt the swift sting of the wind as the back door was smashed open, and was able to free free as the guns began. He stumbled over piled sacks and flattened himself against the wall. The blind blasting in the dark of the back room lasted long enough for three guns to empty themselves. Their smashing voices fell silent with an odd suddenness, as suddenly as they had opened. In the dark a voice said, "In God's name let's have a light!"

After what seemed a long time a single match was struck, and Roper's quick glance estimated the changed situation. In the back room now two men were down—Red Kane and another whom Roper immediately recognized as his old King-Gordon cowboy called Old Joe.

The dim flicker of the match was augmented to a steady glow as a lantern was found and lighted. Roper did not recognize the boy man in the room—the cowboy who had lighted the lantern with one hand, his smoking six-gun still ready in the other.

The stranger stooped over Old Joe, and said, "It's only my laig, my laig."

The other stepped over the inert body of Kane to the door, and surveyed the silent kitchen.

"That's all right," said Jim Leathers, and got him hard!

He stepped back into the rear room. "You're Bill Roper, aren't you? Where's the others?"

"The others aren't any the less. They all went out on Dry Camp's trail, after his raid day before yesterday."

"No others here? You sure?"

"Kane and Leathers are the only ones here."

Old Joe, both hands clasped on his smashed leg, spoke between his teeth. "Where's Jody? For God's sake take him!"

Jim Leathers, King-Gordon cowboy whom Roper had known, went out, and Roper's ringing with his long strides. "Jody isn't here," Roper told Old Joe disgustedly. "She got loose two days ago."

"Jody she isn't here! She come here with us!"

"With you? But you're from Gordon's Red Butte camp, aren't you? I thought Jody went to Miles City with you!"

"She never went to Miles. She knew Leathers was bringing you here, from what she'd heard him say. She come to us, because we was the only ones who would listen to her, and she wouldn't hear of nothing but we come and try to crack you loose. She thought we'd be able to get her out of there."

Bill Roper was dazed. "I thought she was dead."

"The cowboy now came stamping back into the cabin, an awkward burden in his arms; and this time Jody Gordon herself followed close upon his heels. Her head was bowed, and the sharp flush across her cheeks could not conceal her fatigue.

Movable Hay Shed For Alabama Farms

Due to increased hay production, shortage of baling wire and a lack of hay bates open on many farms, a cheap, portable hay shed, known as the Garrett movable hay shed—has been designed by the Agricultural Engineering Department, Auburn, for use on Alabama farms.

Hay stored in this shed is fed by the means of the temporary provision of wire or sheds, permitting animals access to sides of the rack. Should mud interfere the rack is skidded to dry ground. Two to four such sheds will fill the needs of an average two-horse farm.

The top of the shed can be bolted on one side, thus opening for filling and then closed after it is filled with hay.

OUR COMPLIMENTS TO ATLANTIC OIL CO.

(By MICKEY BROWN)
Over a short period of years the oil industry has advanced from a modest beginning to a gigantic organization. The industry is depended upon to supply our motor fuels and lubricants to operate millions of gas engines in airplanes, automobiles and industry.

There is probably no other firm who has contributed more liberally to the development of this section than the ATLANTIC OIL COMPANY, located on Mulberry Street, in Selma, Alabama, phone 704. This gasoline gives as much power, speed and kick as any motor fuel on the market. You will not have to change from one gasoline to another with the change in the weather if you patronize stations which handle their products. It is scientifically manufactured to relieve motorists of this trouble.

The management, being thoroughly familiar with the oil business, has been able to render a service that is unsurpassed. This well equipped establishment is a tribute to the founder's business sagacity and a commercial monument for future generations.

In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue the writer wishes to compliment them upon meeting the increasing demand for their products in such an admirable manner and predicts for them continued prosperity. Adv.

"Now you go and keep Miss Gordon company."

Joe onto the bunk. Roper cut Joe quick.

"Get me that kettle of water off the stove," Bill Roper ordered Marquita; and when she had brought it he said, "Now you go and keep Miss Gordon company for a little while."

Marquita left them, closing the door behind her.

Old Joe kept talking to them in a gassy sort of way, as they did what they could for his wound.

"The kid was scared to death to come in here, but he tried to send him back, with some trumped-up message or something. Wouldn't he been through that and wouldn't he now most likely she blames herself for his dad. Lucky for us that Leathers' main outfit wasn't here."

"You mean just you three was going to jump the whole Leathers outfit, and the Walk Lasham cowboys, too?"

"Not three-four," Old Joe said. "Don't ever figure that girl don't pull her weight. We been laying up here on the hill since before dusk. She aimed we should use the same stunt you used at Fork Creek—bust into 'em just before daylight. Then somebody fires off a gun down here, and she loses her hair, and we come in down. It was her smashed her horse against the door, trying to bust it in. She blindfolded him with her coat—threw it over his head—and poured on whip and spur, and she bangs into the planks. Broke his neck, most like; can't see why she wasn't killed—"

"Just you four," Roper marveled, "were going to tackle the whole works, not even knowing how many were there?"

"We tried to tell her it couldn't be done. But you can't talk any sense into a woman, once she gets a notion in her nut."

CHAPTER XXIII

Marquita, closing the door of the storeroom behind her, for some moments stood looking down at Jody Gordon.

Jody still sat on the floor, upon her lap the head of the boy who had downed Jim Leathers. The sobs that convulsed her were dying off now, leaving her deeply fatigued, and profoundly shaken.

"You might as well get up now," Marquita said. Her soft words slung gave an odd turn to the blunt American words she used. "The fight's over; and that boy you've got there is dead as a herring."

With a visible effort Jody Gordon pulled herself together, and gently lowered the head of the dead boy to the floor. She got up shakily, and for a moment looked at Marquita.

"Why did you come here?" Marquita asked at last. Her voice continued grievedly curious—nothing more.

"I knew Billy Roper was alive," Jody told her. "Because I was watching when Leathers left Fork Creek with him. I already knew they meant to take him to the bunk Thorpe at Sundance, for the reward. That would be death, to him. And I knew they meant to stop over here here Jody found herself facing a woman whom she could not possibly have understood. Marquita's careless, even reckless mode of life, her uncoded relationships with men—these were not an aspect of Marquita's life which did not deny every value of which Jody was aware. Marquita appeared to thrive and flower in a mode of life in which Jody herself had been herself would have died.

"I don't understand you," Marquita said. "The bare chinked walls, the dead eyes, the dead face seemed to go beyond the door, where they were dressing Old Joe's wound; beyond the walls, to the cold wind-swept prairie, where men still rode this night, though morning was close."

"Why do you know?" she asked.

"What can you know of the lives of these men?" Jody lifted her head, then, and looked at Marquita; and again the simple words and the mask-like face of Marquita seemed to have meaning for which she groped. In the silence that followed, it came to Jody that the night's fighting was not yet over, that she must still fight her herself and for Bill—and somehow for that foolish house in Ogalla, with its tall tower overlooking the plain.

"Do you ride with them?" the girl asked, her voice went on. "Do you share their blankets? Do you ride under their ponchos in the rain? Where are you when their guns speak? Who prays for them at night, down in this God-forsaken snow?"

Marquita paused, and her body swung, lazily assured, across a shadowy angle of the room toward the closed door that had hid Roper, and then toward the window, into the doorposts and it seemed to Jody, watching her, as if Marquita were a barrier between what might have been Jody's, and that she had lost now.

"You don't have to bar the door," she said.

Marquita's hands came away from the doorposts. "I know I don't."

The words were so indolently carelessly that they might have been spoken in Spanish. And at their soft assurance something awoke in Jody Gordon. . . . Something was still worth fighting for. Perhaps it had nothing to do with Bill Roper, but it was deep, deep in the roots of her life, deeper than her life with one man—with any man—could ever flow.

As Jody looked at Marquita, strange things came to her, that she had not known before, and she knew. She knew that Marquita and all her kind would presently pass. Perhaps Bill Roper, like all the rest of his bold riders, must also pass, but now suddenly Jody knew that whatever else might vanish from this prairie, what she herself stood for would remain. When she spoke at last, she scarcely recognized her own voice. "If I guess I was wrong," she said. "Her words had a strange echo of Marquita's own directness. "You're Bill Roper's girl—is that what you wanted to tell me?"

The dance hall girl's words felt softly. "Is that is what I wanted you to know."

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

A story is told of two sailors who were shipwrecked upon an unknown island. They were very fearful of their physical safety and proceeded to investigate their surroundings with caution. They were fearful that the island was inhabited by cannibal tribes. One of the men climbed to the top of a tall tree to gain a view of the distant valley. No sooner had he looked around than he shouted, "Hurrah." The sailor on the ground asked, "What is it that you see?" "I see the steeple of a church far down the valley," replied the man up the tree. Those two shipwrecked sailors knew that a church spire in the valley meant safety for them. Where Christ is known and worshipped, men do not look for enemies. Where men love Jesus Christ strangers are protected. Blessings on the church.

Wind up your thinker and let it run for an hour and see how many perfect families you know. The Smith family next door are good people, but they have faults. The Davis family have many fine qualities, but they are not perfect and on goes the story. About the only perfect families that I know about are found only in fiction and poetry. The best of families are far from being perfect in every detail. One day a man came to me saying, "Pastor, I would be a member of your church if you did not have so many imperfect people in your church." I for one do not know of any perfect churches. We do not have any more perfect churches than we have perfect families. Men do not remain aloof from families because there are imperfect families. Why remain out of the church because we have imperfection in the church? People who are looking for a utopian church will never find it on this earth. Join the church of your choice and do your dead level best to make it as perfect as you want to see it.

An apple grower on the mountain side said he traveled fifty miles in search of sour apples to plant on the road side and he succeeded in finding the sourest in all that country. He invited his neighbors to come and taste the apples from his grove, but none of them would come. Finally he was a bit peeved and wanted to know why they refused his invitation. One of them said, "Sir, we have tasted your apples along the road and they are too sour for me." "Just as I expected," replied the farmer. "The apples you tasted were intended for 'thieving boys'." Then he added, "In the middle of my orchard the apples are as sweet as honey." People who judge the church by its worst members, those who are the most like the world, make the same mistake that the man made who tasted the apples that fell over the fence. There are good people in every church. Go beyond our sour hypocrites.

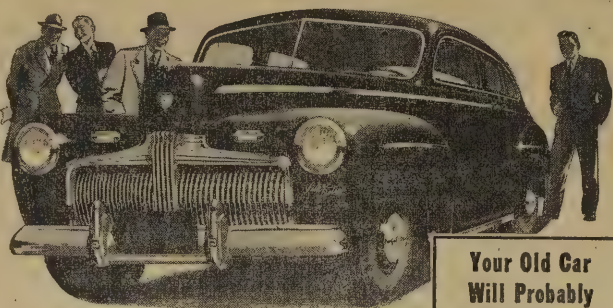

When General Grant was in front of Richmond and his army had been defeated in the Wilderness, he called his commanders together for a council of war. He stood before them and said, "Gentlemen, what do you think that we had better do?" Without exception he was advised to order a retreat. The men were sent back to their quarters, but before day break they received orders to march in solid column on the city of Richmond. That was what took Richmond. The Union army felt defeated but its General ordered "Forward March" and defeat was changed into victory. Christians, let us march in solid column against the enemy. Today it seems that the Church is defeated, but the Great Captain knows no defeat. He is heard to shout in the very midst of the confusion that is everywhere, "Forward March." If God be for us who can be against us?

I have painted and re-painted many a church in my life. At one church I met an unusual experience. Some of the members wanted to paint the church a color that was not white. As for me and quite a number of others, I thought that the church should be painted white. The argument grew heated and bad feelings arose. Hot words were spoken and the one who had better painted this church black. It is cheap and a good color to wear, and it is eminently appropriate for a church like this that needs to go into mourning over such a foolish quarrel among its members. His point was well taken and like good members should do they decided to paint the church white. If all the churches that have a foolish quarrel in them should be painted black a few churches would change color over night.

OUR COMPLIMENTS TO HOPSON CASH STORE GENERAL MERCHANDISE

(By MICKEY BROWN) Never was the word "general" so important nor did it cover so much ground as when it became part of the phrase "General Store." The population of many large communities covering many miles of territory depend upon the general store for their necessities. The people go to the HOPSON CASH STORE, located at 1433 Lapsley Street, in Selma, Alabama, phone 1286, when times are good and when times are bad, they still go there and find a friend. They may go there for merchandise and again they may drop in for advice concerning a problem at hand. Regardless of their object, they always receive the same courteous welcome. Mr. Hopson knows the source of supply where high quality merchandise can be procured at prices that his patrons can afford to pay. His reputation is known throughout this section. Without a doubt, he has more friends in ratio to population than any other concern in a metropolitan city. You will find a complete line of staple and fancy groceries, as well as fresh fruits and vegetables in season. You will also find a complete line of fresh and cured meats at prices you can afford to pay. In making this Special Business Stimulating Issue, the writer wishes to compliment the management upon rendering such a valuable yeoman service to his community and say that every man, woman, and child look to Mr. Hopson as their leader who is endeavoring to lighten their burden and make life more bearable. Julian Evans isn't satisfied with the money he is getting from the Cotton Stamps... having no cotton goods the amount is nil, however Julian has solved the problem... he is going to get a cotton candy machine... then he can trade Cotton Stamps.

We wandered into the Dixie the other morning while the girls were putting out this insect spray that is so nauseating and started to turn and leave... Louise Mims was heard to say, "That insect spray knows an insect when it sees one." Now we wonder what she could have meant... About the drunk on the main street Saturday afternoon who was taken off to jail. Those gathered around asked that the wife, who was near by, give him the money. As he was carried off the wife said, "Well, I got his money, that's all I wanted." Received a letter this week from John Hoesy who used to be manager of E. L. Klinger's here. John, as of course everybody else, caught the line up and down in the Mapleville Train accident article and accuses us of getting all upside-down over trips to the cellar, but such was not the case. John, we just hadn't got over a serious shock received when a subscriber came in with a bushel of good old Chilton County Copper Skin sweet potatoes on subscription.

Was by Coach "Bull" Spicer's home Sunday afternoon and "Bull" had the misssus out playing football with the small son while he sat on the porch and read the Sunday papers... guess he figured that playing football on week ends while at home would be to much like a humans holiday.

Seems Minnie Wade was all up in the air Sunday morning... husband Charles had taught her to fly and she was making her first solo... wouldn't surprise us any day to find that Elizabeth, Buddy or Celeste had applied for pilot's license... we understand that Minnie made a perfect three-point landing—after the fourth bounce.

Something we just learned... you can't stop the buzzing of an electric fan with a Shell... if you don't believe it ask Paul Williamson.

Wonder if old Jack Hayes can collect Taxes like he used to snag those balls to second base... you never can tell. Dame Rumor has it that he can't do that very thing... The Power Company stopped the night football games and everybody in town is closing Friday afternoon to go to the game and then work Friday night to make up for the lost time... and probably burn more kilowatts than the flood lights would have used.

The lady was going up the street with her husband and evidently giving Clanton the ha, ha... "Call a Taxi, that gives me a laugh, imagine, calling a Taxi in this Burg," she was saying, and she and her husband, or escort, both laughed big, but really the laugh was on them... they were in halting distance of at least five taxis... the Popwells, Jones and Snyder.

Traffic moves fast these days and during a short period of time you are likely to see most anything... but we believe we saw the prize winner this week when we saw a crippled boy about eighteen years old crossing the busiest corner in town on a green light.

Necessity is the mother of invention... or either Loren Smith down at Upchurch Drug Store, like Diogenes, in his search of an honest man, Loren has gone one better on the Power officials... when they told him he couldn't light his show windows he hung around in his old stock and resort, both laughed big, but really the laugh was on them... they were in halting distance of at least five taxis... the Popwells, Jones and Snyder.

Manager J. T. King at Elmore's is deserving of special mention this week for an attractive window display... the inspiration was the Red Cross Drive now underway and it is about the best dressed window display at night... you know the old saying "You can't keep a good man down."

Chilton Will Meet Holtville At 3 p.m. On Local Gridiron

Game Will Be Played In Afternoon To Comply With OPM Order

The office of Production Management at Washington, D. C. has issued orders through the Alabama Power Company that all outside lighting sports as flood lights for athletic sports is curtailed, or banned until, the winter rains bring more water into the reservoirs above the power plants. In view of this order the high school will have to play its three remaining football games in the afternoon. Friday afternoon Nov. 7 the Holtville High team comes to Clanton for the best game of the year. The local boys have had their most successful season to date in games won as they have been on the winning side of six games. This team has scored 185 to their opponents 6.

Holtville boasts of its strongest team in years, and if the Clanton boys take this game Friday they will certainly have to be alert from the starting whistle until the last play is run.

If you have planned to see only one football game this season let it be this one Friday afternoon, as it is sure to be a thriller. Kick-off games at three o'clock, gates open at 2:30.

Last Friday night Chilton met and defeated a thoroughly outclassed Wetumpka eleven by a score of 34 to 0. (Continued on Page 5)

Scout Executive Committee Meets

The Executive Committee of the Clanton Boy Scouts met Monday night for the purpose of planning ways and means to raise the quota for the Clanton District.

Nine members of the Committee were present and much enthusiasm was shown throughout the meeting. Bill Edwards, of Montgomery, Field Executive of the Montgomery Area Council, was present and gave a report of the progress of the local Troop under Scout Master Fred Bucklew. Fourteen boys have passed the Tenderfoot Test; Six have made a Life Scout and eighteen, Merit Badges have been awarded.

Scoutmaster Edwards has been a report from John Mullins showed that within the past ten days 10 boys have joined the Troop and within the next 10 days there are at least that many more who have asked to become members.

Reports from Dan Waite, finance director, was to the effect that the quota is far short and it was voted that the committees who have been named to make personal calls on the boosters of Scouting in Clanton double their efforts to see that every man and woman in the District who are able give to this worthy cause.

It was pointed out by Patterson Hicks, a member of the committee, that money invested in the boys of Clanton today will pay a big dividend in the years to come. Not only to Clanton but to the State and to the Nation.

Starting this week you will probably be called upon to make your contribution. Be ready and give all that you can to helping the boys.

Former Clanton Boy Now In U. S. Navy In Hawaii Writes He Likes The Service

Dear Mr. Tucker:
Will drop you a few lines from Hawaii just to let you know that we sailors, formerly of Clanton and Thorby, are enjoying the Western Hemisphere immensely. Clanton is represented by Clifford Smith, Leo Deason and myself. J. C. Williams and Alex Rowell are from Thorby. So you see we enjoy our little crowd and get-togethers very much. Alex is on the Cruiser, U. S. S. Salt Lake City, J. C. is on the Cruiser Honolulu while Leo is on the Battleship California. Clifford and I were fortunate enough to be placed on the Phoenix, a light cruiser. We are all stationed here in Hawaii.

Clifford and I were transferred from Norfolk, Va., to the light cruiser Helena to be transferred to the West Coast after having stopped off in Guantanamo, Cuba. Leaving the Helena in San Diego we were transferred to the Supply ship Arctic for further transportation to the Phoenix (one year ago today). Clifford and I have cruised about thirty five thousand miles since we were enlisted in June of 1940. Among our cruising, which includes our few trips to the States, we have been to the Philippine Islands. In the Philippines we first visited the capital city, Manila. There we saw the old Spanish Stone Forts and walls which were used in the Battle of Manila Bay. We got a good view of the world's most active volcano, Mayon, which erupted only a few days before our arrival! The thing most interesting to see here was the largest cabaret in the world, to say nothing of the pony carts which were a lot of fun to go to town in. From Manila we visited Iloilo and then to Zamboanga where we saw large quantities of black coral, the only place where it is found. In Cebu we saw the cross that Magellan laid. Cebu is the second largest city in the Philippines.

About Honolulu, there isn't much other than Diamond head and Waikiki beach. After you have visited there isn't any pleasure any more. There are very few white girls here that are decent, the Japanese women even smile while the Kanakas are too good, they aren't my type any way, after all the service men have

BUS DEATH SUIT FILED

Parents of Victim In Recent Tragedy Are Seeking $25,000.

A suit for $25,000, the first lawsuit growing out of the recent tragedy near Clanton, was filed in the Circuit Court Monday by parents of Walter W. Johnson, Jr., who hurried to death against the Greyhound Bus Company.

The suit, filed under the so-called homicide act which permits parents to institute suits without having named an administrator, was filed in Birmingham.

The suit declared that Johnson, 19, was employed by the Childersburg defense project and was returning to Birmingham from a visit to Montgomery.

Atty. J. H. Dinning filed the suit.

Clanton has swimming pools, baseball diamonds, tennis courts, boxing rings and theatres all free for enlisted men.

At the Y. M. C. A. in Honolulu one can enjoy reading, writing and swimming but this we have to do alone or with our shipmates.

About my personal life, I have completed a course in Radio repairing, and one for Petty officer, third class. I am now a qualified operator and will be rated as soon as there is a vacancy. My pay then will increase twenty-four dollars per month. In radio one can learn not only the operating and procedure but material as well. On this ship we have our soda fountain, laundry, post office, barber shop and movies.

I can truthfully say I am pleased to be in the navy and like it very much.

Hoping to be in Clanton this coming summer for a few weeks.

Yours truly,
WILL PORTER RUSH.
P. S. I enjoy your county paper to the utmost.

Lions Plan Annual Raffle For Early Dec.

The Clanton Lions Club will hold their annual Raffle early in December according to Grady Hefflin, chairman of the committee in charge of the raffle this year.

Nearly $200.00 was raised last year for the underprivileged in this manner and the Club is out to double that amount this year. Exact date and location of display windows will be announced in next weeks issue of the News.

At the regular meeting Wednesday night the Club had as guest speaker, Omar Reynolds, popular young attorney, who made a most impressive talk on service. Miss Kathryn Bryan also entertained the members with two selections. She was accompanied by Mrs. Bryan.

METHODIST CHURCH HAS PAID DEBT IN FULL

The Clanton Methodist Church will burn the mortgage which has been paid off in full, at the morning service next Sunday. The ceremony will be simple and yet very impressive. All members, former members and friends are invited to attend the 11:00 a. m. service and take part in the worship.

The Beautiful Church building and the handsome brick parsonage, are now free from debt. The property is valued at $90,000.00. This is a very conservative estimate as it would cost much more than that amount to build and furnish the building at present prices. The Congregation is to be congratulated on this wonderful achievement. The pastor, Dr. T. C. Canaday will preach at both services Sunday, 11:00 a. m. and 7:00 p. m. The Fourth Quarterly Conference will convene Monday night at 8:00 o'clock. Dr. Henry M. Andrews presiding. The Annual Conference will convene in Mobile, Ala., 26 with Bishop J. Lloyd Decell, presiding. All are invited to come to Church School Sunday 9:45 a. m. and stay for church.

The choir is preparing some fine music for the morning hour and also for the evening service.

The pastor reports a great time at the Dedication of the Beverly Methodist Church in Birmingham last Sunday.

Prayer meeting will be held Monday night instead of Tuesday of next week at 7:30 p. m.

PATES CHAPEL

It seems that our news is small this week. Only that everybody who have fall crops and have not got them gathered is trying to get them gathered before bad weather begins, because it seems that it is beginning to be a little rainy now.

But we had a fine day and night for church Sunday. Bro. Jones delivered a wonderful message and I know it was enjoyed by the nice crowd that attended church Sunday. There was a large attendance at church and B. Y. P. U. Sunday night and Bro. Nix delivered a wonderful message after B. Y. P. U. There were several visitors at each service and they have a great welcome to attend again.

Bro. Ed Cook will preach at our church the third Sunday of this month. Everybody has an invitation to come out and hear him, as we all know Bro. Cook lived in our community for many years.

We are sorry to know that we have some on our sick list this week.

Mrs. J. A. Cleveler is improving from the injury she received when their mules ran away. She is able to be on her crutches.

Mrs. Harvey Davenport who was visiting her parents last week was troubled with her tonsils.

Miss Thula Bell Price is suffering with a serious attack of appendicitis.

Mr. J. A. Cleveler is doing fine. He was not hurt as serious as Mrs. Cleveler.

We are sorry that Mr. Eual Langston's little boy fell from a tree Sunday and broke his arm in three places. We hope he will soon be able to go back to school.

We were also sorry that Bro. Jones' wife could not attend church with him Sunday.

Bro. and Mrs. Nix and daughter were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Vastine Hayes Sunday.

Children and Eunis Dawson, three children and Earlie Gene and Leona Dawson were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Dawson Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ollis Watley spent Saturday night with Mrs. Lida Underwood.

Mrs. Adelia and Virginia Franklin were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charley

The W. M. S. wishes to express appreciation through this paper to all who helped put over the "Country Store Sale" last Saturday night. The sale was opened with prayer by M. W. Mims, then sandwiches, Cocoa and coffee were served to all present. After which Miss Gladys Ray received the "Guess" Cake. Peanuts, popcorn and candy were sold at this time.

The cake for the ugliest woman brought more than eight dollars (and we will let you guess who got it.) Lee Chidress and "Pa" Sewell then sold the other items to highest bidders which brought a nice profit. We sang some songs and were dismissed with prayer by "Pa" Sewell.

We were glad to see so many back at Sunday School and preaching last Sunday, and may our attendance be even better next Sunday.

A good feed program is the basis of every good farm program and is more important now than ever before. Aside from the important fact that this country needs more feed to produce pork, milk cheese, eggs, and meat, there are several reasons found right on the farm why you should plant more oats this fall. They are:

1. Oats are the surest and cheapest feed crop that can be grown in Alabama.
2. Oats protect the soil from erosion in winter and spring.
3. Oats can be removed in time for another crop to be grown on the same land.
4. Oats are a "labor saver," cutting down on the amount of labor usually needed to raise such feed crops as corn.
5. Oats, if planted before November 30, will help meet requirements under AAA conservation plan calling for one-fourth of the cropland to be planted in erosion resisting and soil conserving crops. Additional plantings above requirements can be used, with approval of the county AAA committee, to substitute for pastures, terracing, and perennial legumes—the other three requirements under the AAA.

THE EXTENSION SERVICE OFFERS THESE SUGGESTIONS ON PLANTING OATS:

1. Plant one acre for each cow, or work animal, including colt.
2. Plant 2 bushels of a red rust-resistant variety per acre, using seed only after they have been treated for smut with formaldehyde.
3. Where oats follow crop which has not received as much as 500 pounds of a mixed fertilizer per acre use 200-300 pounds of superphosphate and 50 pounds of potash, or 300-400 pounds of 3-8-5, or 4-10-7 per acre at planting.
4. Graze from time plants will not pull up until about March 1.
5. Top-dress around March 1 with 100-300 pounds of nitrate of soda, or its equivalent, per acre.

DISEASES—

1. SMUT—Control as follows:

(a) Obtain a 1-quart sprayer (cost about 50 cents). Use 1 pint of 40 per cent formaldehyde for each 50 bushels of seed.

(b) Pile oats on clean floor, canvas, or in a tight wagon bed. Pour formaldehyde from bottle into sprayer. Fill bottle with water and pour it into sprayer. Shovel oats from one pile to another, giving 1 good squirt of solution to each shovel-ful of oats as they are moved.

(c) Round up the treated pile of oats and cover with bags which have been sprayed inside and out with solution in order that formaldehyde gas may be retained and penetrate entire pile.

(d) Leave oats covered five hours or overnight.

Maintenance!
More maintenance! what will be left for New Roads?

Concrete roads help answer that problem.

Concrete costs only one-third as much for maintenance, per mile per year, as other surfaces on Alabama's main roads.

So-called "low cost roads" may seem cheap at first. But in a few years their expense for repairs and maintenance eats heavily into construction funds.

Appeal to your public officials to pave your main traveled roads with concrete. Concrete is lower in cost per year, including maintenance. And its high visibility at night, its skid-resistance, wet or dry, saves lives and property.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear brother and son, Angles Chambers, who died three years ago, Nov. 3, 1938.

Only those who have lost can tell the pain of parting without farewell. What would I give to hold his hand, His loving face to see, His dear smiles, his dear voice that meant so much to me. He had none a last farewell. He said goodbye to none. His dear heart had ceased to be before we knew he had gone.

More Defense Foods Needed

"More milk, more eggs, more pork" is the food-for-defense appeal being made to American farmers by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Farmers are responding untidily, the Department says, and are turning huge quantities of feed from the AAA Ever-Normal Granary into energy-giving foods. Milk production is highest on record; egg production is higher than in any year except 1930; extra numbers of brood sows are being held over for fall farrowing. Nevertheless, the Department declares, even additional increases in these products must be made to supply the growing home demand and the emergency needs of Great Britain.

IN MEMORY OF CHESTER DAVIS

With a shadow of sadness in our heart, I will try to write in memory of my beloved cousin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Davis, who left this world of sin and sorrow for a home with our blessed Savior and his angels on October 30, 1941. He was budded on earth to bloom in heaven. He was a faithful member of Bethel Church. He will be greatly missed in his church, home and community. But the Lord knows best. He was survived by his wife, mother, father, three sisters, one brother and a host of friends and relatives. He was laid to rest in Bethel cemetery, November 1st, with many, many friends present.

Martin and Sons were in charge of the funeral. The family extends many thanks for every kindness in any way during his illness and death and also for flowers.

Local USDA Board Urges Increased Egg Production

Chilton County farmers are being urged by County Agent P. H. Smith to improve poultry management in order to reach egg production goals set by the local USDA defense board. The goal set for this county is 1,000,000 dozen for 1942.

Mr. Smith said figures reveal that the number of laying hens on Alabama farms were about ten per cent greater in September of this year than last while the national average for the same period was 24 per cent increase. Only four states, Maine, Vermont, Rhode Island, and Nevada had higher percentage increase of laying hens on farms than Alabama.

However, Alabama's total increase was 98,000 more than these four states combined. Alabama had 4,258,000 hens last September while 4,674,000 were on farms this September, an increase of 416,000.

Approximately 23 per cent more eggs were produced on Alabama farms during September than was the case last year; national average increased six per cent.

"According to John E. Ivey, Extension Service poultryman, Auburn, the feed-egg ratio (number of eggs it takes to buy 100 pounds of feed) is the most favorable it has been in 10 years, meaning that Chilton County farmers are in position to realize fair return in the poultry business. Feed under eggs has been set by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard at 22 cents per dozen through June 30, 1943, which should insure fair prices," says Mr. Smith.

Points Mr. Ivey urges to keep in mind to aid in increasing egg production include:

1. Early housing of birds.
2. North ventilators closed in winter.
3. Examine house for mites and eradicate.
4. Examine birds for lice (treat Blackleaf 40 for Sodium Fluoride).
5. Sift open intestinal tracts of all birds that die or are killed and examine for intestinal parasites (consult extension county or home agent for control methods).
6. Feed balanced ration (wet mash at noon, plenty of succulent green feed).
7. Use morning lights or all night lights to increase intake of feed.
8. Provide dry, deep litter in laying quarters.
9. Keep birds confined in house until noon each day (95 per cent of eggs produced in morning).

A NAMELESS BABE

The pale moon beams came slanting down
O'er a farmers home near Clanton town,
Calm and peaceful the country round,
This cold and frosty night.
Creeping about, no spoken word,
Cushioned tires, no sound was heard
The farmers slumber to disturb,
So cold this night.
A feeble cry, a lowly moan
Was heard without the farmers home
Deserted, unwanted, and alone
This frosty night.
A babe was found, a few hours old,
Flimsy basket, little form enfold,
Little face blue, pinched with cold,
This wintry night.
No mothers arm and gentle breast,
No lullaby to sleep and rest,
Death some times perhaps is best,
We never know.
Ever since the dawn of time,
Ever and anon, the perfect crime
Mocks the laws that would entwine
A murderous foe.
Farewell little babe, you are of worth,
Held close in the arms of mother earth,
The deemed by man of lowly birth—
And nameless child.
Pure and sinless, this little one,
Life so brief, had just begun,
Life race halted, so short the run
So undefined.
O Lord of host with all dominion
Your humble bard has made decision
May't coincide with your opinion,
A favor ask.
Give nameless babes some extra pleasure,
When you at times should be at leisure,
Denied while here, our dearest treasure,
So light the task.

INSTALMENT 18

THE STORY SO FAR:

Jody Gordon and his father, Roper, conducted a great raid upon Thorpe's herds in Montana. He was captured by Leathers and Kane, two of Thorpe's men. Leathers' girl, pretty Marquita, loved Roper, and made a desperate but vain attempt to him in the market fit to break them both, and finally he kills Lew's partner, and still he keeps on.

"Joe," Bill Roper said, "Joe—Walk Lasham himself is with Ben Thorpe!"

"Well—I ain't surprised."

"But God Almighty, Joe, if he walks into a fight with those two, all hell can't save him! He's as good as dead, the minute he walks in there!"

"That," said Old Joe, "is what I figured you ought to know."

CHAPTER XXV

It was very early; the sun was out just breaking over the winter-starved prairie, that Sunday morning as Bill Roper splashed through the creek that runs by Sundance, and rode into the little town.

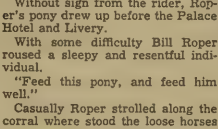

Behind the sky was such a clear crystalline blue as Bill Roper had not seen since he left Texas, and underfoot his tired pony was sinking fetlock deep in thawed mud. The mud itself was predicting a spring which Roper believed now he would never see.

Without sign from the rider, Roper's pony drew up before the Palace Hotel and Livery.

With some difficulty Bill Roper roused a sleepy and resentful individual.

"Feed this pony, and feed him well."

Casually Roper stropped along the corner where stood the loose horses which were being boarded here. He was chewing a straw as he came back to the sleepy man who was now shaking down hay.

Bill Roper splashed through the creek that runs by Sundance.

"See you have a 9B horse there—a good one."

"Yeah?"

"I figure Lew Gordon rode that horse in!"

"And suppos'n' he did?"

"How should I know? This dump is good enough for his horse, but it ain't good enough for him. He went to sleep with some friend or something, out at the edge of town."

"I'll take a room facing on this street," he said.

A little while later Roper sat at last with his heels caught in the window sill, resting as he regarded the empty street.

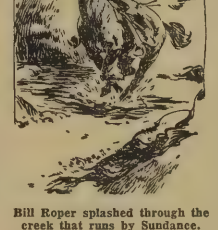

That Ben Thorpe was here was known to every cattleman in the north country. Ben Thorpe had been here many weeks; it was to Thorpe that Bill Roper was to have been delivered, here, if a kid horse wrangler following Jody Gordon had not shot Jim Leathers down. But, by the time, hard-riden 9B horse which Lew Gordon had ridden in, Bill Roper knew that Gordon had not been here long. He judged that he had got here in time.

Bill Roper sat there a long time. Seven o'clock passed, and eight, and nine, while he smoked and waited. Ten o'clock passed, and ten-thirty.

Then upon the quiet main street of Sundance appeared a figure—the one he had been waiting for.

It seemed to Bill Roper that Lew Gordon walked like a younger man than Roper had remembered. Bill Roper knew Lew Gordon by the flash of silver in his short beard, by the old hat, curiously like Dusty King's, which Lew Gordon had never changed. But he had to look twice to be sure that this man with the springy stride and erect bearing was the Lew Gordon he had known.

When he was sure, Bill Roper stood up and stretched; he filled his lungs with air, and at last let it go again, with a whoof like that of a pony which knows that it has come to the end of the long trail.

He drew a last drag from his cigarette, and strapped on the gunbelt which he had laid aside. Unhurriedly, he three or four times drew the iron from his leather, to be sure that it was running free. Then, with a purely unconscious motion, he cocked his hat over one eye and went down into the street.

He knew that Lew Gordon had gone into the Red Dog Saloon, and he walked toward it now.

For a moment Bill Roper, raider, night-rider, gunfighter, dreaded name of the Long Trail—experienced a twist of the heart, terrible, unbelievably acute. Then he shrugged, and walked into the Red Dog Saloon.

Lew Gordon stood at the bar of the Red Dog Saloon. The hard line of his jaw was blurred by a silver shag of whisker now, and his mustache was silver, and his hair; but the clear blue eyes were unbelievably young, younger than Bill Roper had ever seen them before. His hands were folded quietly, one elbow on the bar, and so greatly did this silver-haired man dominate the space in which he stood that it was minutes before Roper realized that there was a bartender there at all.

"You come," Lew Gordon said.

"Of course, Lew. Didn't you know I would come?"

"In one way," Lew Gordon said, "I'm glad you came. I want to say a couple of things to you, Billy, my boy."

"So you came," Lew Gordon said. "You was right and I was wrong. You fought him; I tried to smooth things out. I'm glad I've lived to tell you this: you was right and I was wrong!"

"Lew—I," Bill began.

"I should have killed him, Billy," Lew Gordon said.

"Lew! What are you telling me?"

"I know I was wrong," Lew Gordon said. "Yet, somehow he did not seem unhappy. Always I stood for law, for order—the decent thing, the thing that would build this country into something my kid could live in. But I guess it's not my kid to be. I should have swung with you when you tied into him in Texas, and again when you tied into him in the north! But I aim to square it all up today!"

"You mean—" said Bill Roper.

"He's coming to meet me here."

"With how many men?" Roper asked again.

"What does it matter?" Lew poured himself a drink.

Outside, on the ice in the walk of Sundance, were sounding the heels of approaching men.

"I can kill him," Bill Roper said, "I can kill him even if I die."

Lew Gordon's face changed swiftly. Surely he was the indomitable old man whom Bill Roper had always known.

"Ben Thorpe is for me," Lew Gordon said, "to make up for the quiet years."

And Bill Roper, looking deep into the young eyes of that aging man, finally said, "Okay."

And then the door darkened, and the approaching heels on the board were silent because they had arrived. The man Lew Gordon had sent for had come.

It was Ben Thorpe who stepped quickly through the door, and one pace to the left, so that his gun, already drawn, swept the bar. It was Walk Lasham who followed him through the door, stepping one pace to the right, so that the door was clear for the three unknown gunfighters who tried to enter all at once.

"Draw, Ben," Lew Gordon said; and then all guns spoke at once.

In the blast of gunfire that followed, no one could tell what happened—but Roper knew that all guns seemed to converge upon Lew Gordon, and frantically he threw the lash of his fire at Thorpe, at Lasham, at the unknown men at the door.

For a moment the guns spoke in a smashing roar, and the powder smoke stung Bill Roper's nostrils; and then suddenly there was silence again.

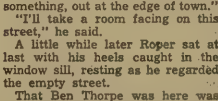

Thorpe and Lasham both were down at that gunspeak cleared, and those other strangers in the doorway had disappeared, except for a boot heel that dragged almost out of sight, and then was still.

Beside the bar of the Red Dog Saloon Lew Gordon still stood. Perhaps it was his bullet in the heart of Ben Thorpe—no man would ever know.

He turned now, slowly, elbow upon the bar, and looked at Bill Roper.

"Thanks, son," he said. The hand that held the heavy forty-five sagged deliberately, then dropped the gun; it made a strange clatter upon the floorboards of the floor. Then Lew Gordon's knees broke and he went down, and Bill Roper caught him as he fell.

Thin and tiny across the squalid town, as the thawing prairie, the church bell was ringing—a makeshift church bell ringing, on Sunday morning, as Lew Gordon died.

Bill Roper splashed through the creek that runs by Sundance.

old, without that sultry fire to back it up. "Well, that wasn't so."

"You mean—you mean to say—"

"Well," Marquita said, "he did not belong to me, not even for one minute, in all my life. How do you think you would like that, in my place?"

"But—at the Lasham camp you said—"

"I know I did. I would have got him if I could, in any way I could. I even came here because I knew he was coming here. But now I can just as well tell you it's hopeless, and I'm through. After all, I don't need to run after any man; I don't need to run."

"You mean—you're willing to let him go—even if—"

"Let him go? I never had him."

An odd edge of contempt came into Marquita's voice, but whether for Jody or herself was not plain. "Can't you get that through your head?" she turned toward the door impatiently.

Jody Gordon supposed that she ought to thank Marquita for having come here, for having made the confusion which she had made, but she was confused, and the words would not come. Instead she said, "Do you know where he is? Is he well? Is he safe and all right?"

Marquita's smile was mocking. "You want me to find him and send him to you?"

"I think," Jody said, "he'll come."

"Okay," Marquita said, and she pulled open the door.

"I want to tell you something," Jody said. "I want to tell you I appreciate—your letting me know—"

Marquita flashed a queer, hard smile, and his great eyes, in it, more bitterness in her smile than in her words. "Keep your thanks to yourself." Then she was gone.

After a moment Jody heard the hoofs of a team, and the wheels of the carriage in which Marquita had come—and gone—slicing the deep mud.

Yet, Bill Roper did not come.

When two days had passed a panic caught Jody Gordon, and she began to haunt the vicinity of Dusty King's cross. She believed that Roper would not leave the Ogallala country without visiting once more the grave of Dusty King.

But it was the evening of the fourth day, before Roper came.

CHAPTER XXVII

Sitting her quiet pony beside Dusty King's pile of stone, Jody Gordon saw Roper riding toward her when he was still a long way off. Roper was not alone. Beside him rode a little grasshopper figure in disreputable clothes which Jody recognized as that of Dry Camp Pierce. Somehow Dry Camp had managed to rejoin his chief when the others could not. It was typical of Dry Camp that he was riding beside Bill Roper now; would always be typical, so long as both of them should live.

The two riders hesitated at the five hundred yards. Roper said something to Dry Camp Pierce and after a moment or two Dry Camp turned his horse and went back. Bill Roper drove on, and behind him he feared this meeting, more than anything he had ridden into yet—but she knew he would not turn.

It seemed to Jody Gordon that time lagged forever as Billy Roper's pony slowly approached; it seemed to her that that slow approach was characteristic of all that had happened in that—delay, and delay, while wars were fought, and raids struck in, all through those smoky years in which they had been apart.

And yet, at last, when he stopped his horse beside her, and they looked at each other, there was something between them still, as if the smoky years themselves had built a wall.

Bill Roper said, "Hello, Jody. You're looking mighty well."

Jody said, "I'm all right."

There was a pause, curiously awkward; in the pause, Jody's horse struck in, all through those smoky years in which they had been apart.

"You didn't come to see me," Jody said.

"Well," Bill Roper said slowly—"I didn't know if you'd want me to."

"Does more than long, strange of King-Gordon? And I'm the other half."

"Jody—people like you and me can't go by things like that—things like legacies and wills."

Jody's voice was very quiet, yet it must have seemed to Bill Roper that she cried out. "You're going to leave me to carry all this, just because I'm a woman?"

"Lew Gordon left a sound organization," Bill Roper said, his voice dead. "You have many men, and good men, too. The works will roll, I think, with Thorpe gone."

Once more the long, strangely poignant silence. And to Jody it seemed a terrible thing that what they both wanted was the same thing, and that yet the smoky years somehow managed to stand between.

Jody Gordon turned away from Bill Roper, and faced Dusty King's cross, clean-limbed and slender, and there was something in her face that was enduring. It was the face of a woman who turned to the future without trace of doubt or fear; and she was the loveliest thing that Bill Roper would ever see.

"Jody," Bill Roper said uncertainly. "I want to tell you something. Other men will have to fight other wars; but my part of all that is finished. I'm not sorry my gun is hung up. I hope it's hung up forever. Once I thought that when Thorpe was smashed, my work would be through—but now I see it's only begun. I think we're going to build something pretty fine, if you'll stay by me."

Jody smiled a little. Without taking her eyes from the cross she reached her hand toward him, and took his.

"All the anger and the hate has gone out of me," Roper said; "and if you can only some day understand that my riding with the wild bunch was—was what I had to do—"

He fumbled for words, and stopped.

"Give me your knife," Jody said. "My—my what?"

She turned, and herself drew his skinning knife from the sheath at his belt. Then she stepped to the ground.

"In justice," Jody said; "in justice, and in memory of courage."

With the own hands she cut the third notch upon the cross, deep and clean.

1941 LOOKS AT 1916

THINGS have changed a lot in 25 years—yet there is much that is the same.

In 1916 it was Preparedness; in 1941, National Defense. But now the scale is bigger, the pace is faster. There was pressure on the telephone business then. The pressure is infinitely greater now. New training camps; new aviation fields; new munition plants; new shipyards and many other defense industries—all need telephones. Everyone is moving faster . . . and, when a nation hurries, it does so by telephone. Southern Bell spent about $4,600,000 on new construction in 1916. It is spending over $51,000,000 in 1941.

The entire Southern Bell organization serving nine Southern states, is giving "first call" to Defense. We believe you would want it that way.

Chilton Co. Farmers Have Been Asked To Increase Production

Chilton County farmers will cooperate in a State-wide Nation-wide program of increasing the production of meat, milk, eggs, oil and vegetables for home use and national defense, says P. H. Smith, County Agent.

Farmers of this county have been asked by the State USDA Defense Board to increase their production of oats, peanuts, hay, milk, hogs, beef and eggs and the county USDA defense board has approved increases in these crops and have approved the following goals for this county during 1942.

Oats for all purposes 9,000 acres; peanuts for crushing for oil (in addition to acreage allotments and for hogging and home use) 848 acres; hay for all purposes 5,616 acres; milk cows in production 7,500 cows; milk produced for all purposes 30,000,000 lbs.; hogs (pounds slaughtered for all purposes—liveweight) 2,010,247 pounds; beef cattle and calves (marketing and slaughter—liveweight) 1,478,036 lbs.; and eggs (production on farms) 1,000,000 dozen.

Farmers are reminded that these are goals or estimates of production and are in no way quotas. This means that farmers can exceed these goals if they desire. It is suggested that Chilton County farmers begin inspecting and planning to do their part in reaching the above goals. A good question to ask is, "Will my farm carry its part in producing food and feed crops to the defense of democracy?"

advice Government agencies how they can best present information and data on national defense to keep the public fully informed.

EMPLOYMENT AND WAGES

Secretary of Labor Perkins reported average hourly earnings of factory wage earners were 74.5 cents during August. Federal Security Administration's McCurt announced $45,700 jobs were filled through the State employment services during September—$5 per cent more than last year. Wage-Hour Administrator Fleming said he favored a program of wage stabilization which would not freeze wages at present levels, but would first adjust existing differences between one plant and another doing the same work and make provisions for adjustments to increases in the cost of living.

LABOR DISPUTES

The President directed Secretary of War Stimson to take possession of and operate the Bendix, N. J., plant of Air Associates, Inc., after a dispute developed at the plant over the reinstatement of strikers on the recommendation of the Defense Mediation Board. Colonel Roy M. Jones, in charge of 2,100 soldiers who took over the plant, said, "employees desiring to return to their jobs will be given all necessary protection." The Defense Mediation Board heard hearings on the labor dispute involving captive coal mines in the Appalachian area after the United Mine Workers voted to accept the President's request to return to work in the interest of defense pending settlement of the dispute. The U. S. Conciliation Service reported settlement of 30 other labor disputes.

DEFENSE HOUSING

Defense Housing Coordinator Palmer reported 1,285 publicly-financed defense homes were completed during the week ended October 25, bringing the total ready for occupancy to 46,672. Homes being built, or already completed under the defense program now number 101,785.

DENTAL CARE FOR SELECTEES

Lt. Commander C. R. Wells, chief dental officer of the Selective Service System, said in a speech in Texas that the program to rehabilitate defective service registrants with physical defects that can be remedied will begin with the treatment of 100,000 men for dental defects. The men will be treated by dentists in their own communities at the expense of the Federal Government.

CIVILIAN MORALE

The Office of Education announced that in cooperation with the Office of Civilian Defense it will develop a School and College Civilian Morale program through which "hundreds of thousands of teachers, educational leaders and citizen volunteers" can participate in the defense program by organizing "Freedom's Forums" in schools, colleges, clubs, churches and libraries to discuss national problems "with respect to facts and without hysteria."

CIVILIAN SUPPLY

Priorities Director Nelson ordered a 35 per cent reduction in the use of steel by non-mechanical ice-refrigerator manufacturers and a 17 per cent cut in production of domestic washers and irons. Mr. Nelson said that in one year 32,000 tons of steel would be saved by the latter cut.

ARMY

Secretary of War Stimson announced that specially selected Signal Corps reserve officers are in England studying air-raid defense prior to assignment with the U. S. Army Aircraft Warning Service. Mr. Stimson also announced the first battalion of the 87th Infantry Mountain Regiment—first regiment designed for mountain warfare—will be organized at Ft. Lewis, Washington, this month. The regiment will be made up of men specially skilled in mountain climbing and ski and snowshoe travel.

SHIPS

The Maritime Commission launched two more Liberty ships. The Navy announced the 368 craft in its small-boat building program are being built by 76 firms throughout the country to spread the work as far as possible.

POWER

Priorities Director Nelson inaugurated a power conservation program calling for curtailment of the use of power by non-defense industry in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee unless heavy rains end the power shortage in these States before November 10. Program would prohibit use of power for advertising signs, shop windows, and night athletic events.

AID TO BRITAIN AND RUSSIA

OPM Materials Director Batt said in a radio speech from Washington he had returned from the aid conference in Moscow with the thought that the "same old, same old" course for the U. S. "is to deliver the goods—everything we possibly can provide—to the hands of people who can use them... against the enemy while he is still thousands of miles from our shores."

The Maritime Commission announced delivery of the first of 60 emergency cargo boats being built for the British. The President signed the $5,985,000 second lend-lease appropriation and created in the Office for Emergency Management a Lend-Lease Administration with Edward R. Stettinius Jr. as Administrator.

Small Town Can Aid National Defense

The low-income farmer in Chilton County has a place in the Farm Defense program announced by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, no less than the large producer, it was stated today by Marvin Durbin county farm supervisor of the Farm Security Administration.

"No matter how small the farm," said Mr. Durbin, "it can be turned to the purposes of national defense, which means, in the case of agriculture, the production of more food for ourselves and for our friends overseas."

"For every family on the Farm Security program, minimum production goals have been established, and its farm plan will be written for the coming season with a view to producing which the Secretary says is needed abroad as well as at home."

The minimum production to be urged by every FSA family in Chilton County will be: Wheat, three acres; a 12-month garden, one-third acre; Irish potatoes, one-fourth acre; sweet potatoes, one-half acre. For feed crops, increase from 50 to 200 per cent will be urged in every farm plan written, the better to assure larger production from livestock enterprises with minimum goals as follows: Oats and barley, three acres; hay, six acres; grain sorghum, two acres; soil building crops, five acres.

Every family's plan will include a minimum of 100 chickens, with egg production to be emphasized; cows, two; hogs for market, one, hogs for subsistence, four.

Every item in the program involves increase over the figures for the present production. Mr. Durbin pointed out that even if a farm is too small to produce food or feed in amounts important to the national goals, the little farmer can do his part by raising produce for his own use, to avoid buying of stocks that will be necessary for shipment overseas.

As for the cash crops of which the Secretary has asked increased production—peanuts and truck—the amounts assigned to the individual small farmer will be calculated according to County quotas.

The famous Speer family, formerly from Lawrenceburg, Tenn., will be in concert here next Tuesday night, November 18. Admission is 15c and 30c tax included. This fine group of singers are considered the best in the South, and are loved by all who know them. The Woman's Missionary Society is sponsoring this concert and the proceeds will go for the improvement of the church.

Dairy Farmers Advised To Place Orders

Alabama dairy farmers who will need extra milk cans, pails, strainers, kettles, cream cans, or other steel and tin-plate milk-making equipment in 1942, will do well to place their orders as soon as possible, according to W. F. Burns, extension dairyman.

Division of steel to defense needs has made it necessary to restrict civilian use of metal.

MORAL ECHOES
REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

Two heavily loaded ponies were climbing the mountain side and one of them jostled the other. On being jostled by his road companion, and being tired and nervous, the jostled pony turned and kicked the other. His sharp hoof hit the leg of the one doing the jostling and broke it. The injured pony went down under his load and was no longer of service on the mountain side. How like those two ponies do we find many in the human world. We all have our loads to carry and under these loads we become tired and nervous. Some one jostles us along the path and we show our resentment by kicking back. Even nations jostle each other and they leap at each other's throat. One or the other must go down in the fight. What poor judgment we poor mortals have and what little patience we exercise toward each other.

When it comes to real beauty the mountain goat is lacking, but after all he carries with him some commendable virtues. The goats on the mountain side will choose a leader and he feels his importance. When his drove comes to a dangerous place this leader will stretch himself on the ground, make his body secure, and then allow all the drove to trample over him to safety. He is the leader but he does not object to being trampled upon. By his act he says, "Walk over me to safety." In the higher ways of life, in that place where you and I live, we are not so willing to be trampled upon, even if that does mean the safety of others. Life today is made up of those of us who look after number one. We still say, "You jostle me and I will kick back."

Did you know that your very countenance will betray you? One day I was in the office of a business man when a customer came in to seek an adjustment over some goods purchased. The customer was very angry and started out calling the merchant all kinds of names and finally wound up by yelling at him that he was a liar. The merchant's face turned red, but in a very kind, even, smooth tone he said to the mad man, "Tom, I think that you have gone far enough, and if I were you I would hush, you will get a fair adjustment on your goods." The next day this merchant went to the customer and apologized for the way he showed his temper. The customer was surprised and assumed that he lied, but the merchant contended that he should have been master of himself to the extent that his face would not have turned red. When we have power on the inside to live out our faith and profession in Christ, then our very face will tell the message abroad.

In Kentucky there was a woman who visited a doctor's office week after week all the time claiming to be suffering from a nodule pain. The doctor examined her and treated her as best he could, but she did not get any better. Finally he told her that there was nothing wrong with her body. Then he asked her if there was not something eating her up on the inside. She confessed that she was just burning up with a desire to tell her husband to go to hell. A lot of the so-called ailments of the body are imaginary. The trouble is not in the body at all; it is in the mind the disposition, the attitude. Any one, man or woman, who carries a trouble in the bosom, will soon be complaining with bodily ailments. Madness, revenge, jealousy, hatred, self centered, and many other like conditions, are the best friends that the doctors have to bring in patients. About half of the ailments of the world today should be carried to the ministry and not to medical profession.

A high churchman was one day preaching in a beautiful temple of worship and after the service was over a lady advanced to the altar to shake hands with the preacher. As she clasped hands with him she said, "Doctor, to what church do you belong?" The minister, with a twinkle in his eye, replied, "My sister, I belong to a church like all the rest of us, that is holy and that has a very high standard of life, and so far as I know I am the only member in that church living up to those ideals." I am not certain that the woman understood all that the good doctor meant to say, but this I know, the most of us think that we are about the best member of the church to which we belong. There are many names on our church register, but there is something radically wrong with the most of them. As for me, I am doing more giving, working more and sacrificing more than others. What presumption. Better go down in the dust and say, "God be merciful to me a sinner."

Is special training required for a sailor to be assigned to a submarine? Yes, men who volunteer for submarine work are trained at the submarine school at New London Conn. This training offers special instruction dealing with Diesel engines, radio, electricity and sound.

VERBENA NEWS

The Senior I class of Verbena high school gave an oyster supper last Wednesday night in honor of the Senior III class. The supper was a great success, and plenty of fun. Games were played in the auditorium, and supper was served afterwards in the Home Economic room. The following people were at home for the week end.

Cordelia Gullledge, Valparaiso, Fla. Josephine Stanley, Montevallo; Bill Barrett, Auburn; Bill Elland, University; Calvin Little, Auburn; Elizabeth Hibbert, Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Williams were in Thorsby, Saturday visiting Mrs. Williams' parents.

Our boys lost Friday in their game with Maplesville. They won 25 to 6, but we expect our luck to change soon. We don't have a game Friday. P.T.A. meeting will be held Thursday night at 7:30. We will have two speakers: Mrs. Jones, County Welfare worker, Dr. Walton, County Health Doctor. All parents and teachers are urged to be present and any who are interested in our school and community are invited. This is the first time these new workers have spoken in our community and we want to be at P.T.A. and welcome them.

National Education Week is being celebrated in our school this week. Mr. Maddox and members of the County Board of Education will visit us and all other schools sometime during the week.

Chapel talks will be made at Chapel this week.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, James Willard Davenport, who departed this life one year ago today, Nov. 15th.

We have wept not as those who have no hope. We have tried to be brave and courageous. God has helped us in our sorrow. He has given us cheer from his word. He has given others words of comfort for our lonely aching hearts. For all of this we are thankful. We appreciate more than words can express, every kind word, deed and thought.

—Mother, Daddy, Brother and Sister.

Burning Woods To Kill Weevils Foolish

Burning the woods to kill the boll weevil is like burning the barn to get rid of the rats, according to W. A. Ruffin, entomologist of the Alabama Extension Service. In other words the cure is worse than the "disease."

Although many Alabama cotton growers burn their timberland to destroy hibernating weevils, Ruffin considers the practice wasteful and "undesirable." It is true that some weevils hibernate in the woods, he says, but they generally do so within 50 feet of the edges bordering cottonfields.

Burning over large areas of forest destroys timber, kills undergrowth and seedlings, injures wildlife, and often aggravates soil erosion by destroying leaf mulch. What's more Ruffin points out, there are always enough weevils left to start infestations the following spring and summer if weather conditions are favorable for their survival.

It Takes Teamwork In LAW ENFORCEMENT, Too

BEHIND the record of every great football eleven you'll find charging linemen and blocking backs. THAT'S WHY the brewing industry is running interference for Alabama's aggressive ABC Board in its drive to keep all retail beer outlets clean and inviting. That's teamwork, too.

But you, the public, can do more than sit in the grandstand. WE WANT YOU TO PLAY ON THE TEAM.

Do this by reporting "offside" retailers to our Committee and confine your patronage to reputable outlets when you drink beer—the beverage of moderation.

Continued Compliance With OPM Limitation Order L-16 By Commercial Customers And Voluntary Curtailment By Others May DELAY NEED For Industrial Curtailment

THIS is not a promise. It is a hope. The increasing effectiveness of the power-pooling arrangement over a wide area extending from southern Ohio to Texas and from Virginia to Florida; the willing compliance of commercial customers with the "black-out" provisions of OPM Limitation Order L-16, and the voluntary curtailment of use by many others, made possible delaying the effective date of the 30% industrial curtailment until Nov. 17.

The Office of Production Management has stated that continued compliance with the "black-out" provisions of the order and further effort by all electricity users in home, store, office and factory to voluntarily curtail their use MAY make possible another extension of the date, so that industrial payrolls can remain at a high level with consequent benefit to both worker and merchant.

Neither the OPM nor the power producing agencies have any desire to require needless curtailment. Should additional provisions of Limitation Order L-16 be made effective, it will be only because of absolute necessity.

1942 COTTON ACREAGE SAME AS LAST YEAR

Cotton Marketing Quotas Announced For Next Year
Referendum To Be Dec. 13

National cotton marketing quotas for the marketing year beginning August 1, 1942, are announced by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, and Saturday, December 13, 1941 has been set for the referendum. The 1942 National acreage allotment will be approximately 27,400,000 acres, or about the same as last year. Farmers who plant within their acreage allotments, may market all the cotton grown on these acres.

The 1942 quotas will not become effective unless approved by two-thirds of the eligible producers who vote in the referendum on December 13. If approval is given this will be the fifth year quotas have been used by cotton growers.

"Cotton is one of the surplus crops for which no acreage increase is asked in the 1942 under the Farm Defense Program. Faced by restricted world markets, we have on hand a supply of about twice the size of recent crops. The quota measure," the Secretary said, "has proved itself essential protection to cotton growers against the tremendous surplus. In time like these when we need all our national strength economic as well as productive, quotas as part of the National Farm Program take on added importance."

Approval of quotas to help adjust the surplus will make possible continued use of loans and we know from experience this year that loans work hand in hand with quotas to protect cotton income."

Under provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, loans are prohibited in years when quotas are rejected by producers. Regardless of whether quotas are approved by cotton producers, the conservation phases of the AAA program will remain the same.

State Wins Tax Case

The U. S. Supreme Court held Monday that Alabama has the right to collect sales tax and use taxes on materials sold to contractors operating on the cost-plus plan. The decision will mean more than $100,000 additional revenue for the State.

Clifford Smith Writes Letter From Hawaii

Mr. Tucker: I thought I would drop you a few lines to let you know how the navy is. You remember the boy who wrote the navy the same time I did, don't you? Well his people have been sending him a paper once in a while and I see where you are the Navy Editor and I read the write ups about they were all good. I can say one thing about the navy and that is it is a real good place. You can really get a lot in the navy and you see that you'll never forget. I've seen a great deal of the world since I've been in. I've been on the east coast of the States, Cuba, Panama, the coast of the States, Hawaiian Islands and I've just returned from the Philippine Island. That is covering the country in a year and six months, isn't it? Well I guess I will close for this time. —Clifford R. Smith.

How did the name "tar" originate? The days of wooden ships and iron guns, it was customary for sailors of the U. S. and all nations to soak their trousers in tar in order to waterproof them. From this custom the nickname "tar" originated.

FOOTBALL

when they defeated a strong and tricky Holtville eleven by a score of 21 to 7.

This was by far the hardest game which Chilton has played and was the best game of football to be seen here this season.

Holtville while presenting a much lighter team than Chilton's showed a well coached eleven which worked smoothly and which scored the second touchdown which has been made this year against Chilton.

Chilton's first score came in the first quarter after a bad punt and an offside penalty against Holtville put Chilton within scoring distance. After several line plays had driven all most to the goal, Cost passed over the line to Collins who lateraled to Higgins who scored. Collins' try for extra point was good.

The second score came in the second quarter when Cost who proved with his line plunging, drove over for a terror to Holtville all afternoon, the marker. Collins again converted the score and Chilton led 14-0.

The third quarter saw neither team score. Holtville began to click shortly after the fourth quarter began and scored its only touchdown on a pass from Holt to Frasier who sped around left end to tilly. The try for point was good and the score stood 14-7.

Midway in the fourth quarter Chilton put the game on ice when Payton crashed over the right side of the line and sped 55 yards down the field to go over standing up. This marked the final score of the game and the score remained 21-7.

The game was well played and hard fought. Particularly outstanding was the playing of Cost who crashed his way through the Holtville line time after time for long gains. Cost carried the burden of the ball carrying in this game as Holtville had Payton called up for most of the game. Chilton has not only a splendid offense but an equally tight defense. The work of Paul Smith and Captain Collins the two ends for Chilton was particularly impressive both from a defensive and offensive angle.

PROFESSOR HICKS WRITES ON GOOD SPORTSMANSHIP

The people of Clanton and Chilton County have been most cooperative and loyal to the athletic program of the high school since I have been connected with the high school. This line cooperation the coaches and I both appreciate very much. Without your very valuable support we could not have had the success that we have enjoyed during the past years, but in our zeal and enthusiasm for the team and the game that is sometimes under way, we are unintentionally developing an unfavorable reputation for our school and community. I have reference to the disturbance that occurred during the fourth quarter between the football ball game between Clanton and Holtville Friday afternoon November 7.

During the stress of excitement of a closely contested game we are inclined to let our emotions get the better of our judgment, and in our desire to befriend and support the home team we often do very thoughtless and unwise things. It is not unusual for boys under the tension of excitement to lose control of themselves and commit unsportsmanlike acts, but we try always to have competent officials capable of handling any situation that may arise. It is always unwise for spectators to go upon the field or floor of an athletic contest in case of an unusual situation.

So to our friends and supporters we urge that you in the future refrain from encroaching upon the field of activity and leave all controversies to be settled by the officials and the coaches. We usually have sufficient police protection to assist the officials in charge if they should need such assistance.

I know that you are as much interested in the good reputation of our school and community as we are, and your cooperation toward reestablishing our reputation as a community that knows how to display good sportsmanship will be very much appreciated by the students and teachers of your high school.

Red Cross Defense Program Calls For Roll Call Response

America's national defense efforts require a great expansion of all American Red Cross activities. Dr. C. O. Lawrence, chairman of the Chilton County Red Cross Chapter, declared today in urging "all out" support of the greatest membership Roll Call in Red Cross history, to be from November 11 to 30.

Dr. Lawrence said the local chapter had set a quota of 2,250 members for its share in the national appeal. "We must go over the top in this Roll Call," he added, "because the continuation of the national Red Cross program depends upon the success of the local chapters in appealing for members."

Funds realized during the Roll Call period, he pointed out, will be used to enable the American Red Cross and its chapters to carry on its expanded services to the Army and Navy and 146,016,000 are consumed.

Medals and decorations in the United States Navy are, for the most part, worn on the left breast. This custom may be traced from the practice of the Crusaders of the Middle Ages wearing the badge of honor of their orders near the heart.

Fresh eggs are probably the most popular part of the menu of the United States Navy. In one year over 146,016,000 are consumed.

"What Japan Needs"—Headline Yes sir!—a spanking.

Little Windy Willie is fast quieting down to a gentle political zephyr.

Making a British "second front" to aid the Russians in American daily headlines won't help much.

Price and wage control will prove as impractical and as unenforceable as moonshining and bootlegging.

When the Russians win the war from Germany will they go over to England and finish the House of Windsor as they did the House of Romanoff?

Congratulations Sister Lawrence on your 47th Anniversary with Livingston's Our Southern Home. May you spend and enjoy many more useful years.

A lot of folks think John L. Lewis ought to be in jail, and a lot of folks think the folks who think John L. Lewis ought to be in jail, ought to be in the penitentiary, and a lot of other folks think both contingents ought to be in a concentration camp for the duration.

At It Again

Washington coal waters have been filled with coal operator and railroad "submarines" the past week, firing verbal "torpedoes" at the proposed Coosa-Alabama development. It is these same "submarines" that have prevented any development thus far, and we shall watch closely the congressional reaction.

A Billion Dollars

If the Associated Press is correct the president has granted the Russian Communists a billion dollar credit without interest, with which to buy war weapons.

Think what a billion dollars would do towards rehabilitating the Tobacco Road, the Joys of the Grapes of Wrath, and millions of others like them here in America.

Liquor Profitreering

Illicit liquor making and selling will never be broken up in this or any other state, so long as this or that state engages in liquor profitreering, as is the case in Alabama. It comes to the editor's desk this week, among the myriad of other "releases," a copy of State Store Liquor prices. They range from $12.00 per gallon for the cheapest "rotgut" in miniatures, at restaurants to $26.25 per gallon for the best bottled-in-bottle, and imported brands, at liquor stores.

So long as the State itself engages in liquor profitreering it cannot hope to squelch the moonshiner and bootlegger.

FROST AND SUNSHINE

Well we've had a few black frosts and we are likely to have a black one before we go to press. We always regret very much to awake and see a "killing" frost! It means all the green plant life and the pretty leaves are gone. Everything looks forlorn when it strikes!—Collinsville, New Era.

Look up, Lady—above the lofty frosty mountain top the God of Day sends forth golden shafts of light and warmth to work the miracle of rebirth.

Yet a little while, and the violets and the rooster-heads, the wild plums and Indian pinks, the honeysuckle and the rhododendron will come in profusion and in all their glory to make you happy, and glad that you are one of God's children, carrying on in a free and happy land.

If there were no dead leaves, there could be no beautiful flowers and green shrubbery in the Springtime.

THERE'LL COME A TIME

There is likely to come a time when people of this great and glorious America will forget false dignity, frills, fancy hats, colorful clothing and precise conduct and fall on our faces before God seeking comfort and gratification. This is not an idle thought of an imbecile. It is entirely probable. Let's begin now to mend our ways, be loyal to the church of our choice, treat our fellowman honestly in an effort to avoid conditions that could be our lot.—Cherokee County could be our lot.—Cherokee County

Press Comment on Col. Bibb Graves

PRESS FOR GRAVES

There's one thing that Bibb won't have to worry about next year... that's the support of the press.—Cullman Banner.

OVER TUSCALOOSA WAY

From the way it sounds around this neck of the woods nothing but death can rob the "Little Colonel" of another term as governor. Having seen him lately, we would say that "Miss Dixie's" lesser half won't be cheated that way.—Tuscaloosa News.

UP IN DEKALB

Though Bibb Graves has never carried DeKalb County in his race for governor, it begins to look as if the voters will put him over in a big way in his third race. Great waves of votes are looming on the horizon.—Fort Payne Journal.

HAPPY EVENT COMING

The veteran Editor Mark Tucker, of Chilton County News, celebrated his 70th birthday recently. Congratulations. In all probability before he celebrates another birthday his favorite governor will have been reelected.—Wetumpka Herald.

FOR THE GOOD OF ALABAMA

It seems that the people of Alabama have all decided ex-Governor Bibb Graves is the only available candidate for the good of Alabama, or that no other man has any chance at all. In either case, they've figured just exactly right.—Sumter County Journal.

GOVERNOR-IN-WAITING

When a man has been elected but not inaugurated, he is called "governor-in-waiting." When a man has been nominated but not elected, he is called (in the South) "governor-designate." But what is the name when a man has been neither nominated nor elected but is so sure of inauguration that people begin to treat him as if he were already in office? The only term we can think of is "governor-in-waiting."—John Temple Graves II, in Birmingham Age-Herald.

SAFE BET

We notice by the Fort Payne Journal that DeKalb County is in the Graves column. Well, if DeKalb goes for Graves that just about makes the whole State that way. Pretty safe bet anyway.—Sumter County (York) Journal.

DeKalb will probably be caught in a tidal wave, anyhow—folks love to follow a winner—but why our neighboring County to the north has given for Ex-Ex-Ex-Ex dry have heretofore is puzzling. As to waging: Isn't it unsportsman-like to bet upon a certainty?—Coosa River News.

WILL TAKE A MODERN MIRACLE

Those who plan to oppose Col. Graves in the gubernatorial race should have attended the mayor's convention in Dothan. It would have been an eye-opener for them—it might even have saved them a lot of hard work, disappointment, and heartache. Alabama's political powers that be have pledged their support to Graves. Their support cannot be wrested away from the Colonel by any man whose name has thus far been seriously connected with the 1942 gubernatorial race. It will take a modern miracle to keep Bibb Graves out of the governor's office. —The Dothan Eagle.

MARSHALL FOR GRAVES

We ran across our old friend Claude Scruggs, of Guntersville, Marshall County, the other day. Claude Scruggs was a power for Frank Dixon in his campaign for governor the first time against Col. Graves. But he is for Dixon the last time. But he is for Graves now.

"I made up my mind three years ago we needed Graves for governor and I am all out for him," said Mr. Scruggs. "Marshall County can be counted on to give Col. Graves a big majority this time."

Marshall goes as Scruggs says, and we believe it will, it will be the first time Col. Graves has ever carried the county, we believe.—Atticus Mullin, in Montgomery Advertiser.

CANDIDATES TAKE NOTICE

The Association of Tax Collectors and Tax Assessors is now on record as endorsing Bibb Graves for a third term for Governor. This endorsement follows similar action by the Association of Probate Judges and Commissioners and the League of Municipalities. Other likely candidates should spare themselves a lot of useless trouble by taking note of the above and those who don't like Graves as Governor might as well begin arranging now for a 4-year vacation.—Grove Hill Democrat.

Brother, although there may be some who cuss him, even those recognize the handwriting on the wall and have ceased their tirades, under the old axiom: "If you can't beat him, join him."—Cullman Banner.

STATES POLITICAL LEADERS BELIEVE GRAVES WILL BE NEXT GOVERNOR

Fred Taylor, News-Age-Herald Staff writer, says: "County and municipal leaders from over the state, teamed up for the first time and feeling Bibb Graves will be the next Governor, sat down with the 'Little Colonel' at Montgomery last Thursday and talked over revenue problems.

"Nothing definite was decided, but the conference was termed 'very satisfactory' by several of the city and county boys present. Both these potential groups are supporting Graves for governor and they feel that with huge surpluses accumulating in the state treasury, they ought to have more state funds for local governments, which Graves is pledged to give them. The former governor advocated this generally in his party speech to the Legislature in 1939 and recently he has pledged anew to allocate state revenues to give cities and counties more. A definite revenue program, with this in view, is being worked out."

ALABAMA ISOLATIONISTS

We notice some few publications that come to our office are still predicting that Graves is not the man for Governor—that the "Little Colonel" has a worry on his hand if he thinks he can be elected. Well, we will just have to brand these few as "Alabama isolationists" for their lack of knowledge just how popular Bibb Graves is with the overwhelming majority of Alabamians, and to say that a man that is as popular as Bibb Graves has anything but majority endorsement, simply registers prejudice and misinformation. "Alabama isolationists"—Sumter County Journal.

Mr. Editor, you have made a good pronouncement. Maybe those gentlemen don't realize that they are being isolationists now, but there'll come a day when they will know what real isolation means.—Cullman Banner.

THE PEOPLE WILL SEND HIM BACK TO THE CAPITOL

Every day someone mentions the possibilities of Bibb Graves returning to the governor's seat at Montgomery. We do not claim to be political prognosticators but things are looking mighty favorable at the present time for the Little Colonel.

Graves has always been one of the most popular men in the State of Alabama and will continue as one of our most popular men. It is evident that a majority of the people in the state already want him to come back as governor.

Everyone knows that Graves will be a candidate. In fact some say that he has never stopped running. But in the time he has been out of office he has done much for the state through his connections in Washington. He is the ideal man to have in Montgomery at this time when defense contracts are being given certain sections.

The Little Colonel is and has been a good friend of President Roosevelt for more than 25 years. He has helped Alabama get many contracts and favors from the government we would not have gotten except for his influence. You can't help but like a man of Graves' calibre. The people of Alabama will again send him to Capitol Hill.—Northwest Alabama.

IT NOW SEEMS CERTAIN

"It now seems as certain as anything human and in the future can be for ahead, that Col. Bibb Graves, twice governor of Alabama, will be elected next year to a third term at that high office."

"Col. Graves, he is called Colonel about as often as he is called Governor, has been particularly fortunate in his success in the office of governor. Each time he has been followed by a man who denounced him and all his works, and promised to high heaven to sweep out and scrub down everything that might even look like Bibb Graves. Then along comes the first day of his successors took for Graves to come back. This, it seems to us, is especially true of the present governor."

"And so it looks like a third term for Graves. And why not? The people want him; at least a great majority. Realizing that the politicians have staged the mightiest band wagon crash this State has ever seen. Practically every newspaper that has declared itself so far, is for Graves. "Weeks ago Atticus Mullin, of the Montgomery Advertiser, one of the shrewdest political writers in the South, gave it as his opinion then, that no other man in the State, had a chance against Graves. So, barring a miracle, as certain as January, 1943, rolls around, Alabama will have her first third term governor—and his name will be Col. Bibb Graves.—Shelby Co. Reporter.

Is there any time for athletics on board ship? Yes, the Navy encourages athletic competition. Each ship has an officer in charge of athletics who is assisted by a committee of officers in arranging contests. On most ships there are boxing, wrestling, basketball and baseball teams. Tournaments are often held within the Fleet, with the various winners receiving trophies as awards.

Bus Tragedy Echoes

People throughout Alabama were horrified by the terrible bus accident that occurred near Clanton and snuffed out seventeen lives. The bravery of the driver in giving his life for his passengers will not end the long remembered.

The lady who said, "I'll never ride a bus again," will certainly ride them again. Though there is a horror in each heart at the accident, there is a confidence in buses and their drivers that no accident will not end. Such accidents occur everywhere occasionally, in the home, in private cars, on the streets and on trains. As long as bus drivers care enough for their passengers to risk their lives for them, there will always be people who will continue to patronize buses as a means of conveyance.—Hale County News.

A Hero Dies

Every now and then men in the commoner walks of life rises to great emergencies and become heroes. Such a man was W. P. Alton, Birmingham bus driver who died this week performing his duty and his job.

When his bus caught fire and crashed into a culvert near Clanton Monday Alton was thrown clear of the wreckage. Disregarding his own personal safety he attempted to reenter the blazing vehicle and rescue those inside. He lost his life in this valiant attempt.

There are no medals for W. P. Alton but he wasn't thinking of medals. He was a captain who preferred to go down with his ship.—Atmore Advance.

CALHOUN BACKS BIBB GRAVES

As group after group over Alabama endorses the candidacy of Col. Bibb Graves for Governor of Alabama, and reports from every section of the state indicate the popularity with Alabama voters has not been exaggerated, it is gratifying to know that Anniston and Calhoun County are no exceptions.

Everywhere here one is told—"Bibb Graves is the man."

There is support by no one faction, by no one classification of our citizens. Merchants, professional men, industrialists, laboring men, white collar workers—all the overwhelming majority of all are agreed that Bibb Graves is the man to lead upward and out of the years of stress ahead. No other man holds so much confidence of the people.

The Anniston Times traditionally has supported Bibb Graves. We have been supporting him in these last two years as he has been a steady acclamation to the highest office of state. No other man has ever reached as a candidate for Governor of Alabama. We are proud to have had our judgment so verified by the people.

We do not offer Bibb Graves as a man of perfection. Like all men he has his points of weakness. But any fair observer, looking back at the two previous administrations of Bibb Graves, will admit that his shortcomings are outweighed by his fine qualities—PROVEN qualities, we emphasize—that no other candidate in the field can approach. His fine school, his agricultural services, his fair dealing with labor and capital alike—all these in two previous administrations are proof of Bibb Graves' right to a third term in the Governor's Chair.

The favorite smear-terms of opposing parties are "pie" and "pie." They say that Bibb Graves will serve "pie" to all his friends. The difference in Graves and some others is that he has never denied his loyalty to his friends, and has never sought to cover up the fact.

In view of the almost unanimous support accorded Bibb Graves, we predict that Bibb Graves will give Alabama the best of his three administrations. We know that he has deliberately refrained from striking at certain of his opponents because he feels that this is a time when Alabama as well as the nation needs internal harmony and unity. It is our hope to know that Calhoun County is joined in the solid ranks behind the "Little Colonel" who has led us well.—Anniston Times.

Press Comment on Judge Sparks

Chauncey Sparks has made his official bid for the job of governing the State of Alabama during the next term. It will take more than "sparks" to burn brother Bibb down in the coming election. It will take fire—and plenty of it.—Ft. Payne Journal.

From the Lurvenne Journal:

Information comes to the Journal Tuesday that Judge Chauncey Sparks, of Eufaula, runner-up in the last gubernatorial campaign, that he would again seek the public office in the near future. "Democrat's primary." Well, this breaks the silence, and the doubt that Bibb Graves will not have any opposition. We thought all the time Judge Sparks would announce his intention to run but we did not know when Judge Sparks that only a bunch of politicians are supporting the Little Colonel and that a majority of the people are for Sparks.

Those newspapers remind one of the story of a prize fighter who was taking an awful licking in a bout, and his manager, in order to keep up the morale of his man, kept yelling "You are wearing him down! You are wearing him down! He ain't laying a glove on you!"

"Then you had better keep your eye on the referee," the fighter said, "for somebody's beating hell out of me!"—Mountain Eagle.

THE SPARKS-GRAVES BOUT

The anti-Graves papers keep assuring Judge Sparks that only a bunch of politicians are supporting the Little Colonel and that a majority of the people are for Sparks.

Those newspapers remind one of the story of a prize fighter who was taking an awful licking in a bout, and his manager, in order to keep up the morale of his man, kept yelling "You are wearing him down! You are wearing him down! He ain't laying a glove on you!"

Sacrificing Time And Money

Well, it had to come, and yesterday the Honorable Chauncey Sparks announced he would be a candidate for Governor of Alabama. He is a man of broad experience and many fine traits, but he, with the others who may offer themselves, are sacrificing their time and money and that of their friends from the simple fact that Bibb Graves will sweep into the governor's chair with one of the greatest waves ever given a gubernatorial candidate. It is not because the others are not good men and true, but Alabama wants service now of the highest degree, and people of this state know Mr. Graves can give this above every other plan. No man stands higher with the national administration when it comes to serving Alabama, and we owe it to ourselves to see that he rules the state from 1943 to 1947.

If in every other section of the state Alabama voters are not stated, the primary is needed, as Colonel Graves will get a large majority without an active campaign. Make it unanimous Alabama—Fayette County Times.

HE HASN'T A CHANCE SAYS ATTICUS MULLIN

Judge Chauncey Sparks, of Barbour County, a Bourbon in politics if there ever was one, says he is going to become a candidate for governor with one plank in his platform, cooperation with President Roosevelt. Just how Mr. Sparks can cooperate with a liberal like Roosevelt is not stated. Mr. Sparks, who record in the Legislature, wants the people of Alabama to say whether or not they want the present State system of control of alcoholics. Mr. Sparks voted for the present system but perhaps he thinks there may be more votes on the other side.

Mr. Sparks, the Barbour County Bourbon, wants to stop strikes and when he announces right soon he will say so. He does not say how he can stop them.

Sparks, the Barbour County Bourbon, says this is no time for place grabbers and that the Dixon jobholders should continue. Sparks would not give a job to a Sparks man but that is if Sparks should be elected.

Mr. Sparks, the Barbour County Bourbon, who record in the Legislature, education has scanned and disapproved, says now he is for more money for education, for more money for teachers, longer terms, etc. He did not vote that way when he was a member of the legislature.

Mr. Sparks, the Barbour County Bourbon, says he is in his own mind and a square deal."

Mr. Sparks, the Barbour County Bourbon, says that he wants a vote on the alcoholic beverage control law which he helped impose on the State by a vote in the Legislature, "and if it is retained," says the Bourbon, "I will not let it be confined strictly to the stores."

The few Sparks supporters say that he will announce that he will be a candidate for governor in the afternoon papers Wednesday. He may announce that he will announce but this writer is willing to bet that Sparks will never place a dime upon the table of the chairman of the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee make the race for governor.

Sparks thinks, the writer believes that if anything happens to Col. Bibb Graves, the writer will be elected to be governor. The writer believes that if Col. Graves should die and die (which he has no intention of doing, he says) Sparks could not be governor. The people of Alabama will never elect a reactionary, in belief of the writer, and Sparks is a reactionary of the first water.

BUILDER V. OBSTRUCTION

Says Grover C. Hall, Jr.: "The campaign is on now between Col. Graves and Judge Sparks. There are three downs who have mentioned themselves, but there is no reason the student of the Alabama political fundaments to mention them. Probably there will be no other contenders. The records and the personalities of the two men present an interesting case, one that lends itself to a study of the political and personal qualities. Some believe it will be shown in the headlines; others doubt it."

In the one corner there is Bibb Graves, short, pudgy, effulgent and amiable, a Yale graduate and Beta Kappa who almost makes a fish of his "pinks," a man who has been a member of the House of Representatives for a number of years in spite of Miss Dixie's disappearance.

Graves has learned something of politics through participation in elections every two years since 1898. He has a record of success in leading supporters seek to endow with a halo of kindness. He will towards the men surpassed only the Seraphims and Cherubims, when he is aroused by a harsh attack in a political campaign, he goes an opponent with torrential often classic invective. He has been governor of Alabama twice and is a confident of being elected again in 1943.

You see, it's his favorite job. Sparks parishes question it. Graves has accumulated a startling strength. Sparks state would be smarter to acknowledge and simply insist that he had power case detection.

MAY DAY

Now in the twilight of his political career, the Colonel cherishes the fact that after years of bloody, rumpled-kettle political battles, he has won the "Front Porch" campaign of the type invented by William McKinley and perfected by Warren Harding; that there will be May Day Acclamation and the can, soon thereafter, establish an administration of harmony and order in Alabama. He is a man who would like the more ample of Bibb the Master Builder.

Prepared to charge into the breach to break a lance with the Char Sparks. The Judge knows the of shot and shell, too, having run for governor against Dixon in 1938, as every politician knows then, it was in the stars for Frank Dixon to be governor of Alabama, to the tent even that there was wispy for it would be a great day for him to ascend the throne sans objection.

But Sparks, a man of great energy, perhaps to whom the plan and conviction is a tar-baby which he cannot wrench himself and was the runnerup.

WOMEN TO AID IN AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION

Chilton County farm women have been called on to make practical contribution toward meeting the desired agricultural production goals for 1942. At a recent meeting of the State USDA Defense Board it was agreed that in many lines of food production such as poultry, dairying, and gardening women could take the leading role while their husbands were put long their entire efforts into growing food crops desired. Even small increases in individual farms would benefit the nation and insure a supply of nutritious foods for family use. It would release this much food from commercial channels which would go into channels to be used for national resisting aggressions.

Alabama has been asked to increase the production of milk to 1,523,963,000 pounds, an increase of 12 per cent over 1941 and increase the production of eggs to 47,916,000 dozen, a 13 per cent increase over 1941 estimate. All farm families are being urged to raise on the farm as much of the vegetables needed for home use.

If farm women in every community in the state are able to increase the production of eggs, milk and vegetables it would go a long way toward helping Alabama reach the desired goal.

Farm Bureau Officials Elected For Next Year

Montgomery, Ala.—Officers of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation for 1941-42 are Walter L. Randolph, Montgomery, president; J. R. Brunson, Greenville, first vice-president; W. S. Kirk, Roanoke, second vice-president; and C. W. Rittenour, Montgomery, secretary-treasurer.

Are pets allowed on board ship? No, except by special permission of the Executive Officer.

Poplar Springs Woman Sets Canning Record

Mrs. Gladys Rich of Poplar Springs Home Demonstration Club has every reason to be proud of her efforts to store food for use by her family during the coming winter. She not only filled her food preservation budget for her family of three but has some to spare. Below are listed the products that she canned:

Tomatoes 70 pints, Tomato juice, 12 pints, Carrots 6 pints, Soup and corn, 60 pints, Peaches 100 pints, Corn 30 pints, Beets 20 pints, Green peas 44 pints, Apples 10 lbs.

Blackberries 60 pints, Fruit Juice 8 pints, Pork 44 pints, Beef 4 pints, Chickens 12 pints, Jelly 30 pints, preserves 44 pints, pickles 44 pints, dried beans 10 lbs.

She values the above products at $13.96.

Mrs. Rich says, "We moved in to town and stayed a while, but I couldn't get used to it. I could not have my garden, chickens, pig, and cow. We are happy back on the farm. We can have food for all our needs whether my husband has a job away from home or not."

"Following recommended practices for feeding, care, and management of the home dairy cow certainly pays," says Mrs. G. W. Spencer of Minooka Club. She also says, "We had a discussion meeting in our Home Demonstration Club in March of 1940 on the Home Dairy Cow. Since that time I have had my pasture improved, and am feeding according to recommendations, with special emphasis on legume hay. I now get an average of 3 1/2 to 4 gallons of milk per day. This is twice what I did get from the same cow and I also have twice as much butter. This is a big help in feeding my family the thing that will help them to be strong and healthy."

NEW FORESTER NAMED

The Alabama Extension Service announces the appointment of Charles R. Ross, new extension forester, to fill the vacancy left by Rufus H. Page who was called to duty in the Naval Reserve.

Are there any library facilities on the ships of the U. S. Navy? Yes, every ship in the U. S. Navy is equipped with a library. These libraries vary in size depending on the type of ship; for example, a battleship carries 2,000 volumes and a submarine only 150. In small complement of men rates 150. During the past year the Navy bought more than 114,000 new books for its libraries ashore, and on shipboard.

New England Like Chilton County

Neil O. Davis, writing to his Lee County Bulletin from Harvard, where he is taking a year's fellowship, says "Northern Massachusetts and Southern New Hampshire are reminiscent of Chilton County, Alabama. Nearly every farmer has a roadside stand from which he sells a number of home-grown products..."

Mineral Mixture Important For Hogs

It is important that hogs receive a proper mineral mixture during the winter, when there is little grazing. Experiments show that mineral mixtures save approximately 25 per cent of grain requirements.

A few good mixtures that can be used are:

Equal parts by weight of salt, marl, dust or charcoal or wood ashes. Equal parts by weight of salt, ground limestone and charcoal or wood ashes.

Is "Dixie's Poverty Due To Northeast Imperialists?

ATLANTA.—The South was described Thursday night as an "economic colony" which can trace its poverty to "capitalists and imperialists in the Northeast who own the bulk of its productive property."

Dr. B. B. Kendrick, in his presidential address to the Southern Historical Association meeting here, added that a "great proportion of the South's social income is being drained out of the region by Northern owners."

Chairman of the history department at the woman's college of the University of North Carolina, Kendrick said "the situation appears hopeless unless the present world revolution which engulfs us ends in the catastrophic collapse of the financial capitalist and imperialist system."

Stating that the South has existed 300 years as a colony, he said half of that period was spent under England, "whose merchants, manufacturers and financiers were able—through terms of trade unfavorable to the South—to draw out of the region its social income."

"The Revolution," he said, "freed the South from British control and that freedom might have been permanent had the Southern States after the war established a Southern Confederacy, instead of becoming a minority in the United States."

"For 70 years, then it suffered the same disadvantageous terms of trade with the Northeast which had marked its colonial status under Great Britain. The secession of 1861 was an unsuccessful effort to throw off this dependence."

"The defeat of the South meant that hereafter it became even more of a colony of the Northeast in that terms of trade and the money and banking system by which balances were settled were unfavorable to the South."

"This status," he concluded, "is complacently accepted by most Southern business men and politicians, who in effect are the agents, factors and attorneys for Northern interests."

91 YEARS OF PROGRESS

A Historical Tour of the Louisville & Nashville R.R.

Many misfortunes beset the Old Reliable in the first decade of the 20th Century, but fortunately none was fatal. That decade was highlighted by the "panic" of 1907, in November and December of which the L. & N. was forced to pay its employees in scrip; a disastrous fire which partially destroyed the magnificent Union Station at Louisville in 1905; severe storms along the Gulf Coast in 1906, which did great damage and disrupted service for 8 1/2 days, and the strike of the Western Kentucky coal miners in 1901-1903, which created chaos and confusion and greatly disorganized train service.

Although the decade was thus grim enough, entries for the credit side of the ledger were not lacking. The first Old Reliable employee was pensioned in 1901; the first employee to complete 50 years of continuous service, Motor James Gaddis, superintendent, Nashville & Decatur Division, was honored with a banquet at Nashville in 1901; the huge South Louisville Shops were completed in August 1905 and a new general office building was completed at Louisville in January 1907.

Contemporaneously, acquisition and construction brought into being a new line between Cincinnati and Atlanta, and the road continued its program of aid to industry and commerce by the construction of several branch lines, notably in the coal fields of Alabama.

It is noteworthy that the Louisville & Nashville has weathered all the storms of its 90-odd years of corporate existence. It has faithfully discharged its obligations to its bondholders and employees, with rare exception it has annually paid dividends to its stockholders, and is still doing business under its original name. In truth, it has justified its affectionate nickname "The Old Reliable."

together until light. Add egg yolks, beat well, then chocolate and blend well. Add flour alternately with milk and beat well each time. Beat until smooth, add vanilla, and fold in egg whites. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in a moderate (350 degrees) oven. Ice with:

Seven Minute Frosting.
2 egg whites
1 1/2 cups sugar
4 tablespoons water
1 1/4 teaspoons vanilla
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar

Put egg whites, water, sugar, in top of double boiler and set over boiling water. Beat constantly for seven minutes with rotary beater then remove from fire. Add vanilla and cream of tartar and beat until of consistency to spread. Marshmallows (about 12 to 15) cut in pieces may be added.

Speaking of luscious cakes, there's another type of cake which will be just as much of a success either at your Halloween party or cake sale. As different from a chocolate cake as night from day, is this light, tender Silver Moon Cake. Its velvety texture is no trick if you use a good shortening and cream it well.

- Silver Moon Cake.
1/2 cup shortening
1 1/4 cups granulated sugar
2 cups sifted cake flour
2 1/4 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon almond extract
1/2 cup milk
5 egg whites
- Cream shortening and sugar until light, then add milk and sifted ingredients alternately, beating after each addition until smooth. Fold in stiffly beaten whites and flavoring last. Bake in three layers in a moderate (375 degrees) oven 25 minutes. Frost with a butter frosting:
- Uncooked Butter Icing.
1/4 cup butter
2 cups powdered sugar
3 tablespoons hot milk
2 teaspoons lemon or almond flavoring
- Cream butter and shortening, add milk and blend until smooth. Add flavoring. For variation, add 2 1/2 squares semi-sweet chocolate melted before blending in milk. Flavor chocolate icing with vanilla.
- A cake that wins a place in the Hall of Fame is this spice cake without which no cake sale is complete. But it isn't just an ordinary spice cake for it has the subtle flavor of bananas combined with the spices:

- Spice Cake.
(Makes three 9-inch layers)
1/2 cup butter
2 cups brown sugar
4 eggs
1 teaspoon each, cinnamon, nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon each, allspice, cloves
2 1/2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 bananas, mashed fine
- Cream together the butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add beaten egg yolks and bananas and blend well. Sift together the dry ingredients twice. Add them alternately with the milk, beating smooth after each addition. Last, fold in egg whites. Bake in three layer pans, in a moderate (350 degrees) oven, for 35 to 40 minutes. Ice between layers with a double recipe of the Seven Minute Icing or Chocolate Icing. Frost top with a fruit cake, 1/2 cup raisins and 1/2 cup nuts may be added with the flour.

AMERICA'S FAVORITE DESSERT

Confess now, how often would you turn down a tart lemon pie, a delectable apple pie, or a juicy cranberry one with the bright berries peeking out of the lattice crust? Not often, I imagine, or pie wouldn't be our country's favorite dessert. So here's to pie, favorite at dessert time or at a bakery sale, made in big tins or as individual servings:

- "Lemon Angel Pie."
(Makes one 8-inch pie)
4 egg yolks
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon butter
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
- Cream egg yolks and sugar together. Add lemon juice and cook in double boiler until thickened, stirring often. Add butter. Remove from heat and fold in beaten egg whites. Pour into a baked pie shell. Top with meringue and brown in moderate (325 degrees) oven for 15 minutes.

- Meringue.
2 egg whites, beaten until frothy
4 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon lemon juice
- Add sugar gradually to egg whites and continue beating until egg holds up in peaks. Fold in lemon juice.
- Any pie is as good as its crust, and if you've mastered the art, your pies will always be something to come back for. A good crust is tender, short, flaky, well flavored and smart enough to stand by itself. If you make a crust to be filled, cook the filling before it comes in contact with the crust so you won't have soggy pie.

- Flaky Pie Crust.
2 cups flour
1/2 cup shortening
1/4 teaspoon salt
About 1/4 cup ice water
- Mix and sift flour with salt. Work in shortening using pastry blender, fork, knives, or fingertips, until mixture appears crumbled. Moisten with water until dough just holds together. Roll out on floured board and cut to fit pie tin. This makes enough for a double crust for a 9-inch pie tin. For a one-crust pie, use 1 cup flour, 1/4 cup shortening, 1/4 teaspoon salt, and 2 1/4 to 3 tablespoons water.

- Delicious Rhubarb Pie.
1 1/4 cups quick-cooking tapioca
1 1/4 cups sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 tablespoon melted butter
4 cups cut rhubarb
- Combine ingredients and let stand about 15 minutes. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry rolled one-eighth inch thick, allowing pastry to extend 1 inch beyond edge. Fold edge back to form standing rim. Fill with rhubarb mixture. Moisten edge of pastry with cold water; arrange lattice

LYNN SAYS:

To keep your pie crust short, have the shortening and water ice cold. If possible, have your bowl cold, too, and when handling the crust, use your fingers as little as you can, to keep the heat from the hands from getting into the dough.

Avoid rolling extra flour into the dough for this makes tough pastry. Fold the pastry over several times while rolling to help make flaky pastry. Never stretch the pastry into the pan. Make it large enough before fitting into pan.

Pie crust should be baked quickly on the lower shelf of the oven to prevent sagging. The moisture heat of the oven expands the cold liquid in pastry into steam, making the crust rise in flaky layers.

Sets Fire to Spouse And Three Children

SAO PAULO, BRAZIL.—Kunichi Mori, a 32-year-old Japanese, poured gasoline over his sleeping wife and three small children, set them afire, barred the door of their house and stood outside while they burned to death. Neighbors attempted to rescue Mori's wife but were unable to pass through the flames.

Dig Anew in Mine For Silver Lodes

New Shaft to Be Sunk in Famed Tabor Property.

LEADVILLE, COLO.—The Matchless mine, where Baby Doe Tabor died penniless, stands in her belief that one day it would produce again, is to be reopened.

Dr. W. F. O'Brien, who said Baby Doe once told him he should work the mine, has decided to "play that hunch" and is heading a group that is having the property leased.

A new shaft will be sunk by Dr. O'Brien and his associates, who leased the property from the Shorego Mining company, which has owned the mine since Baby Doe died in 1935.

The drab shacks on Fryer hill are bleak reminders of the rise and fall of the fortunes of H. A. W. Tabor and his wife Baby Doe. It was in one of them that Baby Doe, once a famous beauty, died a hardened old woman.

Silver ore from the Matchless added more than $7,500,000 to the Tabor fortunes and after the mining magnate died in 1899, Baby Doe moved to Leadville and lived on the property until her death.

Until she was found frozen to death, Baby Doe guarded the property with a shotgun.

She believed it would produce again and when she appeared at a Leadville store to buy a meager supply of groceries she always told the clerk to "charge it to the Tabor bill. The mine will soon be producing again and I will pay you handsomely."

Tabor, who at one time estimated his fortune at $100,000, married Baby Doe in Washington when he was named senator to serve the unexpired term of Sen. Henry Teller.

None Hurt as Tractor Rolls Over Dying Man

CHARLESTON, MO.—Lynn Hardesty, pilot for a caterpillar tractor, kept his eyes to the rear to watch knives on the subgrade machine that he operates for a highway construction job.

One of the laborers left a box of dynamite in the tractor's path. His machine struck it, rolled over it—and kept right on going.

Find Hero Guilty Of 'Stealing' Bomb

Doomed by Groggy Heart, He Refuses to Pay Fine.

LONDON.—With piercing whistle, a 16-pound bomb hurtled through the roof of a West End apartment building, during a German air raid and came to rest—unexploded—beneath an empty bed.

In a room on the next door, Frederick Leighton-Morris heard the crash of the bomb and the crash of breaking glass.

"That may be on our house," he said, "I'd better go and have a look round."

Now Frederick Leighton-Morris, aged 30, has only four more years to live. He has been turned down by the police and army for service with his own description—"A groggy heart and wonky lungs," and this night of all nights he desired peace and quiet.

Running upstairs on to the roof, and feeling his way over the tiles, he found the hole in the roof made by the bomb.

It was too dark to see anything through the hole, so he lowered himself through it, coming to rest beside a bed—and the bomb!

Deciding that the sooner he disposed of this menace the better, he hugged it to his chest, and began to stagger downstairs.

Once it slipped and fell, badly bruising his foot.

He lifted it up again and began to walk towards St. James' park, to dump it in the safest spot. But at the end of the arm of the law reached out. He was stopped by three policemen, and placed under arrest. "For contravening a police order by entering an apartment building to remove an unexploded bomb," he was told.

"All right," said Leighton-Morris, "I'll go quietly."

But his attitude later in court was decidedly different.

Pleading guilty to a charge of attempting to remove a delayed action bomb which according to the prosecution, might have gone off, he was fined $500. The alternative—three months in jail.

In reply to the sentence was: "I absolutely refuse to pay the fine. I'll go to jail." But Judge Jay has given the man with four years to live four weeks to decide.

Speech Restored To Boy Made Mute By Bomb Injury

Silent a Year, Child Talks After Brain Operation By U. S. Surgeon.

LONDON.—Royston Curtis, seven years old, is a shy boy. Speaking rarely and then only in monosyllables, he is the most silent of the young victims of the Luftwaffe's bombing in a hospital in the Midlands.

But that he can speak at all is one of the miracles of brain surgery and a tribute to the skill of a young American neuro-surgeon, Dr. Henry Heyl of the British War Relief society's American hospital in Britain, whose home is at New Canaan, Conn.

Until a year ago Roy was a normal boy, leading the typical life of youngsters of his age in a small town in South Wales. He lived with his mother, grandmother and his sister Margaret, aged three, in Neath. Then one night the Nazi night raiders attacked Swansea, a bomb was dropped on near-by Neath and Roy's small world collapsed on top of him.

Unconscious Four Weeks.
His grandmother was killed, but her supreme sacrifice saved the lives of the two children. Little Margaret escaped with a few injuries, but Roy was all but killed. The left side of his skull was badly fractured and he was unconscious for four weeks. For a time he was paralyzed on the right side, but the paralysis disappeared during his convalescence.

As he regained his health, it became apparent that he had lost his power of speech. A story photographer showed him appeared in Life magazine and this attracted the attention of Dr. Heyl, who communicated with Roy's mother, Mrs. Winifred Curtis, and later contacted with the Welsh physician attending him. As a result, Roy was taken to the neuro-surgical unit of the American hospital in Britain in a Midlands hospital.

The British doctors and Dr. Heyl agreed there was a possibility of a blood clot pressing on the left frontal side of Roy's brain, where speech is controlled, and that this warranted surgical exploration. He wanted to hear Dr. Heyl speak of it was a simple matter.

Talks After Operation.
A horseshoe-shaped part door of bone was sawed off Roy's skull. The dura matter, which surrounds the brain as a protective covering, was opened, exposing the brain. The operation was performed on July 31, almost a year after Roy's injury, and it was found that an old blood clot, technically known as a subdural hematoma, was pressing against the brain, distorting the section known as Broca's area, which controls speech.

This clot was removed and exploration disclosed another clot in the brain's substance—a subcortical hematoma. After the second clot was removed the bone flap was replaced.

That afternoon, when his nurses asked him how he felt, Roy replied, "All right." Next day, when his aunt brought him some sweets, he exclaimed, "Choc-o-lates!" and in the afternoon, when Dr. Heyl left him, he said, "Good-by." Since then he has been adding a few words each day to his vocabulary.

Roy's operation is only one of some 2,000 performed by the surgeons of the American hospital. The work is divided into three sections, plastic surgery, orthopedic and neuro-surgery.

Soviet Guerrilla Oath

Asked Death for Failure

LONDON.—The oath of Communist guerrilla fighters was broadcast by the Moscow radio as follows:

"I, a citizen of the Great Soviet Union and a true son of the heroic Russian people, swear I will not lay down my arms until the last Fascist in our territory is destroyed.

"I swear I will carry out the orders of my commanders without question and observe strict military discipline.

"For damaging our villages and country, for the death of our comrades and for the tortures inflicted on my people, I swear to revenge myself bitterly, mercilessly and ceaselessly on the enemy.

"I will take an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.

"I swear I would rather die in a bitter fight than allow myself to be captured by the enemy or to become a Fascist slave. If by my weakness or cowardice or by ill luck I should let this vow and betray the interests of my people, let me die a traitor's death at the hands of my comrades."

Boy Loses Both Legs

Taking Forbidden Ride

PITTSBURGH.—Eleven-year-old James Vaughn took a forbidden ride on a shifter engine after school and lost both legs and an arm.

The boy was riding on the running board of the shifter, unnoticed by the crew. He slipped as he decided to step off, and fell.

His legs and arm crossed the rail in the path of the wheels.

At St. John's hospital attendants said the boy's condition was critical.

HERE'S TO BUTTERY FINGERS AND A TAFFY PULL (See Recipes Below)

- ### THIS WEEK'S MENU
- *Chop Suey, Rice or Noodles
Bean Sprouts
Apricot-Cheese Salad
Bran Bread
Orange Chiffon Pie
Tea Coffee
*Recipe Given

- 1 pound mushrooms
4 tablespoons butter
8 slices buttered toast
16 slices crisp bacon
Beat egg yolks, add flour, mustard, salt and paprika. Mix well. Add 1/4 cup milk gradually and stir until smooth. Put mixture in double boiler, add rest of milk, and cheese, cubed. Cook until thick, add Worcestershire sauce, Wash, salt, and saute mushrooms, slowly. Place mushrooms on toast and pour cheese mixture over them. Garnish with bacon.

Although the taffy pull will be the main event of the party be sure to have games planned to fill out the evening. Quiz games are popular and lists for these can be made up beforehand using questions on famous personalities, historical events, interesting facts, and riddles as questions.

Children will want some lively fun too, and for this you can have a sack race. The leaders of two lines of players are given two large paper sacks. They place the sacks on their feet and at a signal run to the opposite end of the back, take off the sack and give it to the person next to them. The object is to see which line finishes first.

Speaking of children, are you having a time with their school lunches? Variety is the big problem for packing a complete meal in one small box is hard to vary and doesn't have many possibilities as the table at home. Having at least one hot food helps loads, and put this in the thermos bottle. You can have cream soups, vegetable soups, then again hot milk drinks for variety.

Sandwiches are a standby, but don't get into a rut with these. Don't have soggy fillings. Wrap each one separately in wax paper. Favorite fillings include:

Peanut butter and jelly
Chopped meat mixed with mayonnaise and relish
Chopped hard-cooked eggs with onion and relish
Cheese and luncheon meats
Vegetable salad sandwiches
Flaked fish with celery, lettuce
Chopped figs or dates, nuts, moistened with orange juice

Color pops up the lunch box, so occasionally pack a salad in a paper container. Use fresh fruits often, or canned ones also packed in small glass or paper containers. Cornstarch puddings are attractive and nourishing, and simple cookies wrapped in wax paper will bring cheers from any child.

For thickening and flavoring ingredients, add to first mixture. Cook 5 minutes. Serve hot with Chinese noodles for Chow Mein, or with steaming rice for Chop suey. Garnish platter with thin strips of fried egg and green onions if desired.

CHILDREN'S DELIGHT

If you want your children and their friends to give you a taste of "super" give just one try for children alone, and that party a old-fashioned taffy pull. Tack a back a mirror and remember how you look forward to a taffy pull just as you are going to a circus.

This party is exciting fun because the children have a chance to see the making of a taffy pull, pulling taffy with their fingers, buttered, and watching the candy mixture get lighter and softer each time it's pulled. They'll like it, too, because a taffy pull is a fussy party. When you send the invitations, let the mothers know it's a taffy party so the children be dressed accordingly.

Unlike many foods which are served, molasses when cooked does not lose its iron content.

If possible use a candy thermometer to test the candy so it will be cooked just right, neither too nor too messy to eat. The candy is not too thick, enough, just the right size for small hands. The piece should be large enough to work on, but not too large. The piece is light tan and very soft, pull into a long strip and cut into pieces.

Molasses Taffy.
2 cups pure New Orleans molasses
1 cup granulated sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1 1/2 cups vinegar
1/4 teaspoon vanilla, if desired
1/2 cup water

Cook the molasses, sugar and water in a heavy kettle allowing the mixture reaches 260 degrees, until a little of the mixture dries on the sides of the kettle. Boiling to prevent burning; pour a buttered pan. When cool enough to handle, cut in pieces and press until light and stiff. Butter the before pulling.

Refreshments can be simple taffy party, for children will be excited about the taffy pull. They won't give their best attention to elaborate dishes. Asorted and served in a bowl will fill the bill perfectly and a hot chocolate milk drink will take care of their keen, busy appetites. After the taffy pull, have simple cakes iced with pink and chocolate icing, fruit, and of course, the taffy pull.

If you'd rather give them a dish in place of the sandwich here's a simple but elegant one.

Millionaire Gold.
(Serves 8)
2 egg yolks
1/2 cup flour
1/4 teaspoon mustard
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 1/2 cups milk
1/2 cup American cheese
1 teaspoon Worcestershire

LYNN SAYS:

Stop food wastes. Not only is this a matter of thrift but a vital step in conserving this country's resources. It is estimated that many food wastes total a tremendous amount.

Wise shopping will prevent unwanted and not used food. The wise shopper also recognizes between good and poor grades, by reading labels and by watching the scales.

Poor cooking causes waste. Meat, for instance, shrinks when cooked at too high a temperature. Vegetables and fruits are lost when cooked too long or when air is stirred into while cooking. Use short odds for cooking whenever possible.

Handsome Peanut Overcoats

"ON THE DESK of Roy E. Parsons, president of the National Peanut Council and manager of the Georgia-Florida-Alabama Peanut Association, are several interesting little bottles. In one of these bottles is solvent extracted from peanut flour. In the next bottle is the pure protein extracted from this flour by solvent. In the third bottle is fiber made from this protein, a fiber which has the same chemical constituency as wool and which has 80 per cent of the strength of virgin wool. In the fourth bottle is a swath of cloth, half wool and half peanut fiber, which is as handsome a piece of suiting as ever went into a garment. A prominent Scotch weaving company has patented this fabric in America and is planning to have this suiting on the market at an early date.

"The peanut is the only known source of a fiber which has the qualities of wool, other synthetic fibers having the appearance and character of cotton or of silk."—J. A. Davis, in Birmingham News-Age-Herald.

Methodist Peace Commission Opposes Further War Moves.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—The Methodist World Peace Commission declared to the nearly 8,000,000 Methodists in the United States today "its belief that our Nation can best serve mankind by abstaining from further steps toward full participation in the present wars."

The statement was adopted at the annual meeting of the Commission which said it, "like the nation, was not in complete agreement on the issue of the full involvement of the United States in the war."

The large majority of the 20 members present, however, voted to send to the Church the statement including these points on which there was not unanimous agreement:

"Our Nation can best serve mankind by taking immediate steps toward creating a just and durable peace by employing its immense resources for the constructive ministry of healing and rehabilitation, and by associating itself with other nations at the earliest possible moment, in earnest efforts to rebuild the world on a foundation of justice and cooperation for the good of all.

"As first steps to a genuine new order, worthy of civilized men, we urge that our Nation take steps immediately for the peaceful solution of the situation in the Far East, with justice for all people, and initiate a movement calling for the early cessation of armed hostilities in Europe."

The Rev. Charles F. Boss, Jr., of Chicago, Executive Secretary of the Commission, said the group did not claim the right to speak for every individual Methodist, and added:

"While its pronouncements are not the voice of the Methodist Church in the same sense that characterizes the statements of the General Conference speaking for the whole Church, yet they are an expression of the mind of the Church in the field of peace action."

The Commission, representing all parts of the Nation, was elected by the Methodist General Conference of 1940.

GENE TUNNEY TO SELECT PHYSICAL DIRECTORS FOR ALABAMA FOR NAVY

Lieut. Commander J. J. (Gene) Tunney, former heavy-weight champion of the world, will visit Birmingham, Ala., November 19, 1941, to select physical directors for the navy.

Mowing Lapedez series soon after the seed mature and spreading the clippings with the seed attached over field borders, gullies, and galled spots, is recommended by Mr. A. L. Harrell, soil conservationist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in the North Central soil conservation district, as a practical and inexpensive way of establishing a vegetative cover on these areas.

The sericea stems will prevent the seed which fall from the clippings from being washed off the eroded surface. They will also serve as a mulch to conserve moisture and provide protection for the young sericea seedlings next spring while they are becoming established.

Severely eroded areas should be plowed or disked before the sericea clippings are spread over such sites. Care should always be taken not to apply the mulch too heavily. Best results will probably be secured when about 50 per cent of the ground can be seen through the mulch.

Lapedez sericea is an excellent plant for growth on eroded land. It builds up the soil and controls erosion. When used on field borders it not only provides food and cover for wildlife on land unsuitable for row crop production, but also acts as a barrier to reduce the encroachment of trees and shrubs into the cultivated fields.

Rivers And Harbors Committee Approves River Development

WASHINGTON.—The House rivers and harbors committee approved Friday the Alabama-Coosa waterway development in Georgia and Alabama.

Writing the project into an omnibus authorization bill for rivers and approved a $60,000,000 start on the harbors, the committee specifically undertaking and upheld an army engineer report generally favorable to the entire development.

There was a difference of opinion whether the language approved by the committee would outline the authorization to the $60,000,000 project or would be broad enough to cover the ultimate development. Studies are incomplete and the eventual cost estimate varies from $95,000,000 to $145,000,000.

Chairman Mansfield (D., Tex.) first told reporters the committee adopted language proposed by Representatives Starnes (D., Ala.) and Tarver (D., Ga.) to make the authorization cover the entire project. Later, however, committee members and clerks of the committee said that approval merely was given to the report submitted by the engineer corps. The engineer report held the ultimate project was feasible and called for a $60,000,000 immediate partial development.

The rivers-harbors bill merely authorizes projects and makes no appropriations.

Important Farming Methods In Chilton Co.

Improved farming methods in Chilton County, and higher standards of living on the farm, are bound to be the result of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Farm Defense program said Marvin Durbin, County farm supervisor of the Farm Security Administration, today.

"Farmers generally, large and small are pledging themselves to raise more food and feedstuffs, Mr. Durbin said, keeping with Secretary Wickard's appeal.

"Since the average farmer, particularly the Farm family on FSA program, can't get more acres to cultivate, and since there is a partial limit to the added number of livestock to be purchased at once, the thing to do in fulfilling this pledge is to increase yields feed livestock for more weight and more production. This means better farming. It may be that the increased emphasis on 'Food for Freedom' will be the greatest boost for intelligent and painstaking farming we have ever had in this country."

As for the farmers who participate in the FSA program, Mr. Durbin said, the first consideration will be the production of more food for themselves, and the learning how to use this food better for sake of health.

The next thing that the little farmer will be urged to do will be to raise more feed for additional livestock and poultry that he undertook to raise in connection with FSA's "Food for Defense" program last May and June. And these two things will lead naturally to production of more things to be marketed.

"It is on both the production and marketing end that the Farm Security Administration will help through encouraging county purchasing and marketing associations," he said.

"This will be the means for the farmer to get the seed, fertilizer, machinery and breeding stock that he can't get otherwise. And this will be the means of commanding better markets, because he will be able to join hands with his neighbors to produce enough to attract dependable markets."

"Next comes our job of trying the increased production to the needs of people, with the idea that home plans are no less important than farm plans."

"Not only the Farm Security Administration but all other agencies of the Department of Agriculture have gone into this program with the idea of building agriculture on a sounder basis—not to plow up vast areas that will be left to blow away after the

THANKS!

Say Southern Motorists for 2,000 miles of New Concrete Roads that save money and serve better

Yes, concrete was chosen for 2,000 miles of new roads throughout the South in 1939 and 1940.

Thanks says the Southern motorist for concrete's highly visible, skid-resistant surface. For its comfort and year-around convenience. And for the saving. Concrete costs much less to keep in repair than other surfaces on main traveled highways. It serves at lowest annual cost.

Alabama motorists, too, can have this added safety and saving if more of its roads are built of concrete.

La Guardia Sees War's End in Year

WASHINGTON.—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York predicted today that the European war would end in the defeat of Hitler by November, 1942.

Urging enactment of legislation to set up a postwar planning agency, Mr. LaGuardia expressed belief that speedy action was needed to avert the disruption in industry that would follow the cessation of hostilities.

"I am firmly convinced," Mr. LaGuardia testified, "that if we get defense production speeded up and there are no labor disturbances—if we get production for lend-lease purposes increased—I think this war in Europe will be over by November 1942."

"I think Hitler will go through this winter all right, but I can't think he can go through the next one."

Mr. LaGuardia, noting that a large number of industrial plants of the country had been shifted to defense production, said there were certain to be dislocations of employment when the war ends.

IN MEMORIAM

The loving memory of our darling brother, Emmett Morris, who passed way a year ago today.

Our hearts are empty and sad each day. Since our dear Emmett has gone away. His smile is gone, his voice stilled. Leaving a vacancy that can never be filled. With a brilliant mind and a heart of gold. Worthy ambitions and character fine, loyal and true at all times. Always thinking of others and doing for them as he would like them to do unto him. To all those who knew and loved him. His memory will never grow dim.

SAVING RUBBER TIRES

Making rubber tires last longer is good economy as well as good for national defense, say agricultural leaders who advise that farmers with rubber-tired implements can add to tire life by proper care and storage.

For one thing, when rubber-tired machines and implements are not in use, they say it is well to keep weight off the tires. If they are to be stored all winter on a cinder floor, it is particularly important to keep them blocked up, because sulphur in the cinders deteriorates the rubber.

WARNS AGAINST INFLATION

Edward A. O'Neal, AFBF president, warns that "inflation is a greater menace to farmers than to any other group." Mr. O'Neal told the annual convention of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation that "for agriculture to abandon parity now in the hope of driving farm prices to speculative levels for a brief period and thereby help to bring on ruinous inflation would be unthinkable."

Services were held here Sunday. There were several absent. Let's everyone come back next Sunday with a well prepared lesson. Remember next Sunday and Sunday night are our regular preaching services. Bro. Lockhart will fill his regular appointment. Let's everyone try and be there on time. Our Ladies W. M. U. will meet at 5:30 p. m.

Our community was saddened Sunday when the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mattie Easterling was completely destroyed by fire. It happened about noon Sunday. If you have anything you would like to donate to them I am sure it would be greatly appreciated.

This Is Civilian Defense Week

The text of President Roosevelt's statement on civilian defense follows:

I have proclaimed Nov. 11 to Nov. 16 as Civilian Defense Week, and the Governors of the several States are joining me in this proclamation. The thought behind this observance is the part the civilian must play in the tremendous program required by our national defense.

It is not enough that our Army and our Navy are daily growing stronger for the protection of our national life. Each and every citizen, as a civilian, must do his share for defense.

In our daily lives, we must halt the waste and unnecessary use of critical materials required for defense. We must work longer hours to produce the munitions required to defeat Hitler. And each of us must be trained in some task that is essential to our total defense.

Civilian defense is your own personal opportunity. Join your neighbors in your town to serve your country.

There is more than enough for everyone to do in civilian defense. And with each of us doing his share, we shall leave no doubt in anybody's mind that we are and intend to remain strong and united. We shall preserve that genuine American way that distinguishes our living from the pagan slavery proposed by the would-be dictators of the world.

JEMISON F. H. A. NEWS

If you want to have an enthusiastic group of FHA members, call a meeting and discuss a summer trip.

Our FHA was called to order November the 5th for our monthly meeting, which was very interesting. Other than the regular business, a 20-minute talk by Mary Elizabeth Wood and four musical numbers by Sewell Miller and Billy Robinson, our trip for the most part was discussed.

We learned from the treasurer's report that our members have really been working hard. Some of our money was raised by candy selling and egg day, but more has been raised by selling Christmas cards.

If everyone continues to work as hard as they have heretofore it is very probable that we will have a nice trip next summer.

A Direct Appeal to the Farmers of Chilton County — from your Government — through Chilton Post American Legion

FOOD FOR FREEDOM

The farmers of Chilton county have been asked by the State USDA Defense Board to increase their production of oats, peanuts, hay, milk, hogs, beef and eggs, and the County USDA Defense Board has approved increases in these crops and have set the following goals for this county during 1942:

Oats for all purposes, 9,000 acres; Peanuts for crushing for oil in addition to the acreage allotments and for hogging and for home use, 848 acres; Hay for all purposes, 5,616 acres; Milch cows in production, 7,500; Milk produced for all purposes, 30,000,000 pounds; Hogs (pounds slaughtered for all purposes, liveweight), 2,010,247 pounds; Beef cattle and calves (marketing and farm slaughter, live-weight), 1,478,096 pounds; Egg (production on farms) 1,000,000 dozen.

These are goals or estimate production and in no way quotas; farmers may exceed these goals if they desire. Indications are that prices for these farm products will be at a high level next year. It is suggested that farmers begin inspecting and planning to do their part in reaching the above goals. A good question to ask is "Will my farm carry its part in producing food and feed crops for the defense of democracy?"

Chilton County's Farmers Will do their Part toward National Defense. Contact your nearest Representative Saturday, Nov. 22nd

Representatives will be at the following places in the county Saturday, November 22nd, for the purpose of accepting estimates from farmers as to their individual goals. All farmers are asked to contact the representative nearest your community: Verbena, Cooper, Stanton, Maplesville, Jemison, Thorsby, Isabella, Courthouse—Clanton. A representative will be at all these places up until 2 o'clock in the afternoon; they will be at Clanton all day Saturday.

Just Another "Release"

Some of the younger editorial brethren were somewhat perturbed last week on account "Bishop" Atticus Mullin commenting on what Judge Chauncey Sparks was going to say in his announcement that he was going to announce for Governor at the proper time.

This "oldtimer" thinks the boys took the matter a bit too seriously. Presuming that we received the same "release" as all the other papers—including mimeographed copy, cut newsprint, like most of the other papers printed the general Judge's picture with a paragraph underneath saying that he said that at the proper time he was going to announce for Governor, etc., etc.

We filed the "mats" away and threw the "copy" in the waste basket, just like most of the other editors of the State did.

Now, this "oldtimer" has been in the newspaper game way beyond half a century, and thinks he knows something about newspaper ethics; he has never, that he knows of, been accused of betraying any confidence, or violating the newspaper code of ethics and to him the Sparks release was nothing more, nor less, than a bunch of political propaganda, out of which Judge Sparks hoped to get a bunch of free advertising—which he did—including what the "Bishop" had to say about what the Judge was going to say about what he was going to do at the proper time.

The announcement by Judge Chauncey Sparks that he would announce himself a candidate for Governor as the proper time, has fallen as flat as did the announcement of the very able John Peach of the Tennessee Valley, a few months ago.

Both of them are clean, honorable, fine men; but it is plainly evident that neither of them are wanted for Governor by the people of Alabama at this time.

'Second-Class' Postage

Newspapers that do not carry an editorial column, do not give free editorial expression to public affairs, should not be granted the "special privilege" of the Government of a very low rate of postage.

This "special privilege" was granted by Congress because it was believed that opinions as related to public affairs, freely expressed by the press was a safeguard against corruption in the public service—and high places of influence.

Anyone who is the recipient of the "second class" postal privilege should appreciate this fact.

Inflation or Deflation?

AP says the President has made an urgent appeal to Congress to hasten new tax legislation.

New tax legislation may prevent the inflation that the President is afraid of, but the taxpayer's pocket book will not be able to get away from the "deflation" that will follow.

The World Revolution

Surprised of its camouflage, hypocrisy and deception, the present World Revolution is seen for what it is—the age old conflict between God and Mammon.

And every Nation under the sun has its patriots and its quislings engaged in the conflict.

Who Owns U. S.?

Alabama has had a number of bright young editors come into the journalistic ranks during the last year or so. Wonder if one of them can tell us who owns the United States. This is not a wise crack. We would really like to know.

No Stampede

Up to now we haven't heard of any of those 118 Congressmen attempting to get on the armed merchant ships going to the combat zone.

Hiding Won't Help

Hiding the liquor, and reducing the size of the signs, may prevent a few sales, but that will in no way affect the legal profiteering in the product, that is now going merrily on.

It Takes Two To Make a Contract

Much criticism is being hurled against the labor unions by press, radio and other propaganda sources, because no agreement (contract) could be reached between the heads of the captive coal mines, and the representatives of the miners—the men who dig the coal.

Perhaps the greatest pressure ever brought to bear on a president of the United States has been leveled at Franklin D. Roosevelt, in the effort to force him to force the miners in to submission—that is to continue work without a contract—unless the contract is written by the owners of the mines, or their agents. So far the president has refused to be stampeded by the propaganda mouthpieces of the wealthy industrialists, who refused to hit a lick in behalf of DEFENSE, until the Government had guaranteed them a NET profit on the CONTRACTS they were to handle.

There is nothing wrong about the CLOSED shop. And there is nothing that can justify the owners of the mines in refusing to recognize, or grant the Government, unless it is a deliberate effort by the big capitalist industrialists to slow down defense production, in order to gain some selfish advantage, of far more importance to them, than recognizing the CLOSED SHOP.

There is a "nigger in the coal strike woodpile"—and he wasn't put there by the miners—the men who dig the coal.

Joe McCoy Passes

Joe McCoy, one of the State's most clever newspapermen died suddenly at his home in Montgomery Sunday night. He was director of the State Bureau of Publicity and Information, having been appointed by Governor Dixon to that position in 1939. Coroner M. B. Kirkpatrick described the death as the result of a heart attack.

From The Montgomery Advertiser: Joe McCoy, 21 years newspaperman, was stricken on the veranda of his Blue Ridge home, and was found unconscious by his son, Joseph R. McCoy, who was on his forehead and at the base of his skull. He was dead before an ambulance arrived.

McCoy was widely known and popular in Alabama officialdom. He was graduated from Washington & Lee University in 1914, and came to Montgomery in 1917, where he joined The Advertiser staff.

NO SERIOUS OPPOSITION

While passing along the gossip of the day the columnist might as well let it be known that in the past 10 days or two weeks the political swing toward Col. Bibb Graves which has been in evidence for nearly three years now, has gained in momentum. The firestorm going on at the point where Bibb can be given that Col. Graves will not have opposition. There hasn't been a time within the last year, in the opinion of the writer, when Col. Graves could have had any serious opposition develop but it looks now like there will be no opposition of any kind. By this we do not mean to say that some person won't enter his name against Col. Graves.

Judging from what leading political observers tell us and from what we can see in the county papers, the idea is continuing to grow in the minds of Alabama voters that Col. Graves is needed in the governor's chair next time because of the crisis that is world-wide and which threatens to draw the United States into a shooting war any minute. And another thing that the voters seem to have in mind is that Col. Graves, needed here in the next few years, certainly, a governor to be worth anything to his people, must be in close touch with Washington and on friendly terms with the national administration. The people of Alabama know there is no man in the nation who has had more intimate contact with the President of the United States than Col. Bibb Graves of Alabama with the exception of the men in the President's cabinet and a few cronies.

All of the group who in Alabama have already gone to Graves. Education is in the bag, so is labor, so is agriculture, so is county and city government, so are the doctors and the lawyers, 90 per cent of the lawyers, half or more of the big mules and maybe more. All but two or three key men in Dixon's administration have given sworn allegiance to Graves. Thousands of minor employees of the State and the city are following him.

So it looks as if Graves will not have opposition. Of course, there will be no serious opposition. Atticus Mullin, Montgomery Advertiser.

MORAL ECHOS

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

To the oft repeated statement, "O that we might see ourselves as others see us," I would like to add another statement, "O that we might hear ourselves as others hear us." A wife borrowed a record making machine and had it in position, when her husband came down for the first time of their life to get the tone of his voice and then let him hear it the next morning. As usual he came in and snapped and snarled, and all the time the record was being made. The next morning when he came in his wife asked him to listen to the record. While it was being played, the husband sipped his coffee. The wife was in silence. She was not only surprised at her husband's tone of voice, but she was surprised with her own. Both concluded that if they talked to each other that way, that it was absurd to think that he was doing about the same thing he had done with her conversation with a neighbor and on hearing it she burst into tears saying, "That is just not my voice." Yes, we should hear ourselves as others hear us when we are in his upset.

While talking with the pilot of an air plane he informed me that every minute that he was in the air that he had to observe the laws of the air. He had to obey the law of gravitation, he had to be held in strict obedience to the law of his machinery. He had to obey the law of the air. He said that "Obedience is man's greatest need." To have health we must learn to obey the laws of health. To be a good citizen we must obey the laws of the land. To be held in high esteem we must obey the laws of society. To be a Christian we must obey the laws of God. Obedience is the key stone to the building that will lift us to success. No lesson of today needs to be taught more than this one. It should be taught in the home, in the school and in the church of God.

At the Ashram in Blue Ridge Mary Joe, a mischievous girl, scattered paper on the lawn for Dr. E. Stanley Jones to pick up. He saw her when she did it and he scolded her. She said she was scattered down those steps and picked up this paper, you scattered it. Slowly she came to where Dr. Jones stood. Then he handed her his sack and said again, "Mary Joe, pick up that paper, you scattered it." In a moment she had the sack, and then Dr. Jones invited her to go with him and carry his sack while he picked up paper on the lawn. The reward of her obedience was that she had forty minutes with this great leader and together they talked like school children. Obedience is a winning virtue.

A brother pastor told me that in his rounds as a preacher that he had met with many and varied experiences. He said that one morning he was in the pulpit a few moments before the service was to begin and that he was curious to know what was on the inside of the pulpit he saw a large fire extinguisher. He said that he was not certain that the fire extinguisher was intended for a real fire, or to be used on the preacher in the pulpit. I may be wrong; but I am fully persuaded that there are places where the fire extinguisher has been used on the preacher. Anyway, the fire has almost gone out in many a pulpit today. Would God that we could fire up the man in the pulpit and induce him to use the extinguisher on the pulpit. One reason why John Wesley said that if a preacher will set his pulpit on fire, the people will come from far and near to see it burn. What a pity to just see a smoldering smoke coming from many sacred stands.

It was St. Paul who said, "This one thing I do" and he did it. The result was that he changed a world. Preachers and laymen today are saying "These forty things I try to do and do nothing." Preachers can do what they are all up to with organizations and committees, running themselves ragged and doing nothing. Laymen are all tangled up with civic, social and religious activities, dabbling in a dozen things, and doing nothing. We run ourselves thin by spreading out over too many things.

There are many people employed in our nation is because some people try to do the job of two people. No woman can do well the work of a house wife and a stenographer. No man can burden himself with too many jobs and do his best. Support one man for one job, that is all we can do for the fellowman? When we learn to locate our supreme task and then devote ourselves alone to that, then we will do things worth while. Join in with St. Paul and say, "This one thing I do" and then do it.

STRANGLING THE LITTLE FELLOW

"The Little Fellow in Business" until recently had his little niche in the business world. The Little Man didn't expect to "set the woods afire." He was content to keep the home fires burning. But now he has to try to keep his home burning at home and abroad too, and the load is getting too heavy for his weak body, already staggering under a load of taxes. Now to keep the Defense Program going "The Little Fellow" share with the Big Boys increased taxation. Although the public has the best of their ability, others have closed their doors and nailed up their windows and the place that knew them once, knows them no more.

The Little Fellow is numbered among all trades and professions. He keeps his little nest, and struggles to carry on their business as prohibitive, and with the overhead expenses eating up all the profits, if there were any, makes it an impossibility for the Little Fellow to meet the strong competition of "The Big Boy." The Little Fellow is slowly but surely being strangled, and to stay in business they must fight every inch of the way, and like the little game rooster he may have to take a whipping from a big Rhode Island Red, and may be almost dead, but he will try to get up and scratch his neck and crow. The Little Fellow is having a hard fight to feed those at home and abroad, but like the game rooster they may be whipped but not beaten. When you trade think of the Little Fellow and give him your moral and financial support, and instead of being strangled he can breathe a little freer, and in time may become a "Big Boy."—Centerville Press.

WILL THE YANKS BE NEXT?

Last week we expressed the fear that what began as a war among European nations would end with the United States doing most of the fighting against Germany. According to the INS, Winston Churchill speaking at Sheffield, England, Saturday "gave a new promise of victory through the combined efforts of America, Britain and Russia." Mr. Churchill evidently thinks the contributions to victory will be, in that order—Sybilacusa News.

Can you recall a single battle since this war began, when the British sent Englishmen to the front line, when they could persuade other nations to furnish the "gun fodder"?

SUGAR CANE SYRUP

The following interesting item from Washington appeared in the dailies a day or so ago: "WASHINGTON—Alabama almost doubled its sugar cane syrup production in 1941 with 7,265,000 gallons from 1,350,000 the previous year. The reason for the increase was the national production of sugar cane syrup hearing twice what it was last year." As sugar cane syrup making is just now getting under way in Alabama, we are curious to know how the Washington "four out of five" has made more than a million more gallons than we did last year. Can you tell us how they got their information?

THE "FOUR HORSEMEN" ARE RIDING HARD

War, floods, wrecks, mine explosions, fires, murders, suicides, freezing weather, plane crashes and diseases are taking their toll of lives. The grim reaper is gathering fast our people. Many are stricken down without warning. Have you readers? Suppose you are one of those who make this trip regardless of how they may be—Collinsville New Era.

WORDS OF WISDOM

It is never smart to buy more than you can pay for when you are in a car, or a house in which to live. If a man can only afford three rooms at the edge of town he is not smart to buy a six room house in an expensive neighborhood. There is a way drawn line between desire to possess and ability to pay.—Moulton Advertiser.

SOUND FISCAL POLICY

Taxpayers are more acutely interested in government economy than non-taxpayers. If all the people were to have a say in the government, it would make for sounder fiscal policies and better all-round administration of governmental affairs.—Wetumpka Herald.

LOANS AND CRACKUPS

Stalin predicts that the Nazis will crack up in a year. And so will the German loan of a billion dollars to Stalin. My, how we could prophesy if somebody would turn over even a million to us.—Green County Democrat.

And just think of the "crackups" we could bring to pass.

Third Term Business

Commenting on LaGuardia's election to a third term as mayor of New York, The Selma Times-Journal says: "This third term business started last week in Selma. Roosevelt, seems to be catching."

Yes, and Bibb was inoculated with the virus early, and the inflammation has been increasing steadily ever since.

PARADOX IN BUTTER

What has happened to the well-known law of supply and demand? Production of butter is higher than it was a year ago, 4,000,000 more pounds are in storage than there were then, yet the price of butter is higher than it was last year.—The New York Sun.

The answer is simple: 4,000,000 more pounds are kept in storage until "demand" is willing to pay the price. Butter "in storage" is not "supply," but "on the market" is supply.

IT CAN BE FOUND

People have already started having colds. Wish there was some sure "cure" for this nasty germ and disease.—Collinsville New Era.

It would be economy for Congress to appropriate a million dollars and turn it over to the American Medical Society to be used in locating and isolating the "bad-cold" germ.

JUST AINT GONNA WORK

Mr. A. N. O'nyon, of the Covington News, selected this one: "Chauncey Sparks Again Will Seek To Be Next Governor," says a headline in One Southern Home. Well, that's one time when "seek and ye shall find," just ain't gonna work!

LOVE FOR NEIGHBORS

The Good Book says "Love thy neighbor as thyself," but a lot of people love their neighbor in the interest of themselves.—LaFayette Sun.

Bonnie, you couldn't be thinking about our recently developed love for the Russians, could you?

PERMANENT TAGS

Tuscaloosa News comes out in favor of "permanent automobile tags," and why not? It's high time we were finding something "permanent."

Some artists, who believe in the public good should invent a "permanent" automobile.

I wish to thank Mr. Albert Grammas for the good things he said about me in last week's issue of the News. I am in the floor that I lay for him six years ago. It was only 1-12 inches thick and lots of people said it wouldn't stay, but that's like the negro that the lawyer told couldn't be put in jail, he said "boss they is got me in here."

Joe Albert seems to think that I am the best cement man in the country but last winter I had the pleasure of working with 306 cement finishers for about 3 months. There were some finishers there who were a lot better than I am in finishing concrete, but Mr. Albert is not a bit wrong when he says he has traveled many places and had never seen a man who could build so many things for dumb animals out of cement. I have it over other cement workers by knowing the horse family. I have finished barns, pig pens, chicken coops, and made many cement fixtures for them.

Yours in cement,
ED EDWARDS.

HOME MANAGEMENT IMPROVEMENT SAYS MARTHA GRIFFIN

More than crops are being harvested at this season for families on the Farm Security program, says Martha M. Griffin, FSA home supervisor for Chilton County. With another school year at hand, the fruits of better home management as well as of better farm management are being gathered.

"Farm mothers and fathers are checking up on their children's clothing and health needs before the school year begins," Mrs. Griffin said today.

"They are beginning to see the value of wise use of their cotton 'stamp' when it comes to looking over their clothing outfits of their children. They are beginning to see the value of medical services, which in many parts of the Southeast are being made available through group arrangements to families of low income who otherwise could not have them otherwise."

It is at the beginning of a school term that the home management plans which are made for all borrowers in the Farm Security program, are subjected to a real test, it was pointed out by Mrs. Griffin. Mrs. Griffin said, the results will be reflected in the health of young and old, the preparation of school children's wardrobes, in the accumulation of food supplies to sustain the children so that their progress in school will be normal.

And if the plans and the goals have been sound, the result will be reflected in careful and thrifty purchases of clothing, in the extent to which clothing has been remodeled and in the amount of low income will be able to mingle with other children without embarrassment.

Home supervisors generally are using FSA families to avail themselves of medical services wherever possible for check-ups on tonsils and teeth, their children, and they are active in the effort to obtain adequate school lunches for all.

Wagyn Morris, youngest star of "Wanted Wings," became a member of Uncle Sam's Navy in May, 1941, when he was appointed to the rank of ensign.

When asked what he thought of the United States Navy, Morris said, "I think every man who is considering joining a military service should know that the Navy is the branch in which the Navy and Naval Reserve force to get into the big-pay field of the future aviation. In the Navy you are paid attention to, and you are a hero in the world, and receive instruction from Navy pilots who have dived bomb, aircraft carrier, and catapult take-offs to the rear of the world. Also, there are opportunities in the Naval Aviation for men who desire to become aviators, as well as in aviation machines, metalizing, photographers, observers, or they can receive instruction in many other fields. The Navy is a great place to be in."

Ensign Wagyn Morris is pictured here in his line of duty as a member of the Naval Aviation and Sales Division, "Long Beach" Navy Reserve Air Base.

Expert Declares Parity Prices Dead

CHICAGO. — Charging that the farmer's standard of living was frozen to the long dead past, Charles W. Holman, chairman of the National Parity Committee Tuesday suggested a revised yardstick for determining parity prices.

Holman advocated first that wages of city people should be considered as a vital factor in preparing the parity index of prices, also second that prices paid during the past 10 years should be used as base figures instead of the 1910-14 prices now used.

The Holman proposal was the result of a study started more than a month ago by the committee which was authorized to take the multitude of new proposals for computing parity which had swamped the Senate committee on agriculture and work them into an acceptable plan.

The National Parity Committee is a civilian group formed at a meeting of state officials and farm leaders and sponsored by Senator Thomas (D., Okla.), chairman of a subcommittee of the Senate committee on agriculture.

This new yardstick "will give the farmer something which he is denied under present concepts of parity," Holman said, "by freeing him from the standard of living 30 years ago and linking him with realistic modern conditions."

The present method "permits the farmer to sell his bushel of wheat and buy with the proceeds the same amount of goods that he could buy with a bushel of wheat 30 years ago, but no more."

"On the other hand," Holman said, "the average city man can work 40 hours a week and with the proceeds can buy the same amount of goods that he could in 1910-14 and have enough left over to buy additional quantities of luxuries and conveniences."

"Practically all urban occupational groups are working much less per year, and yet with this less time they do the things they did 30 years ago, but can buy not just the same volume of an indefinite greater volume."

Your Pine Stumps Are Valuable

Brunswick, Ga., Nov. 11, 1941.—A new process for the synthetic production of pine oil from gum turpentine has made it possible for the naval stores industry to meet the current demands of the national defense program for this material. It was disclosed today by officials of Hercules Powder Company meeting here in a five day sales conference.

Pine oil is now required in great quantities for the separation of metals from their ores. Defense demands for zinc, lead, copper and molybdenum have greatly increased the need for pine oil.

At the same time, the use of pine oil in the textile industry in the production of woolen clothing for the army and navy has greatly increased the pine oil requirements of American industry. In textile manufacture, pine oil is used for scouring and cleaning wool and for fulling, an operation which shrinks the thickness of cloth.

The process which makes possible the production of pine oil from gum turpentine has greatly expanded the supply of this important industrial material.

Pine oil is derived naturally in the wood of naval stores industry which extracts turpentine, pine oil, and rosin from the stumps of pine trees left after lumbering operations.

The gum process, by which naval stores products are obtained by tapping pine trees and distilling the gum or sap thus obtained, produces pine oil. Production of synthetic pine oil from gum turpentine thus opens up a new source of supply.

Cotton consumption for 1941-42 season is likely to approximate or exceed ten and one-half million bales compared with nine and three-quarter million last season.

L. & N. MILES

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad has 4,865.15 miles of track reaching the thirteen states of Kentucky, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Virginia, Georgia, North Carolina and Florida.

Over 44,000 Alabama farm women, all of whom are members of home demonstration clubs, are aiding the Food-For-Freedom program by growing and canning more foodstuffs.

America's railroads, from January 1, 1940, to September 1, 1941, put 114,679 new freight cars in service.

In 1940 the locomotives of the L. & N. Railroad consumed only 125 pounds of coal for each 1,000 tons of ton miles handled (1,000 tons of freight and equipment moved one mile). The comparable figure for 1923 was 181 pounds, a reduction of over 25 per cent having been effected in 1940.

STATE AIDING FARMERS IN IMPROVEMENT OF HERDS—Conforming to and in continuance of the State's policy of aiding Alabama farmers in the development of purebred, registered cattle herds, about 25 young bulls and 10 to 12 young heifers are now being grown and groomed for the 1942 Guernsey sale at Kilby Dairy, which will likely be held late in June. FLOYD NEWS

I am sorry of the mistake that was made in last weeks report about Bro. Smith preaching at Floyd. He conducted prayer services. After all I will say it was a good sermon.

Bro. Hand, our pastor, brought us a wonderful sermon on that night. It will be our preaching day again next Sunday and Saturday night.

Bro. Leonard Hand is having two Sundays a month—1st and third, beginning on Saturday night.

Our prayer meeting, Sunday School and B. Y. P. U. was rather slim this week end on account of the cold spell. Let all remember we need the Lord in cold weather as same as in warm weather, so every one try to come if they are well. We want to be found working for the Lord when He comes.

We are glad to report Mrs. William Headley is improving and hope she will soon be up.

Mr. Denton Burkhalter and Mr. Jack Martin from Montgomery was visiting family and friends Sunday.

Mrs. Fannie Courtney and Mrs. Prickett visited Mrs. William Headley Monday afternoon.

Don't forget to come to preaching Saturday night and Sunday. Every body is welcome.

Air Corps To Train Civilian Aviation Mechanics

Young Men Between 17 and 25 Needed. Men Selected Will Receive Pay While in Training.

The huge expansion in the aircraft industry has created a shortage of skilled aircraft tradesmen. Preparing for the great demand for civilian aviation mechanics, the U. S. Army Air Corps is offering young men between the ages of 17 and 25 an opportunity to learn an aircraft trade. Original appointments will be made to the positions of Trainee, Aircraft and Engine Mechanic at a salary of approximately $50 a month. At the successful completion of a six months' training period, it is planned to promote trainees to the positions of Junior Aircraft and Engine Mechanics at a salary of $1,680 a year. Further opportunities for advancement in the Army Air Corps are excellent in view of the shortage of qualified aircraft mechanics.

Necessary forms may be obtained from the Civil Service Secretary at any first or second-class Post Office, or from the Manager of the Fifth U. S. Civil Service District, Atlanta, Ga.

10 Cow Dos

1. Cow roughages lower the cost of producing milk. Feed all the cow will clean up, part of it being legume hay.
2. If possible include corn or sorghum silage in the ration. This will lower the cost of milk production.
3. Feed a balanced grain ration using as much home grown grain as possible.
4. Feed grain according to production: 1 pound of grain to each 2 1/2 to 3 pounds of milk.
5. When pastures get short, feed hay or silage and grain before production begins to drop.
6. Milk is 87 per cent water—see that the cows have plenty of it at all times.
7. Cows need salt—one pound per hundred weight in the ration and a block of salt available for the cows is generally recommended.
8. Provide shelter for your cows—this will save much valuable feed.
9. Study the available feeds—the cheapest are not always the most economical.
10. Study your cows' likes and dislikes and cater to them when possible.

Farmers having trouble getting repair parts should report matter immediately to local USDA Defense Board. Very important that repair parts be ordered as soon as possible.

NAVY COURTMEN PRACTICE BASKETBALL ON SHIPBOARD

Perfect physical fitness is required of sailors in the U. S. Navy and Naval Reserve. Excellent athletic facilities are provided both aboard and ashore. Pictured above are bluejackets on the aircraft tender U.S.S. Wright holding basketball practice on shipboard. Almost every ship in the U. S. Navy has its own basketball team. Rivalry among the crews of the various crafts runs high. In addition to basketball—football, baseball, boxing, bowling, wrestling and tennis all rank high as sports with Uncle Sam's sailors. Organized inter-team competitions are held for most sports. Prophecies and individual awards usually are presented to the championship winning teams and players.

CARD OF THANKS

Dear Editor:

Please allow us space in your good paper. We want to thank our many friends and relatives who lent us a helping hand or offered sympathy in any way during the sickness and death of our dear brother and son, Chester Davis, and especially do we thank Bro. Mel Martin and sons for their kindness shown us in all our bereavement and we want to ask all the praying people to pray for us and to pray that God's will will be done, not ours. We have a sweet memory of Chester but the sweetest of all is that he looked up at his daddy and said: "papa there's one thing I've got is a clear conscience with God and that is the hope we have to meet him and our other two boys some sweet day. He left to mourn his going his mother and dad, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Davis, three sisters, Mrs. Dollie Ware of Billingsley, Mrs. Gertrude Powell of Prattville, Mrs. Agnes Gray of Clanton, one brother Earnest Davis of Clanton Route 2, his wife Mrs. E. E. R. Marie Brown Davis, of Clanton and a host of friends and relatives. May God bless every one our pray is—The family.

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN
By Ben

The girls selling tickets for the Lions Raffle are in for some fun it appears. President of the Club, Earl Parrish, is entertaining the contestants with a Pep Dinner on the night of December 3rd, at his home. The girls will compare standings and make preparations for a last week burst of energy to put this years Annual Raffle over with a bang. Of course that's besides the turkey and stuff.

Things we heard about town: Grady Popwell has a calf with a perfect "V" in its forehead. . . he says there's also plenty dots and dashes all about . . . where do these Dots Cleaning establishments get such nice truck drivers. . . in all our experience in Clanton we have never found one who was discourteous or ungentlemanly. . . the next time you accuse someone of "gal-livating" you better be careful unless you know what the word means. . . it means "Woman chasing". . . Ex-Mayor Jones down town early Tuesday morning without his topcoat, says he's waiting until it gets colder. . . it was then about 28 degrees. . . Jeff D. McLean has been sent to Ft. Belvoir, Va., Engineer Training Battalion.

Nice letter received this week from A. W. Powell, of Pensacola who says that since he has taken the Democratic paper in Chilton County since the old Chilton View was first published and since he has raised 11 children to manhood and womanhood in Chilton County he thinks that he is entitled to the Chilton County News for one dollar a year. . . in his letter, however, was a money-order for one-fifty which we appreciate very much. We also appreciate the letter from Mr. Powell and hope that he gets more than his money's worth for the next eighteen months.

Now whether you believe it or not folks, Christmas is upon us once again. . . about these window displays in town, had you noticed Mr. Mosley's window at Goodway's, or the nice display of men's ready-to-wear in Mullins & Scott's window or the many Santa items in Mr. King's window at Elmore's (puttin' all this stuff in here ought to get me in good) but anyway, the time has come and we probably have more street light this year so all the merchants should follow suit and dress their windows with their Christmas merchandise and add a little cheer to an already too drab world.

A Million Christmas "Bundles for Britain"

The Clanton Study Club is working with a million other Club members in America to raise a million Christmas bundles for Britain. If you are interested and willing to help in this great cause read the list of articles needed and get your bundle ready and send to Mrs. Jack Hayes. If you wish your bundle called for call Mrs. Jon Van Derveer at 58-J.

WHAT IS THE NEED? With the coming of winter and with rationing of clothing, the need is increasing in Great Britain for warm garments for men, women and children. It should be made clear that ANY USED, STURDY, WARM CLOTHING which is clean and in good repair is acceptable for admission. If the opportunity presents itself to designate the clothing for which there is the most urgent need, the list given in the Clanton Reporter column in the accompanying Club Service Bulletin indicates the article that will be particularly welcome in Great Britain.

Any kind of Warm, Sturdy, Winter Clothing will be welcomed. But there are some items most urgently needed which should be announced if it is at all possible.

Men's clothing: Shoes in wide widths, long sleeved sweaters, leather jackets, flannel pajamas, underwear of wool or wool mixtures, mittens.

Women's clothing: Shoes in sizes 7 and 8, long sleeved sweaters, wool skirts—large sizes, underwear of wool or wool mixture—large sizes, flannel petticoats—large sizes, flannel night gowns, mittens.

Children's clothing: Shoes in wide widths for children over five years, long sleeved sweaters, underwear, of wool or wool mixture, flannel pajamas, mittens.

Bundles should be wrapped in Christmas packages and in the hands of Mrs. Hayes not later than Dec. 3, for first shipment.

Signed: Mrs. Jack Hayes, President, Mrs. John VanDerveer, Defense Chrm.

Clanton To Entertain R. A. F. Christmas

It is suggested that this Christmas time we think of those in our country who are spending their first Christmas thousands and thousands of miles away from home, and in a strange land. Let's all try to make their Christmas a happy one. The Clanton Study Club is sponsoring a move to entertain these boys from the R. A. F. Christmas Day. They want you to call Mrs. Jack Hayes and let her know how many of the boys you are willing to entertain for dinner that day. Call her at 268 and tell her that you will do your share in helping out on this worthwhile undertaking. The boys will appreciate it, the Study Club will appreciate it and you will feel better by helping make someone's Christmas a happy one.

Also at Maxwell Field are many young men who are American soldiers and far away from home. They will not get-to-go home either this Christmas. If you would rather entertain the American soldier than the British soldier please get in touch with Mrs. Hayes and let her know how many you can entertain Christmas Day.

This Week In National Defense

President Roosevelt sent identical letters to UMW President Lewis and to the steel company representatives Benjamin Fairless, Eugene Grace and Frank Purnell stating "work in the captive mines must recommence. . . The issue in dispute . . . does not justify a stoppage of work in a grave national crisis. . ."

The president asked the four leaders to "allow the matter of the closed shop in the captive mines to remain in status quo for the period of the national emergency. . . " or else to accept final arbitration. He said any agreement reached would have no effect on the UMW's closed shop agreement already in effect with regular commercial mines.

In a message to the CIO convention at Detroit, the President said unless democratic freedoms are protected from the "world scourge" of Hitlerism, "free trade unions and all other free institutions will vanish." To protect these freedoms, he wrote, "we must produce guns, tanks, planes and ships without delay and without interruption, and the American people and their government are determined that we shall have them."

Churches Cooperate In Red Cross Xmas Seal Sale

Sunday, November 30, in all the churches a plea will be made from the pulpit for cooperation by the congregation in the Christmas Seal Campaign which opened Monday, December 1st.

For the past several years churches of all denominations in every part of the country have signified their interest in the anti-tuberculosis drive.

Rev. Casaday and Rev. Davis of the Methodist and Baptist churches issued the following statement today: "The Christmas Seal this year shows a lighthouse throwing out a warm, glowing beam to the wanderer in the dark."

"Your church has always considered itself a beacon of light and it is glad to join its light with the glow of the Christmas Seal message, the light of knowledge to protect your home from a dread foe—tuberculosis."

HEALTH OFFICER ENDORSES SEAL SALE

Dr. Mary Walton, county health officer, today added her endorsement to the growing list of public officials sponsoring the Christmas Seal Sale of the Chilton County Tuberculosis Association, which opens December 1st.

"I am glad to give my hearty support to the coming Christmas Seal Campaign and recommend it as a worthy cause for Chilton County," Dr. Walton said.

"Tuberculosis, like a thief in the night, robs a man of his health when he is least aware of its presence. Every physician realizes the need of educating the layman to the dangers that lie in one undetected person with tuberculosis. The germs from that one person may spread to half a dozen persons."

"Chilton County has an active anti-tuberculosis campaign all year around. It would be worthwhile for the people of Chilton County to see in how many different channels money raised from Christmas Seals is spent."

MAYOR'S ENDORSEMENT

Official endorsement of the 1941 Christmas Seal Sale was issued today by Mayor Cohen Stapp in a statement given out at his office in City Hall. The campaign gets under way (Continued on Page 8)

THOMAS GANDY LISTED IN COLLEGE "WHO'S WHO"

Mr. Thomas W. Gandy, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gandy, Maplesville, Ala., who will receive his B. S. A. degree from Berry College next May, is among those students who will be listed in the 1941-42 issue of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. The book will be released in January or February. This publication is published through the cooperation of over 600 American universities and colleges. It is the only means of national recognition for graduates which is devoid of politics, fees, and dues. Several students from accredited colleges are selected each year, by an unprejudiced committee, for their biographies to appear in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. These books are placed in the hands of hundreds of companies and others who annually recruit outstanding students for employment.

The purpose of Who's Who is to set a standard for students to get the most out of their college careers, as a means of compensation to students for what they have already done, as a recommendation to the business world, and as a standard of measurement for students.

Mr. Gandy is a member of the X Club of Berry College, a secret honor organization, and is president of the College Varsity Club. He is Secretary-Treasurer of the Syreth Literary Society, Vice President of the Berry College Y. M. C. A. and is Vice President of the Agricultural Club. For the past three years he has been a member of the College quartet, and the Concert Choir. He has been active in the Honor Club which corresponds to the Phi Beta Kappa in other colleges.

Mr. Gandy attended Chilton County High School through the 11th grade, and then went to Berry High School where he graduated in 1939. While at Chilton High School, he was first president of the Clanton F. F. A. chapter, in 1935-36.

Our school was honored by a visit from the County Board of Education and the Superintendent. We wish they could have spent the day with us.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Walker of Birmingham spent the Thanksgiving holidays with Mrs. Walker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Gardner.

Mr. N. L. Gardner is home from the hospital. Gardner and Durwood Walker spent last week with William and Leon Train.

SPECIAL PASTURE AIDS IN CONTROL OF KIDNEY WORMS

Good crop prices this year make it all the more important that Chilton County farmers provide a special pig pasture in which swine kidney worm eggs are killed by sunlight, heat, and drying, says P. H. Smith, County Agent. This precaution gets the fall pig crop off to a strong start and helps reduce the estimated $2,500,000 annual loss to southern farmers from this costly internal parasite.

If sows about to farrow are placed on a new pasture with a 5-foot bare strip around the edge and a 30-foot bare strip at one end and for shelter, feed hoppers, waterers, creep and self feeders for sows, and feeding pen for new sows—the sucking pigs, most vulnerable to attack, can escape serious infection.

Effectiveness of this arrangement results from the fact that kidney worm eggs, eliminated by the thousands in urine of infested sows, must have shade, moisture, and reasonably high temperatures to hatch worms that develop to an infective stage. Because sows generally urinate close to where the pigs are feeding, most of the eggs will be discharged out in the open and killed by sunlight, heat, and drying if feeders are located on the bare areas.

Otherwise, pigs running on pasture or in hog lot with sows become infested by swallowing worms on contaminated forage, when they root in litter containing worms, or when they lie down where worms are present. When infective worms are swallowed or enter swine through the skin, they get into the blood and are carried to liver, lungs, and other organs. They often hollow out tunnels in the kidney fat and are eliminated in the urine by way of the bladder. In post-mortem examinations involving 53,000 hogs raised without regard to sanitation, 92 per cent of the livers and all the kidneys were condemned as unfit for food because of kidney worm infestations. Where the special pasture system was used, the livers were more uniform in size, thrifter and practically free from infestation. In addition to causing losses under meat inspection procedures, kidney worm infestation retards growth of pigs, causes a waste of feed, paves the way for diseases, and is largely responsible for the death and unthriftness of young pigs on many farms throughout the South, contends M. Smith.

There are more than 700 farms in Beat 4.

FLOYD NEWS

Here we come again with so much good news I don't know hardly how to start. First I want to say those who did not attend the services don't know how much they missed by not being there. For the Lord was there in a wonderful way. Brother Hand filled his regular appointment Saturday night and Sunday. He brought to us some wonderful sermons which was enjoyed by all. We had a glad attendance Sunday and Sunday night.

Brother Smith and wife were with us Sunday night. He preached for us Sunday night. No mistake about it, it was a wonderful sermon and we all enjoyed the music they afforded. We wish everybody could have been here at these services. Bro Hand, our pastor's text a few Sundays ago was "Where Art Thou?" so we pray that those who haven't been to hear him will think and ask themselves "Where Art Thou?"

We don't have much sickness in the community. A few colds. Mrs. Headley is still on the sick list. We are praying she will soon be up.

Mrs. Hudman visited Mrs. Headley Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Huett, Mr. Oscar and Curtis Huett and families visited their father and mother Sunday.

Mr. Bill Lovinsky of Sylacauga was visiting his sister, Mary Florence and friends over the week end.

Everyone remember the services at Floyd. You are always welcome.

LIBERTY HILL

Rev. H. S. Lucas will preach at Liberty Hill Church Sunday Nov. 30, at 11 o'clock.

Chilton County farmers will be able to carry insurance on their cotton crops in 1942. This will make for a more certain income from cotton.

CHILTON MILK QUOTA
30,000,000 POUNDS

So that Alabama's 1942 production goals of approximately a billion and a half pounds of milk—12 per cent over 1941 estimated output—can be reached Chilton County farmers are asked to redouble their efforts to increase milk production on every farm where such an increase is practical. Chilton County's goal for 1942 is 30,000,000 pounds.

One of the vital requirements in the plans of the farm defense program to defend democracy at home and abroad is the production of more milk. This is essential because the demand for dairy products, both for domestic uses and export promises to break all previous records, according to Chilton County defense board members. Export requirements through June, 1942 are estimated at about 250 million pounds of American cheese, 15 million cases of evaporated milk, and 200 million pounds of dried skim milk. It was added.

"Increase in milk production are more than justified by current prices for dairy products," P. H. Smith, County Agent, stressed. Dairy prices are now above parity and are expected to continue to parity or better to year or more. As an added safeguard, the Secretary of Agriculture has guaranteed the full use of available funds to support cheese, evaporated milk, and dry skim milk prices at 85 per cent of parity until December 31, 1942.

F. W. Burns, Extension Dairyman Auburn, points out that the dairy cow can be counted as a partner in the defense program providing she is properly fed and managed.

The following feeding suggestions may be helpful in maintaining maximum economical production:

1. Good roughage lower the cost of producing milk. Feed all the cow will clean up, part of it being legume hay.
2. If possible include corn or sorghum silage in the ration. This will lower the cost of milk production.
3. Feed a balanced grain ration—using as much home grown grain as possible.
4. Feed grain according to production. One pound of grain to each two and one-half to three pounds of milk.
5. When pastures get short feed hay or silage and grain before production begins to drop.

Milk is 87 per cent water—see that the cows have plenty of it at all times.

7. Cows need salt—one pound per hundred weight in the ration and a block of salt available for the cows is generally recommended.

8. Provide shelter for your cows. This will save much valuable feed.

9. Study the available feeds. The cheapest are not always the most economical.

10. Study your cows' likes and dislikes and cater to them when possible.

COMMUNITY MEETINGS
URGING FOOD FOR FREEDOM

Community meetings are being held all over Chilton County this week for the convenience of farmers in signing their farms to produce Foods for Freedom, reports P. H. Smith, County Agent.

An increase in production of such foods as dairy products, pork, beef and eggs are needed for National Defense purposes. Large quantities of increasing army and navy and to send these foods are needed to feed our some to other countries. Food is just as important to our soldiers and sailors as the guns and ships we are making. The same is true of our Allies.

This food must be produced by the American farmers.

In line with the above, farmers are being asked to sign a sheet stating how much of the desired foods will be produced on their respective farms in 1942. This information is urgently needed because if the intentions are not high enough, our efforts will have to be increased. The signing of this intention sheet does not bind one to do all he thinks he can do at this time. Farmers will not be penalized for not producing their full self-assigned goals but it is expected that a great majority of them will and that many will produce more than their goals.

All Chilton County farmers who have not already done so are urged to make a special effort to sign up their farm at the very earliest opportunity.

The Press And The Churches

One of the most easily misconstrued relationships in the publishing field is that between the newspaper and the churches in the community it serves. The newspaper man asks himself the question: "What should be my attitude toward the churches?" He endeavors to answer that question so that he will be fair to the churches and to himself.

Churches sometimes assume the attitude that as they are supported solely by voluntary donations, and as they are spiritual and moral forces in the community, any publicity desired should be given without charge by the newspaper. Strangely enough the churches do not expect the same privilege from any other business or profession. It should be remembered at the outset that most publishers are church members, and that as individuals they are decidedly interested in the welfare of the church with which they are affiliated. They give regularly and as generously as their circumstances permit. They attend the various functions designed to raise funds for the church, and as such they should be considered as any other church member who is conscientiously striving to support the church and what it stands for.

While newspapers are more generous with space to churches than to other institutions, this is simply a recognition by the press of the premier place held by the church in the spiritual and moral sphere in the community. However, the church has no legal right to expect the press to give more generously than any individual church member. It is not expected of the man who sells the church fuel, or the public utilities which serve the church, or the larger centers of the community that the organs should give his services free, or that the caretaker should work without remuneration.

The press, we believe, will always recognize the position and value of the church in the community. It will realize that the community without the church would be like a rudderless ship, not knowing where the tide of events and fortune might lead. The press will continue to give service to the church as one important institution to another, but the church must also realize that to continue its service, not only to the church but to the community, the newspaper must have an income, and that income can only come from the space it sells in its columns. This same reasoning must apply to charitable organizations in the community. To them the publisher and the men and women who work for the publisher give their time and talent. They too should prosper if they are to continue the support to the church, and all kindred organizations seeking to carry out an uplifting work in the community.

Who Is Guilty

How do you fellows, who are laying all the blame for cessation of work in the captive coal mines, figure it that the miners are defying the President by demanding the closed shop and the contract, and claim that the mine owners (the big steel corporations with multiplied millions of dollars worth of Government contracts) are cooperating with the President when they refuse to grant the closed shop?

We insist that the greater responsibility to the Government rests with the mine owners, who have contracted with the Government to "deliver the goods," and the difference between the closed shop and the open shop, is not sufficient justification for the industrialists in delaying the defense program. In fact, the case is so weak, that it causes one to wonder if there isn't a hidden motive somewhere that will cause the taxpayers pocket book to suffer some more along with the National Defense.

THE BIG PUSH

The idea of "Big Push" has arrived before Alabama's 1942 big political push will be fully under way. The trek back home will, for many, take place May 5th for a few, two weeks later.

MORAL ECHOS

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

Far out in the interior of Australia the natives heard for the first time about the modern source of pleasure in the moving picture shows. Twenty of their outstanding citizens were selected to make a journey to a coast town and see for the first time the City and see for the first time the strange thing. They walked four hundred miles and at last they came to Darwin. Tickets were secured and these twenty men went into the theater to see what they could see. The picture opened with a flare of music and dancing girls, and the visitors looked at each other in disgust. Then the story started and there was hugging and kissing, and the observers arose in a body and walked out. Back at home nothing like that had ever demoralized their morals and they were disgusted. And we call them pagans. After all it is a question as to who are the pagans in the world today.

The newspapers carried the story of the arrest of a workman in one of the Eastern factories where defense material was being manufactured. He was charged with sabotage, and naturally the story of a good American revolting against any such betrayal of the national interest. But, listen to me, for some months past it has been widely known that a Drug was being sold to the soldiers in training which has the affects of lowering their efficiency. The Government has had this Drug analyzed and it has been found to contain elements that will make it impossible for a soldier to shoot straight, or be at his best anytime. The medical world has also advised the army officials that this drug is harmful to the morale of the soldier, and yet nothing has been done about it. The truth of the matter is that the government is engaged in selling this Drug. This Drug is called, "Alcohol" and is contained in a much advertised beverage called "Beer." If we get in behind the man who betrays us to the enemy, we will not get in behind the man who betrays us to the enemy.

Shortly after Bishop McDowell was elected to his high office he came home one afternoon and found his wife and three children shivering in freezing weather. There was no fire in the furnace and she urged her husband to go down into the basement and shovel coal and start a fire. The good bishop looked at his fine clothes and for a moment he rebelled. He refused his wife that shivering child was beneath the dignity of a bishop and he retired to his room. There he thought about his family shivering with cold, and a change came over him. He donned his basement suit and was soon shoveling the coal. He turned to himself, "To make warm my fellowmen I will shiver myself." When Jesus is like Jesus, and no work that Jesus ever did was common. There is much false.

Doctor Weatherhead became very much interested on the question of the decision to decide that the buzzard sermons on the cause of a nervous condition. He went into this study and for ten Sundays in succession he informed his congregation of what produced nervous breakdowns and warned them against the things that produced this great injury. When Weatherhead had delivered his last sermon, he came down with nervous prostration. He had thought so much about the subject and had worked himself into a nervous state, and then came down with the very thing that he had been trying to prevent. When we give ourselves over to the study of one subject and think day and night about that subject, we are most likely to shatter under the pressure of our thoughts. When a person thinks that he has a cancer, he is most likely to wind up with one. Continued thought on any one subject will lead to the production of that result. Whether it be true or not, any one who thinks that his or her companion is untrue, will soon come to the breaking up of the home if that thought is carried on.

I had some pecan trees in my back yard and one day I decided that I would whitewash the body of these trees with some plastering lime that was left over. After the work was done the trunk of the trees were almost as white as snow. For days we had sunshine and the trees were full of life. Next day I saw a better job of whitewash. One night there was a hard downpour of rain and the next morning I looked out and not even a sign of my whitewash was left on the trees. The water had washed it away like white sand. That line did not have what it took to make it stay. People have been converted in my meetings and I thought them to be very definitely changed. They

Unity Before Victory

The following from the Centerville Press, is the most sensible comment we have read so far, on, to our way of thinking, the senseless British "V" campaign.

"Nearly everywhere you turn you see a 'V' on windshields, box cars, buildings, fences, and many other public places. Many are wearing 'V' pins and buttons. Many uninformed ask what is the meaning of the 'V'. The 'V' came from England several months ago, and the 'V' was displayed in every conceivable manner. In eating places it was taped out on dishes in the Morse Code. The 'V' stands for VICTORY. Soon the craze came to our country. It may be all right to write VICTORY, even in the skies, but to be victorious calls for much work and fight in many ways without taking up arms.

"Before the 'V' there should be 'U', which stands ahead of 'V' in this alphabet." "U" stands for UNITY and without unity there can be no VICTORY. If our nation was united as a whole, we would have no strikes. All would be united in one purpose and nothing would hinder the Defense Program.

"His successes are due to the cooperation the citizens of Germany. He may have gotten the cooperation through threats, coercion or fear, or many of his people may have had all confidence in his ability to conquer and rule THE WHOLE WORLD. It makes no difference how he secured their cooperation but he has it, and until we get it and other nations get it we might quit writing 'V' on earth and in the skies, for no VICTORY in peace time or war time."

There can be no question that the German successes to date have been due, more to German unity, than to their cooperation but he has it, and until we get it and other nations get it we might quit writing 'V' on earth and in the skies, for no VICTORY in peace time or war time."

The Press has well said: "Unity comes before Victory."

What About The Bridge?

Says Bonnie Hand in his Observations column in The LaFayette Sun: "The State Highway Department and Chilton County officials have announced that Highway 22 from Verbena to the Coosa River will be paved in the near future. A portion of this road on the east side of the River will be paved also. We look for this road to be completely paved before many more months. Being an important link between central and Alabama, many are interested in its completion. It is a route that is seldom used simply because it is not surfaced although it saves many miles."

Paving Highway 22 on either side of the Coosa River, and not building a bridge to cross on, is like going to the store with a nickel and no token.

School Teachers And Easter Shopping

The Greenville Advocate doesn't like the idea of school teachers drawing their salaries in Butler county and buying their Easter finery in Birmingham. The Advocate is no different from the rest of our country newspaper men and editors, and a lot of other folks we know, who make their living in a small town or rural county, and spend most of it in the big city, is just as unpatriotic as a fifth columnist or a quisling.

"Listen to The Advocate: 'We knew it all the time! Months ago we predicted it. And it is going to happen as usual. Birmingham will get the Easter shopping cream from all the school teachers in Alabama again next Spring. Easter comes on Sunday, April 5, 1942. The session of the Alabama Educational Association—to meet in Birmingham as usual—will be held as usual just ahead of Easter. The 1942 date is March 26-28.'"

"HIDDEN TAXES"

There can be no justification for "hidden taxes" in a Democracy.

"Yes, my friend, there is a very wide difference between Teachers' Scotch and Scotch Teachers."

We will have to admit that Governor Frank Dixon has more money than he knows what to do with. He made profession of faith in Christ and I was foolish enough to think that I had done a good job. New members and they were as white as snow. They shined like saints for a few days and then temptation came, and the members were gone. So many new church members do not last long after they have made a profession of faith. Under temptation they lose their whiteness.

Thanksgiving Days

We Americans seem to have a hard time getting together on anything. This joyful Thanksgiving season the States were divided nineteen to twenty-nine in the observance of Thanksgiving Day.

Alabama, Kansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Nebraska, Nevada, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas and Vermont were equally insistent that the last Thursday in November was THE DAY, and will be eating turkey hash until December.

All states have decided on the last Thursday in November for future observance.

BUS TRAGEDIES

Another terrible bus tragedy, this time in Indiana. A Greyhound bus ran off the highway, burst into flames and several people were burned to death. It is a reminder of the recent terrible wreck near Clanton on the Montgomery highway in which nearly 20 passengers were trapped and burned until hardly enough of their bodies was left to make identification possible.

It is disappointing that so little has been said about that awful tragedy near Clanton. It seems to us that there ought to have gone up over this whole state a vigorous demand that the bus companies do something with their equipment to make it possible for passengers to get out with their lives, when buses catch fire.

And if the bus people are not willing to make reasonable provisions for the safety of their passengers voluntarily, then the next legislation to demand that the bus companies do something with their equipment to make it possible for passengers to get out with their lives, when buses catch fire.

"BARBOUR COUNTY BOURBON"

In a recent issue of the Montgomery Advertiser Atticus Mullin refers to Chaucery Sparks at the "Barbour county bourbon," which brings to mind the description of a bourbon which the late Judge John B. McClellan of Athens was wont to give.

It was "one who never learns anything new, nor forgets anything old." —Bishop Mullin, who is particularly adept at name-calling, has scored again—Cullman Banner.

Individualistic Weekly Editors

Newspaper editors—particularly weekly newspaper editors—have a reputation for being hard individualists.

That quality serves the public well in providing independent interpretation of the news and stubborn opposition to ruthless power and corruption.

It is a strange thing, however, to see this same rugged individualism cause the editors to exhibit at times a certain suicidal tendency.

For example, the Field Manager of the Alabama Press Association has been trying for some time to sample an advertising rate book on all newspapers in the state. In order to do this Mr. Doyle Buckles more than a month ago sent out a blank to each editor, asking that he fill in the desired information and return promptly. But 50 editors have not taken the trouble to return the blank. All the time they could use more advertising, many of them complain bitterly about not getting enough—but when a single bit of profitable cooperation is asked, they don't give it. Many of the 50 editors who have not returned the blank will come through on the second request, but we guess that 25 of the would still be missing after two months.

COTTON QUOTA PROGRAM WILL BE DECIDED BY FARMERS DEC. 15

The nation's cotton farmers will go to the polls Dec. 13 to decide whether marketing quotas will remain in effect on the 1942 cotton crop. Below are 20 questions and answers to help explain the marketing quota more fully.

Q. How is the cotton marketing quota program related to the loan program?

A. The law provides that no loan program can be offered to farmers during any marketing year for which quotas have been voted down in a grower referendum.

Q. How has the present war affected consumption and exports of American cotton?

A. During 1940 the wars abroad cut many of our foreign cotton customers. The numbers of countries able to import American cotton is even smaller now than a year ago. While increased industrial activity in this country, due in part to the defense program, has tended to increase greatly our own use of cotton, the loss of exports is far greater than the increase in domestic consumption. Thus, the present war situation is not, in itself, proving a benefit to the American farmer.

Q. What is the current cotton export situation?

A. During the 1939-40 season, the United States exported more than 6,000,000 bales of cotton. However, during the following season which ended July 31, 1941, our exports amounted to only 1,100,000 bales. Since this slump was due primarily to the war and naval blockades, there is little reason to believe that exports will be increased to any great extent during the present season. Other principal reasons for our small exports, in addition to the war, include: (1) The low price foreign cotton as compared with American cotton; (2) restrictions on shipping facilities; and (3) increased competition from nations to conserve American exchange for the purchase of war materials.

Q. What is a farm marketing quota?

A. The 1942 marketing quota for a farm will be the cotton acreage allotment multiplied by the actual or normal yield, whichever is greater, plus any carry-over quota which could have been marketed without penalty in 1941.

Q. If marketing quotas are in effect, how much cotton may a farmer sell without penalty in 1942?

A. He may sell an amount of cotton equal to the farm marketing quota. As in previous years, a farmer who plants within his acreage allotment may sell without penalty all the cotton he produces in 1942.

Q. What are the market quota penalties?

A. If a farmer overplants his acreage allotment, he will be subject to a penalty on cotton marketed in excess of his quota, at a penalty rate per pound of 50 per cent of the basic loan rate applicable to cooperators. In addition, he will not be eligible for parity payments, and if he has knowingly overplanted, he will not get cotton reservation payments. If a loan program is in effect he can obtain a loan only on the amount of cotton subject to penalty and then only at 60 per cent of the rate offered to cooperators.

Q. May a farmer sell without a

THORSBY INSTITUTE NEWS

The boarding departure of Thorsby Institute and guests had an excellent turkey dinner last Thursday, which was prepared by the girls of the boarding department under the supervision of Miss Lois Leech. The tables were arranged in the form of the letter T. On the tables were paper churches and Pilgrim figures. Before the grace was said, J. L. Lang, a pupil of Miss Edith Rylander, played "America" on his trumpet. Rev. Luther Ballou of East View, Alabama, offered the blessing. After the music desert was eaten, Howard Lambert, another music pupil, played a piano solo. Doris Harden gave a reading, "When Frost is on the Pumpkin" by James W. Riley. Robert Milner, Edwin Petty, Leslie Duke, and William Weems gave their reasons for being thankful. Sarah Graham, I. V. Hayes, and Frank Marcus gave a detailed explanation of what these boys mentioned. Patricia Campbell, a music pupil, played a violin solo, accompanied by Miss Rylander. Mr. H. M. Adair, a teacher at Thorsby Institute, gave a reading, "The Secret of the Alchemist," by Zella M. Walters. The program closed with the singing of the Alma Mater.

The annual Stunt Night of Thorsby Institute, in which all four classes present a program of fun, will be Friday night, November 28 at 7:30. There will be judges to decide which class should be ranked first. Every one is invited. The admission is ten cents.

The church was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and chrysanthemums.

ers voting by secret ballot in the forthcoming referendum give their approval.

Q. Who is eligible to vote in the referendum?

A. All 1941 cotton producers are eligible to vote.

Q. When and where may farmers cast their ballots?

A. All voting will take place on Saturday, Dec. 13. Polling places will set up in order that cotton farmers will not have to travel far from home in order to cast their ballots.

There can be no government loan on cotton unless marketing quotas are in effect.

OATS PRODUCTION GOAL EXCEEDED, VIEW

Agricultural workers of Chilton County believe that farmers will exceed the goal originally set up for this county to reach in oat production. The goal set by the State USDA defense board was 9,000 acres, but it is felt by the local board that Chilton County will have a minimum of 10,000 acres in 1942.

In exceeding this goal farmers are adding the defense program greatly as feed as well as food is important in this all-out effort. By planting greater acreage to oats farmers are reducing the labor requirements on the farm and insuring good feed supplies says P. H. Smith, County Agent.

Chilton County farmers should continue the drive to plant every acre possible so that the goal set by the local defense board will be reached. With the general rains of this last week end, farmers who have not planted oats should be able to do so. Two acres of oats for each horse and mule in the County is needed to reach the above goals.—Are you doing your part?

There was more than $265,000 in cash paid to Chilton County farmers in 1940 under the Agricultural Conservation Program. It is estimated that $250,000 will be paid in cash and $42,000 in Cotton Stamps in 1941.

ARCHER'S CHAPEL

Rev. Luther Ballou will preach at Archer's Chapel Saturday, Nov. 29th at 7 p. m. and Sunday Nov. 30th at 11 a. m. Sunday School at 10 a. m.

Alabama leads all other states in the United States in 4-H Club enrollment.

Farmers will vote again on cotton marketing Quotas December 13 this year. Marketing Quotas must be approved by at least two-thirds of those voting to be in effect in 1942.

75 Bales Of Cotton Grown On 63 Acres

ATHENS, Ala.—Gilbert White one of Limestone County's best farmers has harvested 75 bales of cotton off 63 acres and had the stalks turned by Oct. 15.

Mr. White not only follows recommended methods in the successful production of cotton but is carrying out a well-planned farm program. Last Spring he seeded 28 acres of permanent pasture which was properly limed and phosphated. This was one of the largest acreages to be seeded on any farm in the county.

Mr. White also produces his Winter legumes seed. He is grazing cattle, sheep, hogs, and work stock on 26 acres of crimson clover and barley which was seeded in early September. An electric fence was recently purchased by Mr. White to use for temporary grazing.

The White farm contains 257 acres and a large part of it is planted in winter legumes and small grain each fall. The entire farm is properly terraced and vegetable outlets have been established to take care of run off water from terraces.

DANGEROUS "ONE EYED" CARS SHOULD NOT BE DRIVEN AT NIGHT

Montgomery, Ala. — Stressing the seriousness of the hazard to life, limb and property that is created by the driving of "one-eyed" cars and trucks after night fall on the highways and even on city streets with "blackouts" in effect to conserve electric power, Director James F. Brawner of the State Department of Public Safety emphasized recently that this hazard was particularly dangerous at this season of the year. The reason he explained, was that the nights were constantly growing longer and the days shorter, and would continue to do so until the longest night and shortest day in the calendar on December 21.

"As a matter of course" the Director said, "the longer the nights, the higher the total of miles covered by motor vehicles of all types, and the more miles traveled at night the greater the danger of accidents caused by 'one-eyed' cars and trucks, or those having only one head-light. Hardly less dangerous is the operation of a motor vehicle without a rear or 'tail light' after nightfall.

Replacement of burned-out bulbs in headlights or tail-light equipment is a simple and inexpensive operation requiring little time—so that failure to replace such burned-out bulbs by the driver at his first opportunity, must be assumed to result either from carelessness or indifference and will be so regarded by officers of the State Highway Patrol, after reasonable warning notice has been given. I have instructed them to that effect."

The Safety Director said a campaign conducted by his department several months ago to ban "one-eyed" cars and trucks from the highways, brought excellent results, patrol officers finding a great majority of the driving public to be most cooperative—but that in recent weeks failure by $400,000,000 stabilization fund to maintain the peso at its present rate. 5. This is to purchase up to 6,000,000 ounces of newly-mined Mexican silver monthly. 6. The Export-Import Bank to establish credits up to $300,000,000—to be made available in installments of $10,000,000 a year—also to aid Mexico in developing its highways.

LEND LEASE AID

The Department of Agriculture reported nearly 1,650,000,000 pounds of agricultural commodities costing almost $200,000,000 were delivered to representatives of the British Government for Lend-Lease shipment from the beginning of operations in April up to October 1. Animal product shipments, including cheese, dried milk, evaporated milk, eggs, pork and lamb, made up the most important groups of commodities.

State Secretary Hull announced a Lend-Lease agreement has been signed with Iceland.

ARMING OF MERCHANT SHIPS

President Roosevelt signed the legislation to repeal the three key sections of the Neutrality Act. The president also requested from Congress a new $280,000,000 appropriation for the Navy, including $12,000,000 for "defense installations" on merchant ships. Navy Secretary Knox said the first armed U. S. merchant vessels will be plying the seas within a week. He said ships plying both the Atlantic and Pacific will be armed. The arming of the ships will require three to four months to complete. The Navy will put gun crews of from 12 to 18 men on all ships as fast as they are armed.

The Maritime Commission reported the keels of 21 Liberty ships were laid during October to bring the total to 76. Four of these cargo ships were launched in October (compared with three for September, and three more are scheduled to be launched this month). The Commission added four ships to its six-six training fleet to help turn out 15,000 trained seamen for the deck, engine and steward's departments during 1942 and 1943.

NAVY

The Navy announced capture by the U. S. Cruiser OMAHA in Atlantic equatorial waters of the German ship ODENWALD which was sailing under U. S. colors. The disguised merchant ship was on its way from Yokohama to Bordeaux with a cargo of 3,000 tons of raw rubber and American-made automobile tires. Secretary Knox told his press conference the ODENWALD was one of a number of German vessels which had been chartered to Japanese interests.

Three destroyers, a submarine and the battleship INDIANA were launched—making a total of three battleships, 18 destroyers and 13 submarines launched so far this year. The three destroyers were five months ahead of schedule and the submarine three months.

ARMY ORDNANCE

President Roosevelt asked Congress for a supplemental appropriation of $6,687,000,000 for the War Department, including $3,720,000,000 for Ordnance and $779,000,000 for the Air Corps. Army Chief of Ordnance Weston, speaking in Hartford, Conn., said U. S. light and medium tanks have greater fire power, maneuverability and speed than European models as well as "many times the powers of endurance." He said the Ordnance Department has also developed a light anti-tank artillery piece "capable of knocking out any known tank at very great ranges."

ARMY HEALTH

The War Department announced the death rate in the Army from disease now is less than one-tenth what it was in 1917-18, and the venereal disease rate is less than half what it was at that time. Chief of Army Medical Service said most of the USO buildings will be in use by Christmas. The Army also announced field houses are being built in 37 camps to furnish additional recreational facilities during winter months.

CIVILIAN SUPPLY

Director of Civilian Supply Henderson announced passenger car production during February, 1942, will be reduced by 56 per cent as compared with production in February, 1941, from 396,000 cars to 174,000 cars. An OPM automobile committee recommended the effective date for the order banning bright work from automobiles be postponed from December 15 to December 31. The OPM made tentative allocations of 112 airplanes to U. S. commercial airlines during 1942.

SUBCONTRACTING

The Maritime Commission announced that because it started 14 months ago to "farm out" contracts to small manufacturers, it is now receiving machinery and equipment for the emergency ship construction program from 450 concerns in 32 states. The Treasury Department issued a booklet on procedures called "Doing Business with the Procurement Division." Copies are available without charge from the Treasury Procurement Division, Washington, D. C. The Contract Distribution Division opened nine more field offices to bring the total to 66.

COKE AND COAL

Fuel Coordinator Ickes reported coke production during the first 10 months of this year was 16 per cent greater than during the corresponding period last year. A record production of 65,000,000 tons is indicated for the complete year of 1941. Mr. Ickes also said production of Pennsylvania anthracite coal through October, 1941, was nine per cent above the corresponding period of 1940. If the percentage is maintained, he said, total 1941 production will approximate 56,000,000 tons, the largest since 1934.

AGRICULTURE

The Department of Agriculture said additional improvements in the demand for farm products is indicated for the next few months as a result of increased consumer incomes and increased Government buying. Farm income from marketing increased 15 per cent more than the normal seasonal gain during the period from June to September. The Department also reported 10,420,000 persons employed in agriculture as of November 1, the lowest November level since 1922.

Secretary Wickard announced establishment of a national organization of farmers and Department workers to make plans for an agricultural postwar program.

WARNING TO HUNTERS

The Conservation Department is today issuing a warning to the hunters of the State of Alabama because of the fact that there is so much confusion in regard to the opening of the season on different species of game birds and animals. To clarify this situation, it is requested that each hunter abide by the following dates as set out below:

Ducks—Nov. 2 to Dec. 31.
Turkey—Nov. 20 to Jan. 1.
Deer—Nov. 20 to Jan. 1.
Quail—Dec. 1 to Feb. 20.
Dove—Dec. 1 to Jan. 1.
*Turkey and Deer Seasons open in certain specified counties.

Particular attention of the sportsmen is directed to the fact that the quail and dove season have been changed this year and do not open until December 1. This release has been caused by the numerous telephone calls received from hunters all over the State who did not get a copy of the new law on open seasons and bag limits which were distributed to each Probate Judge, "caused by the last minute rush for licenses."

IN MEMORY OF AARON PARKER

On Nov. 12, 1941 the Death Angel came and took away our loved one. But God said, "He would gather all his saints home," and we know that Heaven is where he has gone. There's a home of many Mansions in the Father's House above.

That our Savior has prepared for the children of His love. "Come," said Jesus's sacred voice, "I will guide you to your home. 'Come' and make my path your choice. A beautiful mansion will be your own. Aaron was waiting, gladly waiting for that beautiful heavenly dawn when his face from us has gone, but we'll all strive to meet you in that Brights and happy home.

"Before you left we were only troubled but now we are lonesome and sad. It seems our cares are all doubled and our hearts ache terribly."

JUDGE L. H. REYNOLDS WRITES LETTER TO NEWS ON TEMPERANCE

Great Need of Saving For Defense Food Consumed by Brewers And Distillers

The following copy of a letter by Judge L. H. Reynolds to The Birmingham News, has been handed Chilton County News for publication.

Dear Sir: The justification for the passage of Alabama's present liquor law, as the act is set forth, was the promotion of temperance. If the law, therefore, has failed to promote temperance, then it is proper to consider the method should be tried. I notice from the Birmingham News that the City of Birmingham has passed an ordinance to prohibit the sale of liquor and beer from Saturday midnight to Sunday midnight.

The United States is on the verge of entering the second World War, and the boys from the colleges, the plow handles and the banks are being drafted to prepare them for this Titanic struggle, and there is great effort being made to keep liquor away from the boys in the camps and properly so, because America would not trust its safety in the hands of inebriated soldiers. I wonder why a State and a people are willing to trust the affairs of its Government and the business of this Country as well as the morals of its people in those under the influence of liquor.

I notice that every effort is being made from the President down to the working man to preserve all the food we possibly can. Our Government is spending millions of dollars trying to encourage farmers to produce more food and yet our State and Federal Government is permitting the distiller to spend millions of dollars worth of food out of that to make liquor, which have only one result—waste and the harm to any man that partakes of it.

I noticed in the News a few days ago a pledge that every one was requested to sign and mail to Miss Elliot in Washington, D. C. The pledge read: "As a consumer in the total defense of the Democracy, I will do my part to make my home, my community, my country ready, efficient and strong. "I will buy carefully. "I will take good care of the things I have. "I will waste nothing."

It just occurred to me that if the distillers of this nation and those that sell liquor would sign the above pledge and then comply with it, how much food would really be saved for a purpose that would help and not harm a hungry world.

The promise was made to the people of Alabama that if the State was permitted to sell liquor, that they would break up "blind tigers" and illicit distillers in Alabama on your part of September 23, 1941.

Agents Seize Stillage Still in Five Years! The still was apprehended near Bessemer. The News item stated that it was the largest still that had been seized in the state in five years, and that it required two men to move it every time a run was made, and that 250 gallons of liquor flowed into Birmingham daily from this still. Chilton County, a dry county will not consume 250 gallons of liquor in one month. Under the prohibition law, the County that sell liquor legally furnish a market for Counties like Chilton, Shelby and other dry counties.

While our County is by no means dry actually, yet if we had State stores and places where liquor could be legally bought, more whiskey and beer would be sold in one week than would be sold by the boot leggers in twelve months.

Suppose it were a violation of the law to buy apples, but that some bootlegger was selling apples in some cellar in violation of the law. Do you think as many would be sold this way as there would be if they could be bought openly on the street with the sanction of the law? While prohibition has its faults, it is violated as we all know, still less liquor is consumed under prohibition than when the sale is legal.

It makes no difference where liquor comes from, it has the same effect on the individual whether bought legally with sanction from the State, or from Blind Tigers, and any law that we might have that will make it harder for the citizens to buy liquor and less consumption is the best law. Let me give you a concrete example: "Two boys bought a bottle of legal liquor in Montgomery from the State of Alabama, and the State by selling this whiskey, of course, means and understands that this liquor will be consumed. These boys were in an automobile and this same state punishes them for operating a car while under the influence of the liquor the State has sold them. These boys cross into Autauga and Chilton Counties, which the State has made a violation of the law, and just north of Jemison they run this car head on into another car, and five people are killed—killed as a result of a bottle of whiskey sold by the State of Alabama. Who is to blame for this? The State reminds me of a father handing his child a lighted cigarette and then whipping the child for smoking it. One of the great dangers to day is that liquor is being made respectable.

The Mayor's statement said: "Purchase of Christmas Seals by the citizens of Clanton is one of the nation-wide fight against tuberculosis has the unqualified endorsement of myself, not only as your mayor, but as a private citizen.

"To protect homes—all our homes—from the tragedies caused by the ravages of tuberculosis is one of the commendable objective of the annual Christmas Seal Campaign. The simple, direct appeal of that campaign comes to us with the approach of each holiday season. I trust that we shall be quick in responding not only to a civic duty, but to a nationwide appeal. "Let us all buy Christmas Seals this year. Let every greeting card and gift package that goes forth from our City bear these Seals, a sign that our community is alive to its responsibilities and, as in previous years, is doing its part in a great national drive."

Bibb Countian Found Dying On Railroad

CENTREVILLE — P. C. Cottingham, chief deputy of the Bibb County sheriff's office, said today that a man identified as Houston Parker, 24, of Four Points in Bibb County, had been found fatally wounded Saturday night on the G. M. and O. railroad tracks near Brent.

The officer said that Parker died soon after he was discovered on the tracks. He appeared to have been beaten on the head with a piece of lumber, then placed on the tracks, the chief deputy added. There was evidence of a struggle at a point near the track. Cottingham said the investigation was being continued.

SCOUTS PUT UP POSTERS

The "Be Prepared" motto of Boy Scouts entered another field Monday when members of Troop 57 circulated about town, putting up posters and placards announcing the 35th annual Christmas Seal Campaign against tuberculosis.

Participation of the Boy Scouts in the drive was announced by Dr. Mary Walton, president of the Chilton County Tuberculosis Association, who said the drive began December 1 and will continue through Christmas.

Under the leadership of Fred H. Bucklewe, the Scouts made a systematic tour of schools, bus stops and other buildings, putting up posters identical with those of the post-house seal, calling attention to the 1941 drive.

"We'll cover this town like a blanket," said the Eagle Scouts of Troop 57, as they trudged off on their appointed rounds with a bundle of posters and said reports from their arms.

A Boy Scout knows what it is to be prepared. We'll carry that message to the public in still another way."

EDITORIAL The Press And The Advertiser

The relationship between the newspaper and its advertisers is as important to the newspaper reader as it is to the publisher. Newspapers are sometimes unfairly accused of being subservient to the advertisers who provide the revenue upon which the newspaper exists. This erroneous impression has been gathered because the average person knows that the newspaper must have advertising to exist, and therefore if he happens to be of a suspicious turn of mind, he concludes that the advertiser must set the policy of the newspaper.

Not only such suggestion untrue, but it is unfair to the newspaper and to the advertiser. Practically every publisher will tell you that few merchants ever attempt to dictate the policy of the newspaper. They may express opposition to some stand the newspaper has taken, but few would go so far as to threaten the newspaper with withdrawal of business, if that policy was not changed to conform with the wishes of the advertiser. The successful merchant is usually successful because he is an honorable man, and few would stoop to the level of threatening a newspaper because its publisher had different ideas on a given question than the advertiser.

The relationship between the advertiser and the newspaper is similar to that which exists between a merchant and his customer, only in this case the publisher is the merchant and the advertiser the customer. The advertiser purchases space in the newspaper because he has a story to tell the readers of the paper. He uses advertising as a legitimate means of drawing new business to his store. If the newspaper continues to provide the service required and adequate returns for the investment, the merchant continues to advertise. When he feels he is not getting that value he ceases to advertise. That too is the relationship which exists between any other merchant and his customer. So long as the customer feels he is getting good value and service from the store, he continues to be a customer. When value and service cease he takes his trade elsewhere. That, very simply is the relationship between the publisher and the advertiser. Any suggestion that the policy of the newspaper is dictated by the advertiser is a slander on both newspaper and merchant. Best proof that the advertiser does not dictate policy is the fact that it would be almost impossible to find a group of merchants in any community whose ideas could be so identical that they could formulate the policy of any newspaper.

This Week In National Defense

The White House announced a U. S. Army contingent has been sent to Dutch Guiana in South America to cooperate with Netherlands forces in protecting mines there which furnish more than 60 per cent of the bauxite supply to the U. S. aluminum industry. The move had the approval of Brazil, whose forces will patrol the Guiana-Brazilian border. The White House said the Army force would be withdrawn as soon as the present danger passes.

FOREIGN RELATIONS

Following conferences with envoys to Britain, China, Australia and the Netherlands, and then representatives of Japan, the State Department announced it had presented Japan with a plan dealing with the Far Eastern plan was based on U. S. policy presentation. The Department said the viously announced. The President told his press conference that for the present U. S. merchant ships in the Pacific would not be armed.

ARMY PROGRESS

War Secretary Stimson told his press conference the Army "has shown really wonderful progress" in the current maneuvers in the British in Egypt and Libya have testified to the excellent performance of American equipment being used there. Mr. Stimson said although the great bulk of tanks fighting in Europe are riveted, the Army is ordering for steel and welded tanks which are stronger. Gen. Weason, Chief of Ordnance, reported arrangements for $53,000,000 in facilities to make these new tanks.

SELECTIVE SERVICE AND THE NAVY

Navy Secretary Knox told his press conference there has been a 15 per cent drop in Navy enlistments since the troopings of Navy ships in the North Atlantic because parents are no longer as willing to give their consent to sons under 21. The Navy need and said reports from the British in Egypt and Libya have testified to the excellent performance of American equipment being used there. Mr. Stimson said although the great bulk of tanks fighting in Europe are riveted, the Army is ordering for steel and welded tanks which are stronger. Gen. Weason, Chief of Ordnance, reported arrangements for $53,000,000 in facilities to make these new tanks.

PRICES

Labor Secretary Perkins reported the cost of goods purchased by wage earners and lower-salaried workers in large cities increased 12 percent from mid-September to mid-October. She said a survey of 18 staple foods in 19 cities showed food prices also rose moderately during the first half of November.

Price Administrator Henderson announced prices of wooden household furniture were no longer going up. He asked manufacturers of mattresses, bed springs, studio couches, metal beds and pillows to hold prices where they were on November 1, and announced the Government is planning to restrict further price increases in water heaters, radiators, and air conditioners.

ers. He also announced manufacture of more than 50 per cent of all writing paper, book and printing paper will be rationed. He indicated they will not raise prices further.

PRIORITIES

OPM ordered a 10 per cent cut in production by large manufacturers of vacuum cleaners for household use; a two-thirds cut in production of lead and tin foil for decorative purposes and for tobacco, chewing gum, beverages, confections, films and similar articles. OPM also announced it will shortly institute a new priority system under which manufacturers of essential items will be allotted materials and components in the order to cut down the number of applications for priorities.

LEND-LEASE

Lend-Lease Administrator Stettinius reported lend-lease aid has steadily increased from $18,000,000 in March to a present total of more than one billion dollars; contracts have been let for more than 75 per cent of the first $7,000,000,000; and the new $6,000,000,000 fund is being allocated rapidly. The Agricultural Department hopes that the production of dry skim milk must be increased 40 to 50 per cent to meet the total of 200,000,000 pounds required for shipment to Britain. Secretary of State Hull announced a lend-lease agreement with Iceland.

LABOR SUPPLY

The Social Security reported 475,000 workers were scheduled to be hired and 100,000 scheduled to be laid off in 9,900 industrial establishments between now and February. Nearly 250,000 workers will be taken on in the aircraft and shipping industries, the report estimated.

The Office of Agricultural Defense Relations announced that "if all possible means of conserving manpower and utilizing it efficiently are employed... farmers should not be handicapped severely by labor shortages." Assistant OGD Director Eleanor Roosevelt told a press conference the OGD is planning a "women's land army" to help harvest next year's crops.

PROPERTY REQUISITIONING

The President by Executive Order delegated to the OPM the power to requisition property under the conditions set forth by Congress in the Acts of October 10, 1940 and October 16, 1941. Whenever requested by OPM, any Federal agency is authorized to requisition property essential to national defense which cannot be obtained in any other way.

OPM issued a comparison of present industrial defense efforts with those during 1917 and 1918. The comparison showed the productive capacity of each worker has greatly increased because of technical efficiency and that because of lower prices the U. S. is now getting more value for every dollar spent.

This Area Leads In Navy Recruiting

Despite the recently reported drop in naval enlistments, Alabama boys continue to join the navy.

Last week in Birmingham 106 young men from all parts of Alabama held up their right hands and took the oath to serve their country, in the Navy. And this number placed Birmingham and Alabama far in the lead of all other recruiting districts in the Southern Division.

The Southern Division includes Dallas and Houston, Texas, Little Rock, Ark., Nashville, Tenn., New Orleans, La. and Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Birmingham enlisted nearly four times as many men as did Oklahoma City, nearly three times as many as Dallas and Little Rock, 60 per cent more than Houston and Nashville, and topped New Orleans, the closest competitor, by 26 per cent.

Of Alabama subcontracting districts, which include Birmingham proper, Birmingham was in the lead; Opelika came second, Mobile third; Gadsden fourth; Huntsville and Florence tied for fifth; Hoover, Anniston, Decatur and Montgomery tied for sixth place; Dothan and Tuscaloosa tied for seventh place; Andalusia was ninth; Selma tenth; and Demopolis eleventh.

NAZIS SINK 59 VESSELS SUNK DURING NOVEMBER

BERLIN — Forty-eight merchant ships totaling 231,870 tons and 11 naval craft were declared by the high command Tuesday to have been sunk by Germany's navy and air force in the sea war against Britain in November.

Groups Formed To Aid Farmers

In the battle to improve the lot of the low-income farmer, advances in Chilton County on two fronts were reported today by Marvin Durbin, Farm Security Administration County Supervisor.

One of these is the organization of community groups for joint action by families on small farms who alone might be helpless. In this county, eight groups have been formed.

The other is the campaign to set ten years as the term of farm leases. "Much interest has been developed in both these objectives," said Mr. Durbin. "All through the Southeast reports are made of progress toward organizing 5,000 community groups out of which it is hoped will come 250 county purchasing and marketing associations."

"At the same time, ground work is being laid for the longer leases, with both landlords and tenants being educated in the value of secure tenure, long enough to permit improvement of lands and homes."

Two programs have really one objective, said Mr. Durbin. There can be no sound community life unless the people who take part in it can be made sure that they will be located in one spot long enough to build up ties with their neighbors and with the land they work.

In Chilton County, a Farm Debt Adjustment committee composed of E. R. Piper, Willie Hamilton, and Jodie N. Cofer, which is working to show landlords and tenants alike that it is to their common interest to have agreements which will permit improvement of houses and land, permit tenants to make long-time plans to comply with the AAA and soil conservation program, and work for betterment of existence generally.

"When people know that their ties to their land is secure," said Mr. Durbin, they will have more heart to work with their neighbors. The one thing leads to the other. While the definite goal of FSA in promoting community organization is to form purchasing and marketing cooperatives, this activity looks beyond mere buying and selling to a plan of work for their lives in every respect—for social, recreational, educational fellowship as well as profit benefits in buying and selling.

"These two things taken together seem to be the most practical expression we have yet found for the broad aims of the Farm Security Administration."

Mark Does Not Believe Joe Means It

Joe Jones, well-known, versatile and widely quoted editor of The Covington News romps all over Mark Tucker for his editorial last week in which he undertook to show that in the captive mines shut down, a greater responsibility rested on the owners of the mines, who hold millions of dollars in defense contracts, than on the men who dig the coal, and that there was not enough difference between a CLOSED shop and a UNION shop to justify the owners of the mines' refusal to grant the CLOSED shop, at a critical hour like this—especially when they, the mine owners, are obligated to deliver defense materials to the Government as fast as possible.

Says Joe: Mark L. Tucker, the able editor of The Chilton County News leaves himself wide open in an article last week captioned, "It Takes Two To Make a Contract." Editor Tucker is taking up for the labor unions and actually goes so far as to say, "there is nothing wrong about the CLOSED shop." We just can't believe he meant that remark. According to the Constitution of the United States, the creed of the Pilgrims and the suffering and hardships our pioneer forefathers endured to create this great free country no man, union or organization has the right to deny honest work to any American citizen, regardless of anything that might be said to the contrary.

For editor Tucker's information the following eye-opener was given this writer from the mouths of three CIO members in Birmingham no later than last week. Here is what they said verbatim: "There are just two kinds of people belonging to the CIO . . . grafters and suckers, and we're the suckers."

These three men said they wanted to work and would work if the picketers would let them. They also said their families needed money, food, clothing and other necessities of life.

We believe in organized labor, but CLOSED shops . . . never. Watch the News-Digest, C. I. O. mouthpiece in Birmingham, copy Mark's editorial and comment on it. It's right down their alley.

Although Mark Tucker holds no brief for the CIO or John L. Lewis, or The News Digest, he meant every word he said about there being nothing wrong about the principle of the CLOSED shop.

He organized the first Central Trades Council, A. F. of L., in Montgomery nearly forty years ago, and was its first president. A half century's experience and observation convinces him that Organized Labor, and the principle of the CLOSED shop has contributed more towards the accomplishment of the present American way of Life, than any one other influence. He is inclined to say all other influences, combined.

It is true, there are a few industrialists and workers of large numbers of men who are really interested in the welfare of their workers, and more of them are learning that it is to their best interest to see that their workers are given adequate wages, and provided with clean, wholesome surroundings, but they are decidedly in the minority. Anyone can learn this fact by exploration of industrial districts where the Closed Union shop prevails, and where Tom, Dick and Harry are employed by a boss who wants the "cheapest" man he can get. (Like the three CIO 'ers mentioned by Brother Jones).

In Germany there are no CLOSED shops, and no Labor Unions—a mechanic is told where to go, what to do after he gets there, and what his wages will be—he has no choice in the matter. Here, if a man wants work, he goes to the plant and states his case, if it is a Union Shop, he is asked if he belongs to the union, under which the plant is being operated, he says he does not, and is told that he will have to join the Union before he can be put to work; he says: "I will not do that, I don't believe in Unions," and lets his wife and children go hungry.

Mark does not believe that Joe Jones, although he talks that way, would be willing to send soldiers along with that man to that plant to see that he was put to work without joining the union when that man was unwilling to subscribe to the rules and regulations governing the physical operations of that plant, where he was seeking employment.

If Joe were suddenly deprived of every piece of equipment that goes to make up the Covington News plant, that was made by union men in a CLOSED shop—he would be unable to get out another issue of the paper; if Joe were to get sick he would have to send for a doctor, who would come from one of the "righted" CLOSED shops in the State—the Alabama Medical Society; if Joe were to grow suddenly worse and decide that he should make a will, he would send for a lawyer, who would come from another CLOSED shop—the Alabama Bar Association; and if Joe were to die his folks would need for the preacher who would come from a CLOSED shop, regardless of the denomination he represented.

The United States of America is a Union—composed of forty-eight States (local unions)—operating under the principle of the CLOSED shop. No territorial political unit may join this Closed shop Union until the citizens of that unit are found to be worthy, and the unit as a whole cannot become a member of the Closed shop Union until it has qualified by pledging through its delegated representatives to abide by all the rules, regulations, and to OBEY the Constitution of the CLOSED shop Union.

Joe, there are CLOSED shop unions all around us: the Democratic Party is a CLOSED shop union. You, nor any one else, can go to the polls next May and participate in the Democratic primary election, hoping to benefit through its good offices, until you have first JOINED the Democratic Party.

We have just received a new line of Florshiem Shoes. Come in and see them at Chicago Sales Co.

the Party, paid your Poll Tax (your union dues) registered as a Democrat (your TRAVELING CARD) showing you are a GOOD STAND-ING.

If you have done all these things Joe, then you are a member of a CLOSED shop union—in good standing.

Mark repeats—there is nothing wrong with the CLOSED shop. And adds: The Jews and Pagans were unable to destroy Christianity, in spite of the fact there was ONE Judas.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

We have received a letter from L. D. Cook, Honolulu . . . it is very interesting and but for its length we would print it here verbatim. . . anyway he would like for us to report that he is getting along fine and will be back in the good old U. S. A. Jan. 1, 1943. . . acustic accidents.

Two state highway patrolmen, a Navy recruiting officer and Lawrence Duffy with their heads together on the streets Friday afternoon . . . in a foursome like that, not telling who lost the argument, the outcome is . . . making the rounds last week . . . postman Zebbie Gray . . . didn't find out the why, guess he just wanted to know where everyone lives . . . Bernice Vance in town again . . . good to see him about now and then . . .

The fire at Luther Foshee's last Friday afternoon must have confused the city employees in our part of town . . . shortly after the whistle blew here comes the Mayor tearing down the street in the city dump truck and right behind the mayor was Ress Driver in the mayor's sedan . . . don't know how come both to grab the wrong bus. Chas. Wade and Frank Gandy flew to New Orleans to the football game Saturday afternoon.

Had you noticed we were pushed off the front page this week? . . . kind of think that the picture at the head of the column has something to do with it . . . but from now on you can look for us almost anywhere . . . you never can tell. . .

The lady at the Theatre the other night . . . the heroine said, "well I've burned my bridges," and the lady laughed out loud . . . we just wondered what the lady thought the heroine said . . . it sounded like the same to us.

We noticed in Sunday's paper that Mallie White was entertained at the Birmingham Country Club last Saturday night. . . it wasn't our Mallie, however, it was a Miss Mallie of the Magic City.

Durwood Teel had some cards printed listing the County numbers of automobile tags for Alabama recently and has received requests by the dozens for copies of the cards. One coming from as far away as Ft. Myers, Fla. . . here's something that you didn't know . . . you have seen the beautiful window at Goodway Service Store this week . . . well, Mr. Mosley, the manager, says that every Goodway Service Store in the U. S. A. has the same scene in its window at the same time . . . boy, page John Page, wonder if he knows that Mrs. Page took top honors at the drawing of Mullins & Scott last Sat-eve. . . $100 smackers . . . um-um . . . congratulations, Mrs. Page.

Geraldine Hollis is being featured this week at Alabama College, Montevallo in "The Bourgeois Gentleman" . . . a comedy ballet. . . Coffee salesman in Clyde Mims the other morning asked Clyde how his coffee was percolating . . . sorry, it struck me as funny. Burt Mullins is due a whole chunk of credit for the Kiwanis Section in the News this week . . . he worked hard and should be congratulated.

That rumor we heard a couple of weeks ago about Jack Hayes running for Tax Collector seems to be on the up-and-up . . . from all we can learn he is really going to make a race for the office. If Jack runs he will give someone something to think about . . . he's popular, and clean . . . they can't throw any stones at Jack . . . and too, he'd make a dog-gone good Tax Collector.

We have just received a new line of Florshiem Shoes. Come in and see them at Chicago Sales Co.

CLANTON KIWANIS CLUB

A Letter From The Club President

TO THE PEOPLE OF CHILTON COUNTY:

As the present year draws to a close, we present you with this special KIWANIS EDITION OF THE CHILTON COUNTY NEWS AND UNION-BANNER.

I should like to say something about all of the objectives and activities of the Kiwanis Club, but since our nation is in the throes of various crises, and the revival of ancient savagery is with us, we might say, "WHAT CAN ONE MAN DO AGAINST THE WORLD?"

You must believe that you can help bring about a better world. A good society is produced only by good individuals. If you are an eminent statesman, your environment is large; if you are obscure, your environment is small. In the one case you can do much; in the other, you can do little. But you can always do something.

We need, each of us--to make a serious and determined effort toward something better than the present. There must be the hope of a world with less cruelty and suffering, and there must be a firm will to do whatever is possible toward bringing it into existence.

It is conceded that the lack of emphasis on the religious sense has brought the world to the edge of destruction. Today, as never before, prayer is a binding necessity in the lives of men and nations. If the power of prayer is again released and used in the lives of common men and women; if the spirit declares its aims boldly, there is yet hope that our prayers for a better world will be answered.

MADDOX WRITES ON HISTORY

OF CHILTON COUNTY SCHOOLS

H. R. MADDOX

County Superintendent of Education

BURNING OFF DITCH

BANKS, FENCE ROWS, AND

FIELD BORDERS COSTLY

Burning off ditch banks, fence rows, and field borders to destroy hibernating boll weevils does more harm than good when it comes to providing food and cover for farm game and bird life, says Mr. A. L. Harrell, district conservationist of the north central conservation district. Farmers seeking latest information on the best ways to control the weevil were urged by Mr. Harrell to get in touch with their county agent.

Maintaining a good growth of shrubs and plants along field borders, ditch banks, and similar areas as a place where insect-eating birds can find food and shelter is far more practical than trying to burn these areas to destroy the hibernating weevils, Mr. Harrell said. Plenty of birds on the farm destroy far more insects than burning these areas, Mr. Harrell explained.

"The boll weevil," Mr. Harrell explained, "has 60 known bird enemies. Forty-one kinds of birds eat the cotton worm and 67 the white grub worm. A single robin observed for 17 days by scientists ate 60 to 60 cutworms daily."

The bird population on the farm can easily be increased, says Mr. Harrell, by seeding adapted shrubs in unproductive field borders and by protecting the vegetation from fire. Lespedeza, small grain, and row crops

Records in the office of the Chilton County Board of Education go back to 1920. At that time Howard L. Forshew was County Superintendent and W. J. Billingsley, J. E. Littlejohn, L. A. Calloway, J. J. Dykes, and J. L. Vines were members of the Board of Education.

There were seventy-four white schools and one hundred sixty-teachers in the county. Enrolled in the elementary schools, which at that time included grades 1-8, were 5595 pupils; only 111 high school pupils were enrolled. There was no school bus transportation.

Twenty-one years later there are only thirty-four schools, a loss in schools of exactly forty. To replace these schools are forty school buses. There are one hundred seventy-one teachers. The elementary enrollment, now grades 1-6, is 3,822; the high school is 1,880. The combined elementary and high school enrollment is just four less than twenty-one years ago. The elementary enrollment has dropped 1,773; the high school has increased 1,769.

A comparison of the schools of the two years is interesting. Although there are practically the same number of pupils in 1941 as in 1920, children in 1941 attended school 224,492 more days than in 1920. This can be accounted for a longer term, school bus transportation, and more interest in education. While there were only 111 high school students in 1920, there were 1,880 in 1941. Today Chilton County High School has almost five times as many pupils as were enrolled from the county in 1920.

A striking fact is found on examining the training of teachers. In 1920 sixty-two teachers held third grade certificates, fifty-one second grade certificates and twenty-four first grade certificates. Only twenty-three teachers held certificates higher than a first grade. In 1941 there are no third grade teachers, and only three second grade teachers; seventy teachers are college graduates; only twenty three teachers have less than two years college training. Twenty-one years ago nearly all teachers secured certificates by passing a written teachers' examination. Today certificates are secured by taking and passing certain prescribed courses in teacher training institutions.

The average annual salary for male teachers in 1921 was the handsome sum of $317.70. Females received only $272.20. Today in Chilton County men and women with the same training and experience receive the same salary. The average salary for elementary teachers is $552.30 and for high school teachers $888.62. This represents an improvement, but it should not be forgotten that on this sum teachers have to dress as befits their position and many attend school during the summer. Elementary teachers in Chilton County in 1941 received only fourteen dollars a month more than WPA workers. Four teachers resigned from their positions to accept other employment paying from three to four times as much as they had received as teachers. Many teachers have continued to teach although they could have made more than twice as much in other work.

Transportation of school children came with consolidation of schools. The number of discontinued corresponds almost exactly with the number of buses. In this county in 1941 six of every ten school children rode a bus to school. Not one child, however, was injured while riding a bus. The cost of transportation for each pupil per year was $6.86. This figure which includes depreciation, was lower than for any county in the state in 1940. It is $3.96 lower than the cost for each pupil in Chilton County in 1940. The cost of transportation per pupil per day was five and one-half cents.

In 1920 all textbooks had to be purchased by the student. Today texts for the first three grades are furnished to the counties by the state. And there is a much greater variety especially in readers. Formerly a child had only one or two readers for the year. Elementary children soon memorized their books. Today a child in the first grade may read ten or more books during his first year.

The objectives of education have changed somewhat during the last 20 years. There is much less emphasis on the memorizing of facts found in books. It is felt that in addition to training the mind it is important that good habits and attitudes be developed. Good health and health habits are primary objectives. The child is given vocational education to fit him for a job. Girls are trained in homemaking. No longer is a person educated only for individual success, for if democratic government is to be a success every individual must be educated to consider the welfare of all. Therefore we have the emphasis on good citizenship in all schools.

Alabama leads all other States in the United States in 4-H Club enrollment.

planting in the fields give a variety of food for wildlife while field borders which are usually planted to shrubs and lespedeza sericea provide excellent shelter or a safety zone.

Lespedeza sericea, Mr. Harrell explained, is one of the best plants to use on field and woodland borders as it grows well even in shade and is hardy enough to permit the use of such areas as turn rows for work animals and farm machinery. Also it does a splendid job of protecting these areas against erosion.

There are more than 700 farms in Beat 4.

WHAT FOREST PRESERVATION MEANS TO FARMERS OF CHILTON COUNTY

With the conviction that forest lands can make a distinct contribution to the problem of farm adjustment and farm security which will materially contribute to the advancement of rural living conditions, and after making a careful study of timberlands adjacent to agricultural holdings, the State Department of Conservation, Division of Forestry, has formed a forestry district which comprises the following counties: Autauga, Chilton, Lowndes, Elmore, Dallas, Montgomery and Butler. J. Hilton Watson will serve as District Forester with headquarters in Montgomery. Mr. Watson has served as District Forester in Tallapoosa, Coosa, and Elmore counties for the past two years. To broaden the scope of this program and give it added impetus, each county and timberland owner should pay their share of forest management and forest fire protection cost.

The major portion of Chilton county's revenue is derived from its soil and water. In the spread of civilization rivers have always played an important part. First, as lanes of exploration and later, as highways of trade and water power. The Alabama River has added useful revenue to Chilton county; however, this river took toll from our greatest natural resource, "timber." The valleys now covered with water were once covered by stands of mixed oak and pine. Those familiar with the timber stands remember that many small mills had started lumber production about the first of the twentieth century, and lumber sold for as little as five dollars per thousand.

Chilton county should now take inventory of what it has, especially in timber, and determine what to do about it. We might as well take off our rose-tinted glasses and face facts. Chilton county has 713 square miles of land surface, 32 persons per square mile, and approximately three thousand and five hundred farms. Fifty-two per cent of these farms are operated by owners; 54 per cent of the timberland is owned by farmers; and 26 per cent of woodland is not pasture. A recent survey of the county by the Alabama Industrial Development Board reveals that "No more sawmills are needed in Chilton county. What timber remains will be needed for local use." The present forest products now yield the owner $11.00 per annum per hundred acres of land. This shows that landowners are only getting eleven cents per acre per year from woodlands under present conditions. These conditions were brought about due to lack of forest fire protection and bad cutting practices.

There are 232,210 acres of forest land in Chilton county, of which 121,730 acres is on farms. Timber is just as much a crop as any other farm commodity, and will yield the owner a yearly revenue comparable to any other farm crop if properly handled. In order for any county to prosper each natural resource should yield its share of revenue. In 1938 Chilton county had 43 sawmills in operation, seven retail lumber yards, and eight veneer and planing mills. A majority of these are gone. At one time Riverdale was a thriving lumber town. Weeds now grow where the mill stood. Timber is a renewable resource but it must be protected from fire to get the greatest growth in the last number of years. Let us all join hands and cooperate with the Clanton Kiwanis Club's fire control program, the State Division of Forestry and each other to stop forest fires in Chilton county.

OAT PRODUCTION SET AT 9,000 ACRES

Agricultural workers of Chilton county believe that farmers will exceed the goal originally set up for this county to reach in oat production. The goal set by the State USDA Defense Board was 9,000 acres, but it is felt by the local board that Chilton county will have a minimum of 10,000 acres in 1942.

In exceeding this goal farmers are aiding the defense program greatly as feed as well as food is important in this all-out effort. By planting greater acreage to oats farmers are reducing the labor requirements on the far land insuring good feed supplies says P. H. Smith, County Agent.

Chilton county farmers should continue the drive to plant every acre possible so that the goal set by the local defense board will be reached. With the general rains of this last week end, farmers who have not planted oats should be able to do so. Two acres of oats for each horse and mule in the county is needed to reach the above goal. Are you doing your part?

COMMUNITY MEETINGS HELD

Community meetings are being held all over Chilton county this week for the convenience of farmers in signing their farms to produce Food for Freedom, reports P. H. Smith, County Agent.

An increase in production of such foods as dairy products, pork, beef and eggs are needed for National Defense purposes. Large quantities of these foods are needed to feed our increasing army and navy and to send some to other countries. Food is just as important to our soldiers and sailors as the guns and ships we are making. The same is true of our Allies. This food must be produced by the American farmers.

In line with the above, farmers are being asked to sign a sheet stating how much of the desired foods will be produced on their respective farms in 1942. This information is urgently needed because if the intentions are not high enough, our efforts will have to be increased. The signing of this intention sheet does not bind one to do all he thinks he can do at this time. Farmers will not be penalized for not producing their full-assigned goals but it is expected that a great majority of them will and that many will produce more than their goals.

All Chilton county farmers who have not already done so are urged to make a special effort to sign up their farm at the very earliest opportunity.

Appeal Is Made For Methodist Children As "White Christmas" Sunday Dec. 21 Nears

With "White Christmas" Sunday, December 21, drawing steadily closer, the Board of Directors of the Methodist Children's Home at Selma is again reminding Methodist of Alabama and West Florida of their obligation to the children in the Home at Selma whose care they have assumed, and the "White Christmas" campaign to raise a fund of $35,000 to provide the needs of that institution during 1942.

In its recent Appeal, the Board,

UNCLE SAM'S SAILORS GO MARKETING

When Uncle Sam's sailors go marketing, they always return with a full market bag," says Dr. Bryan de Garmo Bryan (pictured insert). Dr. Bryan should know as he is chairman of a committee of more than twenty of the county's outstanding food experts who have been appointed to create a new official Navy cook book.

Dr. Bryan's committee has spent more than six months testing recipes for Uncle Sam's Navy men. Large groups of civilian athletes and amateurs are already the recruited sailors in the world.

Officers in both the Navy and the Naval Reserve also are offered opportunities to receive free training to become expert cooks and bakers. "There is always a demand for good Navy-trained cooks and bakers in civilian life," said Dr. Bryan. "In New York City, for example, the usual wage for an expert cook or baker is $40 to $50 a week and $75 is the average weekly salary for chefs at the best hotels and restaurants. In addition to training in cooking and baking, the U. S. Navy and Naval Reserve offer training opportunities in nearly fifty other different skilled trades and vocations. Any patriotic and ambitious young man who wants to serve his country and build his future should look into the opportunities offered for service in our new "Two-Ocean" Navy.

throughout the coming year, largely from the Christmas collection.

"Who can hope to find greater satisfaction than that which flows from having done something big and withal quite at Christmas for children made destitute by a fate which deprived them of one or both parents? One will find in his generosity to orphan children a peculiarly poignant delight," says the appeal in part. "There is something indefinable in the satisfaction to be derived from one's support of orphan children. Whatever else we do this year, let's keep Christmas for the children."

White Christmas campaign headquarters are now open at 1220 First National Building, Birmingham, with Mrs. O. H. Horton in charge, where supplies and full information may be obtained, and officers of churches and Sunday Schools are advised to get in touch with this office.

Dr. R. J. Mills, Superintendent of the Home, asks that all funds be sent and all checks made payable to "Methodist Children's Home" at Selma, and he also urges that all preliminary arrangements for this "White Christmas" offering in all church departments be made right away.

FOURTEEN COUNTIES GET HOUSING FUNDS

4-H CLUB MEMBERS REALIZE VALUE OF PRODUCING HIGH GRADE BEEF

The Chilton County 4-H Beef Calf Club is making an excellent start in their beef show-calf feeding projects, reports M. R. Glascock, Assistant County Agent.

This year, more than ever before, 4-H Club members are realizing the value of producing the high grade beef that the market demands. The "Beef Calf Club" has twenty-five choice feeders that were picked from the best herds in Alabama. These animals are being fed a well-balanced and well planned ration. Each animal is fed and cared for regularly by the 4-H Club owner.

These industrious Club members not only receive training in the most effective methods of fattening beef animals, but also have the advantage of receiving show animal prices for their calves in the spring when their project work is completed. Also, each club member is required to arrange for financing his own project and at show and sale time learns how beef animals are graded and sold in central markets. In addition to the training members receive, each one feels like and cash compensation that the Club is—and he is—doing his part in our National "Food for Freedom" program.

In April, 1942, the Chilton County 4-H Beef Calf Club is going to hold a Fat Stock Show in Clanton. This show will not only give local citizens a chance to see what can be done right here at home by our own boys, but will set a higher standard for all Chilton county beef cattle producers to try to reach.

The local banks and local merchants have given and are giving these industrious club members all support that they possibly can. The county show has only been mentioned, not publicly announced, and one of the local merchants has voluntarily donated $25.00 as prize money for the county grand champion winner.

CHILTON FARMERS ASKED TO INCREASE MILK PRODUCTION

So that Alabama's 1942 production goals of approximately a billion and a half pounds of milk—12 per cent over 1941 estimated output—can be reached Chilton county farmers are asked to redouble their efforts to increase milk production on every farm where such an increase is practical. Chilton county's goal for 1942 is 30,000,000 pounds.

One of the vital requirements in the plans of the farm defense program to defend democracy at home and abroad is the production of more milk. This is essential because the demand for dairy products, both for domestic uses and export, promises to break all previous records, according to Chilton county defense board members. Export requirements through June, 1942, are estimated at about 250 million pounds of American cheese, 15 million cases of evaporated milk, and 200 million pounds of dried skim milk. It was added.

"Increases in milk production are more than justified by current prices for dairy products," P. H. Smith, County Agent, stressed. Dairy prices are now above parity and are expected to continue at parity or better for a year or more. As an added safeguard, the Secretary of Agriculture has guaranteed the full use of available funds to support cheese, evaporated milk, and dry skim milk prices at 85 per cent of parity until December 31, 1942. F. W. Burns, Extension Dairyman, Auburn, points out that the dairy cow can be counted as a partner in the defense program providing she is properly fed and managed.

The following feeding suggestions may be helpful in maintaining maximum economical production:

- (1) Good roughages lower the cost of producing milk. Feed all the cow will clean up, part of it being legume hay.
- (2) If possible include corn or sorghum silage in the ration. This will lower the cost of milk production.
- (3) Feed a balanced grain ration using as much home grown grain as possible.
- (4) Feed grain according to production: One pound of grain to each two and one-half to three pounds of milk.
- (5) When pastures get short feed hay or silage and grain before production begins to drop.
- (6) Milk is 87 per cent water—see that the cows have plenty of it at all times.
- (7) Cows need salt—one pound per hundred weight in ration and a block of salt available for the cows is generally recommended.
- (8) Provide shelter for your cows. This will save much valuable feed.
- (9) Study the available feeds. The cheapest are not always the most economical.
- (10) Study your cows' likes and dislikes and cater to them when possible.

SPECIAL PASTURE AIDS IN CONTROL OF KIDNEY WORMS

Good hog prices this year make it all the more important that Chilton county farmers provide a special pig pasture in which swine kidney worm eggs are killed by sunlight, heat and drying, says P. H. Smith, County Agent. This precaution gets the fall pig crop off to a strong start and helps reduce the estimated $2,500,000 annual loss to southern farmers from this costly internal parasite.

If sows about to farrow are placed on a new pasture with a 5-foot bare strip around the edge and a 30-foot bare strip at one end for shelters, feed hoppers, waterers, creep with self-feeders for pigs, and feeding pen for the sow—the suckling pigs, most vulnerable to attack, can escape serious infection.

Effectiveness of this arrangement results from the fact that kidney worm eggs, eliminated by the thousands in urine of infested sows, must have shade, moisture, and reasonably high temperatures to hatch worms that develop to an infective stage. Before sows generally urinate close to where the pigs are feeding, most of the eggs will be discharged out in the open and killed by sunlight, heat, and drying if feeders are located on the bare areas.

Otherwise, pigs running on pasture or in hog lot with sows become infested by swallowing worms on contaminated forage, when they root in litter containing worms, or when they lie down where worms are present.

When infective worms are swallowed or enter swine through the skin, they get into the blood and are carried to liver, lungs and other organs. They often hollow out tunnels in the kidney fat and are eliminated in the urine by way of the bladder.

In post-mortem examinations involving 63,000 hogs raised without regard to sanitation, 92 per cent of the livers and all the kidneys were condemned as unfit for food because of kidney worm infestations. Where the special pasture system was used, the litters were more uniform in size, thrifter, and practically free from infestation.

In addition to causing losses under meat-inspection procedures, kidney worm infestation retards growth of pigs, causes a waste of feed, paves the way for diseases, and is largely responsible for the death and unthriftness of young pigs on many farms throughout the South, contends Mr. Smith.

There was more than $265,000 in cash paid to Chilton county farmers in 1940 under the Agricultural Conservation Program. It is estimated that $250,000 will be paid in cash and $42,000 in cotton stamps in 1941.

Wherever there is a human being, I see God-given rights inherent in that being, whatever may be the sex or complexion.—William Lloyd Garrison.

There are more than 23,000,000 bales of American cotton in the warehouses in America now. This is enough cotton to last for over two years if no more cotton was produced for the next two years.

Farmers will vote again on cotton marketing quotas December 13 of this year. Marketing quotas must be approved by at least two-thirds of the voters to be in effect in 1942.

There can be no government on cotton unless marketing quotas are in effect.

Truckers Warned Against Overloading

Montgomery, Ala.—Shippers and truckers who "load 'em to the limit, and then some" will find a hard time in traversing the Alabama highways for the laws do not make exemptions to suit private emergencies. This also goes for any other trucking law violation. Alabama Highway Patrolmen are attending these matters.

The above statement is borne out by the fact that several truck drivers have recently been brought into the headquarters of the State Department of Public Safety and cases made against them, their trucks being tied up in the meantime.

The Highway Patrol in dealing firmly in these matters, has no desire to "make it hard on truckers." The Patrol really regrets to see the truckers, by law evasion—"make it hard on themselves."

Things I Never Knew Until Now ABOUT THE U. S. NAVY

(By WALTER WINCHELL)

That no matter what you think about the superior officer who barks a command at you—you will never get into trouble if you remember the most important word in any sailor's dictionary to wit: "Obey." And the "proverb" every officer or enlisted man has on the tip of his fangs: "Growl you may—but go you must!" ... The Navy never calls newcomers "rookies" ... They are "Boots" ... The Navy has lifted its long famous recruiting slogan, "Join the Navy and See the World." ... It is now: "Join the Navy and Serve Your Country!" ... The reason they call a battleship "she" ... Because she carries a lot of paint to keep up her appearance, she always has a crowd of sailors around her and she makes a heluva lotta noise in an argument." ... Secretary of the Navy Knox (he is 67) is the first Sec'y to inspect a submarine while it was submerged.

Our sailors like their women tall and willowy. They are not fussy whether they are blondes, brunettes or redheads—according to a recent poll... American sailor's pay is said to be the highest in the world. Some have heard that Brazilian officers are paid taller wages than any navy's. The Navy code books are bound in lead covers so that in event of capture by an enemy—the books can be tossed overboard and sunk. ... Sailors call Naval Reserve Officers "metalmen" because "they have silver in their hair, gold on their sleeves and lead in their pants!" (Who, me?)

There are sixteen American Indians in the U. S. Navy. ... The reason the Navy is reluctant about accepting draftees is that it takes more than a year, sometimes two, to train landlubbers for naval warfare. ... A recruit is given an outfit free. It costs the Navy $118. ... After that outfit wears out the sailor has to buy. ... The legend that sailors part from five to eight cents per pack for cigarettes is true only when their ship is on the seas. ... Midshipmen at Annapolis are not permitted to chew gum. It not only that, but get this. ... When they enter the Navy Academy—they are handed a condensed version of Emily Post's book of etiquette, and they have to study it. ... What! No drinking? Fevensakes!

The over-age destroyers we gave England had the modern bunks instead of the old-fashioned hammocks. But the British put back the hammocks because the bunks made them seasick! ... Tip to newspapermen and other writers: Sailors, tars, seamen and blue-jackets will like you a lot more if you call them anything but gods. ... Just as policemen prefer being called officers instead of cops, California, New York and Texas contribute more men to the Navy than the rest of the nation.

That 19-gun salvo (every gun on the ship) cost Uncle Samson a mere $2,750. ... The great battleship, like a real champion—didn't blink longer than half-a-second and then proceeded on its grateful way... Captain O. M. Hustvedt and his Executive Officer, Commander A. G. Shepard, are exactly the kind of American naval officers you always imagined—dignified and distinguished gentlemen.

Contrary to popular belief a sailor does not have to salute an officer on board ship when they meet. An officer must be saluted only the first time a seaman sees him during the day. Only the captain must be saluted at all times. ... Spectators at the Naval Academy's intercollegiate boxing matches must attend in formal attire. The purpose is to cut down on the heavy demand for tickets. ... Martha Raye of the screen recently got word from the crew of the U. S. Submarine Narwhal (in Hawaii) that they had named her "the girl with whom we'd most like to be submerged."

In the "Navy Blues" flicker Ann Sheridan, in a sword dance, used a sword that belonged to Admiral Farragut. It was loaned to Ann by her stand-in, Minna Farragut, a great niece of the naval hero. ... Incidentally, after the War Between the States, Farragut was ordered to Europe, in the steam frigate, Franklin, and his wife went along. At Constantinople they boarded a tender for a short cruise in the Black Sea. Mrs. Farragut sat herself down in the extreme bow, blocking the pilot's vision. He asked the Admiral's aide to persuade Mrs. Admiral to move her chair. ... She refused to budge—so the pilot called two husky seamen and had them remove her forcibly. ... Later, when Farragut heard about it, he scolded his wife with: "Now, Judy, how often have I told you that at sea you are not the boss."

PATES CHAPEL

We are sorry to report that we still have a few sick in our community but it seems that our sick in last weeks report are all doing fine.

We are sorry to know that the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Maddox and took their infant daughter, but we know the angels needed a little rose bud from our community to complete another beautiful place in heaven, but there will always be a vacant place in the home, but it is heaven's gain. Mother is doing fine.

We are sorry to report that our pastor, Rev. Nix, could not fill his appointment Sunday and Sunday night on account of being confined to his bed with flu. But we hope for him a speedy recovery and hope he will be up and about in a few days.

Be. Atchinson filled Bro. Nix's place Sunday and delivered two wonderful messages, which everybody enjoyed.

There was not as large a crowd at Sunday School Sunday morning as there was at B. Y. P. U. and church Sunday night, yet not forget about our Sunday School. We are always glad to have you at both services.

Mrs. Nora Cook was the guest of Mrs. Maude Hayes Sunday.

Mrs. Mae Hayes and two daughters were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Maddox.

Mrs. Leonard Porter spent the day with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Odie Price Sunday.

We would like for each and every one to come to church each Sunday and Sunday night.

SARDIS

Sunday and Sunday night were our regular preaching day. In spite of the cold weather there was a large crowd at each service and we had two wonderful sermons delivered to us.

We had some visitors to our church and we invite everyone out to our service. We still have Sunday School every Sunday morning and B. Y. P. U. every Sunday night. We need your presence and we need your prayers.

Wednesday, December 17, is the date set to meet and clean off the cemetery at Sardis. Everyone who has friends and loved ones buried there are requested to be present. Remember the date.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, take up thy cross and follow me.—Mark 10:21.

All For One, And One For All

Japan's treacherous attack Sunday has solidified the people of the United States, as perhaps nothing else could have done.

Regardless of the different opinions as to foreign policy, and the conduct of the National Defense Program, and a hundred and one non essentials, the whole people are as ONE behind the Commander-in-Chief NOW, and he can count on them for everything that will take to give, to win, to prosecute this WAR—and it is WAR—to be terminated only when the fangs and claws of the hyena of the Pacific have been drawn.

Political assets in Alabama and the Nation have been frozen for the time being, to give, to win, to prosecute time for petty political bickering and sparring for selfish political preferment; but it is NOW the duty of every man woman and child to give their every thought, attention and time to the present needs of our country.

ALL FOR ONE, AND ONE FOR ALL.

Political Assets Frozen As Is

The spring campaign for governor came to a close Sunday around 2 p. m. It was around 2 p. m. when most of Alabama was at Sunday dinner, that news of the cobra strike came.

The campaign was to have extended until early next week, as the renewal of the war season approached maturity.

But the sunbeams of the Rising Sun Empire interceded.

Candidates for governor when the race ended Sunday were, as best warranted, Alabamians. Among them were: World War I colonel named David Bibb Graves and a Barbour County legislator named Chas. Sparks.

Which one of the two was victor was not immediately determined, and, indeed, there was scant curiosity about the matter.

The average Alabamian felt that discussion or even mention of something so insignificant as a governor's race at a time when Californians are executing bombs with their sunshine was nothing less than downright obnoxious.

Although there was no immediate report of it, the presumption seems well-informed that candidates for governor, as well as those for the other state offices, were discerning enough to recognize that there would be no opportunity at all to get the ears of the electorate on any issue unless it was integrated with war to the knife, the knife to the hilt, against those little jaundiced beggars beyond the sea. To Alabamians everything was pennyweight beside the yearning for news or something about a sea of flames in Tokyo.

Prohibition? Merit System? Surplus? What are they?

The status quo was frozen tight as an igloo.

The voters no longer wanted to read campaign platforms—unless one reads something like sending the B-19 over Tokyo and Yokohama with bombs and leaflets promising more and more of the former.—Grover C. Hall's Capitalisms in Alabama Journal.

"Where is Mason and Dixon Line?" asks Raul Cessna in Christian Science Monitor. We damn the Graves and Dixon Line runs through "the First Monday after the Second Tuesday in January, 1943."

Slavery is slavery, regardless of whether the method used is capitalist, legalized coercion, or human chattels and the lash.

How many "shopping days" is it till Christmas for the family who hasn't anything to shop with?

Christmas may be just around the "corner," but what we need is "something" with which to knock the corner off.

And now, another "cooling off period" being discussed in Washington. Production of stoves is to be restricted.

MORAL ECHOS

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

While standing on the street corner waiting for the lights to change a friend came by and dashed right into the street. Catching him by the arm I pulled him back remarking as I did so, "Marshall, you will live longer if you will walk with the street lights and not against them." That statement is true in more ways than one. There are danger signals all along the road of health, and one must walk on without paying any attention to them we endanger our health. There are danger signals that tell us that we must stop in order to preserve our morals and if we rush into the ways of sin we suffer. There are danger signals of happiness and success, and it pays for us to be governed by them. We will not only live longer by walking with the lights and not against them, but it will be far better for us in every phase of life to do the same.

I knew a young man who was working in a store one day when sweeping the floor he found a nice little sum of money. He picked it up and hurried back to the office of the manager. When he had turned it in the manager asked, "Charlie, why didn't you keep that money and say nothing about it?" "Because," replied the honest young fellow, "I would have had to live with a thief the balance of my life." I think that the most awful thing about dishonesty, or any other sin, is that those who are guilty must live with themselves after the sin is committed. It must be awful to live with a thief, with a drunkard, with a whoremonger and the like. The memory will run back to the crime and the guilty must say to himself, "I am the thief, I am the rascal, I am the adulterer." A clean record in life is worth more than millions in silver and gold.

While riding along on one of the fast trains going North in California, I saw two levels of the land. One was down on the shore of the Pacific and the other was far to the East on a tall mountain peak. The sight of these two levels brought into my mind the other two levels of human life. One level is the brute level and the other level is the elevation of the spirit in God. Man left to himself, to follow out his own desires, will descend to the brute level of living. Man left to the ideals of God, will be drawn upward to the higher levels. We can drag the body and the soul down to the brute level, or we can lift the body and the soul up to the high spiritual level. To which level you are going depends on the road you are on. One goes down to brutality and the other up to God.

While attending the Ashram a lady out of Kentucky arose and made request for prayers for a preacher she knew who was real sick. He was thinking and did not know it. As quick as a flash, Dr. E. Stanley Jones asked of her, "My good woman, to which one of the ten thousand in America do you refer?" Since I have been sitting in the pew I have discovered that there are many preachers who are all mixed up in their thinking and do not seem to know it. Peradventure, I am the one who is all mixed up in my thinking and do not know it. This I know, it is rather hard to settle as to who is mixed up in his thinking. I am quite certain that every preacher should think up in his thinking, read himself to fullness, pray himself into a fervent heat and then set himself on fire with the Holy Spirit, and then go out by faith to scatter that fire. It hurts to have so many all mixed up in their thinking and do not know it.

In recent years the medical world has discovered that there are certain patients who are Allergic to certain things. Hay Fever is produced from this source. Indigestion comes from this, and many other ailments of the body are caused by the Allergic reaction to Shrimp. The odor and the sight of Shrimp would make this man deeply sick to say nothing of his sickness when he ate it through mistake. Had it ever occurred to you that when God made the nature of man, he made him so that we would be Allergic to sin? Man was made by God and he was created for God, and anything against God, makes him sick of soul, that comes into his nature that is. Unless the inner voice that cries out against sin, has been choked and crushed, there is soul sickness at the sight of sin, to say nothing about when sin comes into the heart. It is sin that has made this a very sick world, and it is all because God made our natures to be Allergic to sin.

Tomorrow, December 13th, is the 150th anniversary of the ratification of the Bill of Rights.

The South On The March

State Senator Karl Harrison, of Columbiana, stirred Calhoun County Young Democrats to enthusiasm Monday night with an address in which he declared that now is the time for the South to have an opportunity to lead this section of the country upward to a place of economic and political leadership in the nation.

Citing the historic place of the Democratic Party as the party of the people, and pointing to the wealth of human and natural resources here, Harrison declared that now is the time for the South to forget timidity and to assume a place of equality with those sections that heretofore have been favored.

The eloquent young senator called for unified effort in the South to lift our sectional income, our schools, our conservation methods, our methods of farming, in order that the good people of the South may reach the economic standards that they and their children deserve.

Senator Harrison speaks with force and conviction, and the program he outlined caught the imagination of the Young Democrats as we seldom have seen them moved.

The Anniston Times heartily endorses the appeal of Karl Harrison for an aroused and spirited Southern people. This is a time when progress will serve not only our Southern states, but also the gigantic national effort.—Anniston Times.

Important Year For Voters

Next year is another election year. Something for every voter to start thinking about. Many laws have been passed in the past decade that several years ago would have been branded "fantastic," but now these are laws, and very realistic. In the next few months others may be passed that now you might think impossible, so the voters should use caution next year in casting their ballot.

In the selection of a public official, especially so in the selection of a law maker, caution and "strict" caution should by all means be used. A man that is to make laws should have good judgment, common sense, and a respect of the people at heart, should have had some business experience, so that he can know just how certain legislation will effect the people. He should be on the job all the time, watchful of laws that might cause a burden, and surely watchful for laws that might deprive of the liberty we now enjoy. Yes, next year, is another election year. . . . A very important year for voters.—Sumter County Journal.

"Believe It Or Not," Figs In November

Although temperatures in Attalla and vicinity have been hovering between 60 and 70 during the past few days, the mercury this week took a rise and gave Attallians clear skies, sunshine and balmy weather. In some spots fog is lying low and rain is expected during the next few days.

Due to this unusual winter weather fruit trees are taking on second crops, and many home owners and nurseries have not shed their leaves.

In the editor's back yard where several fine fig bushes grow a new crop of figs are coming out. The figs are already half grown and leaves are bursting from the branches. Peach trees over the territory, as well as apples and peaches are reported to be in bloom and last week Nelson Smith, who resides in the Valley near Attalla brought into the Press office apples from the second crop. The apples, although small, are mature and have a fine flavor.—Attalla Press.

WATCH THOSE "EARS"

The Chilton County News at Clanton had "ears" carrying out the Thanksgiving motif last week. Also on the editorial page, another feature of interest was a spread on the press comments about Col. Bibb Graves and one on Judge Chas. Sparks.—Albany Tompkins in Haleyville Advertiser-Journal.

NO EXCITEMENT

Seems as if Colonel Bibb may get by without any opposition for governor next year. Mr. Sparks doesn't seem to have made any headway, and there is no word spoken of to create any excitement. However, the tide may fly off some of these days for other offices in the state and in the counties.—Fayette County Times.

No Way To "Get" John L. Lewis

The spirit of revenge swept the House yesterday as the Smith anti-labor bill passed.

Legislation to curb strikes is in order, but legislation to punish all of union labor may backfire with unfortunate results to the nation.

There are some provisions of the bill which are sound and which could have a constructive influence on labor relations. But yesterday a restrictive measure that has ever been suggested for curbing labor could have been passed. Most of them were because extremists have been in control of some labor unions, extremists who are gaining the power in the House of Representatives yesterday.

It is unfortunate at this critical time that extremists should be in position of power anywhere. Once this trend sets in there is danger that one responsible act will lead to another and many of the House members will then the other.

If the Smith bill is enacted into law, the logical effect will be to strengthen the hand of John L. Lewis. Even now that ogre is nodding with satisfaction. "I told you so," he will say "Follow me."

There have been indications that Lewis would within the labor movement was on the wane. Any action which revives his prestige at this time is folly.

It is possible that the Senate will be able to modify the provisions of the Smith bill and produce a sounder piece of legislation. It is even probable that many of the House members who "let off steam," while depending upon the Senate and the administration to tone the measure down.

This is no time for a war between the extremes of pro-labor sympathizers and pro-business sympathizers to be embroiled in an all-out battle. Such a fight will not produce national unity.

This is a time for moderates on all sides to come to the fore and settle differences in an attitude of mutual confidence.

It is not possible to "get" John L. Lewis by delivering a blow at 12,000,000 workmen. If the matter is not handled properly 12,000,000 workmen may be driven into the arms of the John L. Lewis.—Montgomery Advertiser.

"BACK TO THE FARM"

The slogan "Back to the Farm" is commendable and another slogan, "Every male person, white or black, to own a piece of land," should be added. We commend the movement now on to buy land and caution those who are making an effort to own land to try and own it. No one time. Buy no more than you can pay for. Improve it and then buy more if you need it. Every farmer who owns a large tract of land should deed his boys, if he has any, a small parcel of land and induce him to improve it, build him a home on it. No one needs much land on which to make a good living. This back to the farm movement will bring about prosperity quicker than anything else, and it will make people independent. We are glad to see the government advertising diversification and intensive farming. Everybody should encourage the slogan, "Back to the Farm."—Laverne Journal.

HEALTH OF RURALIST IN LOW INCOME CLASS DEPLORABLE, FSA SAYS

WASHINGTON—The Agriculture Department reported Thursday that a sample health survey indicates that only 4 per cent of low-income rural Americans are in first-rate physical condition.

The survey, covering 2,480 farm family borrowers from the Farm Security Administration living in 21 counties in 17 states, showed that 96 per cent of the 11,947 men, women and children examined had "significant" physical defects.

For the group as a whole, the number of defects averaged 3.5 per person.

Dr. R. C. Williams, chief medical officer for the FSA, said the survey showed that "years of poor diet and low income had taken a heavy toll in rural health."

Dr. Williams said correction of the conditions indicated by the survey would require greater emphasis on nutrition, medical attention and health education.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Our good friend R. M. Reper made us a welcome visit this week and almost let it slip that he would likely be a candidate for Tax Collector come next year. . . . he also intimated that we were kinda taking sides when we wrote that paragraph last week. . . . such was not the case 'cause the same thing goes for Roy too, he's clean as a hound's tooth and has a lot of friends who are standing by him. . . . anyway, from now on. . . . hence forward and forever we're out of politics. . . . we don't stick our neck out but once.

It behooves each of us to meet with the Mayor next Tuesday afternoon when he has called a meeting of the Civilian Defense Council, of which he is chairman. . . . things are moving fast these days and we can't get our organizational paragraph and plans laid any too soon.

Here's a good one that we clipped from one of our exchanges, we're passing it on to you:

"Most any man can be an editor. All the editor has to do is sit at a desk six days a week, four weeks a month, and 12 months a year and edit such stuff as this:

"Mrs. Jones of Cactus Creek let us can opener slip last week and cut herself in the pantry. John Doe climbed on the roof of his house last week looking for a leak and fell, landing on his back porch. . . . While Harold Green was escorting Miss Violet Wise from the church social last Sunday night, a savage dog attacked them and bit Mr. Green on the public square. . . . Jim Frang, while harnessing a broncho last Saturday was kicked just south of his corncrib."

Cleveland Driver was the first to come to the News office this week and declare his intentions of joining the Navy. . . . he left on the 10-06 bus for Birmingham to register and get gone. . . . well, all the lights are on again, you can fix up your Christmas tree now. . . . it's something like the old joke—off again, on again. . . .

Virginia Ware has a ring. Not the kind that you get over a telephone or beneath your eyes but a ring with lots of "rocks" piled upon it. . . . but no kidding, Virginia's its beautiful. . . . New Christmas Seals being sent out this year are the prettiest yet. . . . Claude Pipes, former resident and former City Clerk, was in town Saturday shaking hands with old friends. . . . Claude was on his way to Eufaula to attend ceremonies of the opening of U. S. Highway 241 just completed and giving Alabama another highway through the State. . . . Claude says that things are really booming here and that he is going to start a new and new work very much. . . . Which brings to mind Mr. H. T. Pipes celebrated his 73rd birthday this past week and even got a birthday program via radio. . . . Birthday dinner and all the trimmings. . . .

We just declare if we didn't keep up with the doings in the Business district in Clanton we just don't know how you folks would know anything. . . . for instance, the cute little waitress down at City Grill, you didn't know she had decided to wed. . . . we're talking about Bonnie Guy. . . . she will marry a Mr. Taylor of Fayetteville, Miss., on the 24th of December. . . . some Xmas present. . . . huh? . . . anyway Bonnie, congratulations and may all your troubles be over. . . . Husbands and did you ever see so many young married ladies worried about their husbands. . . . of course you have but for a different reason. . . . now it's for fear they will have to go to the army. . . . and boy, we don't blame them. . . . Clanton basketball team is headed for another pennant this year. . . . those boys know how to play basketball. . . . Percy Pitts went down. . . . pardon me. . . . dear. . . . last week and the party he was with got about seven d-e-r. . . .

New Edition "Alabama Vacation Trails"

A new edition of the folder, "Alabama Vacation Trails," has been published by the Alabama Chamber of Commerce and is ready for distribution to the general public.

South Highest Crime Rate Says Federal Investigating Bureau

WASHINGTON. — Southern and Pacific Coast states have the highest crime rates in the country, the Federal Bureau of Investigation said Thursday in reporting that in the first nine months of 1941 all crimes against individuals increased while property crimes, except auto thefts, decreased. In the first nine months of the year, murders increased 7.9 per cent and negligent manslaughter 15 per cent. Reported rape offenses were up 7.2 per cent and other felonious assaults, 5.5 per cent.

But robberies, burglaries and larcenies showed a decrease, with automobile thefts up 6.5 per cent over the same period last year.

Pacific Coast states led the country's robberies, burglaries and auto thefts, but Southern states were second in every instance.

Southern states led all others, however, in the per cent of murders committed, while the Pacific Coast states had one of the best regional records in the country.

The South also had a bad record for aggravated assault, and was second in the per cent of automobile thefts.

In the first nine months of the year Birmingham reported 21 murders, 54 robberies, 168 aggravated assault, 371 burglaries and 148 auto thefts.

Appendicitis deaths in Alabama last year were 18 per cent lower than in 1939.

4-H CLUB NEWS
As we come to our second 4-H meeting this new year we wish to extend to every member of our club heartiest greetings and best wishes for a truly happy and successful 1942. May we all find it possible to make the next year an even more successful one than the past.

Certainly there is more need for our 4-H club organization than ever before. Every member may make the most of the opportunities that the new year offers. Each County Council has greater opportunities for work this year than any year in the past. Collins Chapel 4-H Club member.

MT. PLEASANT 4-H CLUB

The second meeting of the Mt. Pleasant 4-H Club was held Nov. 25. The girls and boys met together for a short while. We started off with "Old Black Joe" and "Dixie." Mr. Glasscock tested our smell with water which we all had a good laugh about. Then Miss Barber gave us a written test was very much fun. After which the girls went to their room. We checked the roll and had nine new members, and also checked our health charts. Miss Barber taught us how to keep our finger nails well groomed. She talked about helping the Defense Program which was very interesting and enjoyed by all. We received our club news and adjourned at 12:00 o'clock until the next month.

F. H. A. MEETING

On December 3, 1941, the Jimeson F. H. A. chapter had its local meeting. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mildred Ellison. The roll was called and ten minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The program committee then took charge. Some songs were given by Marthart Pruitt, Donald Pruitt, W. D. Pruitt, and Emogene Waldrop. Martha Norwood and Emogene Waldrop played the harp together. Clyde Perkins, Jack Davis and Billie Joe Varden presented an act of "Molasses and January." The treasurer gave her report which said we had $40.00. More plans were made to make money so all the girls can take a trip to Florida next summer. Our club is glad to report that we have a new state F. H. A. banner.

MISSIONARY SERVICE AT TEMPLE

This Thursday night, December 11, at 7:00 o'clock p. m. Rev. and Mrs. Phillip O. Elzea, Missionaries to Liberia, West Africa, will speak at the Temple Church, 3 miles Southeast of Clanton. Rev. Elzea gave the Temple people a wonderful service in August and it is with great pleasure we can have him return for another service. Grover Langston, pastor of Temple church, and also Secretary-Treasurer and General Presbyter of the Alabama District Assemblies of God, invites you to be at Temple Thursday night. All denominations are especially invited. Brother Elzea will not take up church doctrine or beliefs but will hold directly to the Missionary work in Africa.

Regardless of your church affiliations you will feel perfectly free at this service. Let me urge you to hear these Missionaries.

Sunday Liquor Ban Effective In Selma

The City's new ordinance banning Sunday sale of whiskey, wine and beer went into effect at midnight Saturday and will continue to midnight Sunday night, with prospects of general observance seen by Chief of Police H. L. Dickerson.

Chief Dickerson stated that he had been in touch during Saturday with the six whiskey licenses and with beer dealers and sellers, to remind them that the law, recently passed by City Council and effective Dec. 1, would become operative at midnight Saturday.

The new regulations do not make it mandatory that liquor displays be taken down, although in several instances this has been done, it was stated. A new ruling soon to be issued by the Alabama Alcoholic Beverage Board will deal with display provisions, it was stated.

Strict check on the ordinance relating to Sunday sale is expected to be made — Selma Times-Journal.

REFUGE NEWS

Services were very good here Sun-

Rev. M. Lockhart, delivered two wonderful sermons. Sunday was not

Civilian Defense Meeting Held At City Hall Tuesday

Friday Night Is Date Set For Test Blackout In City of Clanton

A meeting was held at the City Hall Tuesday afternoon, called by Mayor Stapp and the local Citizens Defense Council, asking for volunteers for the numerous defense duties that will be required in case of emergency in Chilton County.

The first and principal speaker was Mr. Paul Jones, a representative of the State Defense Council, who told in an interesting way just the things that were going to have to be done and the cooperation of everyone that was going to be needed.

During the round-table discussion requests were made for: Protection at the airport, educational training as to what to do in case of an air raid, hospitalization and first-aid material training in every way so that we in Chilton County might be prepared.

Mayor Stapp also announced at this meeting that there would be a Red Cross training course or thirty hours available to anyone wishing to take it, and he urged every man and woman, every boy and girl to do his or her part in this national crisis.

Members of the Council and members of the Clanton Fire Department have planned a practice "blackout" for Friday night of this week, (that's tonight). Let everyone do what they are told as this is not a playing matter, it is a serious business.

Here Is What We Are Fighting For

There is quite a bit of the "American Way of Life" that is not whole some, or good for the common mas ses; there is quite a bit of the "American Way of Life," which favors the few, the expense of the many, but today all Americans with few excep tions, are agreed that the following fundamentals of freedom are worth fighting for—and dying for, if need be—in order that American Freedom shall live to continue to bless man kind.

THE BILL OF RIGHTS

1 Congress shall make no law respect ing an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise there of; of abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

II A well regulated militia, being nec essary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

III No soldier shall, in time of peace be quartered in any house, without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

IV The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon prob able cause supported by oath or af firmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

V No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or in dictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in ac tual service in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be sub ject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty or prop erty, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

VI In all criminal prosecutions, the ac cused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been pre viously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining wit nesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense.

VII In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact

MORAL ECHOS

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

In the Sunday school class the teacher stressed the importance of having family prayer and the return ing of thanks before each meal. She intimated that if this was not done, something awful would happen. On the following Sabbath one of her pu pils raised her hand in objection, say ing if she might not say something. Then the teacher inquired, "Mary, what do you want to say?" Without hesitation she replied, "Teacher, we do not have family prayer at our house and we do not return thanks at the table and nothing has hap pened yet." Some people think that God has a pay day on Saturday, and that if we sin, we will collect our dues at a special time. We become satisfied when we do not get it in the neck at dinner, for we have failed to do our duty. Just wait my brother, some thing will surely happen.

I knew a young man who had a hard time in school. He loved the sports of college life and cared but little for his studies. When he finally came to the graduating exer cise, he was happy that he was grad uate, and after receiving his dip loma, he raced for the telegraph of fice and wired just one word to his people. That word was, "Educated." He knew more about foot ball than he did about Algebra or English. All that mattered was the diploma he came into the possession of a diploma. That meant education. I sometimes think that the least educated people we have, are those who hold a dip loma without meriting it. To come back from school with a sheep skin is no guarantee that the holder is an edu cated person. Education is a progres sive thing. At the close of our college years, we are just then beginning our education.

In the quiet 'hour at Blue' Ridge one young minister made this state ment: "I have not had time to talk to my room mate, but I know him. He came from the far South and I came from up North, but I know that he is a great spirit, for when I got out of bed this morning I found that he had polished my shoes as well as his own. I know people by what they do. When some thing is done I na community we think of certain people. If the deed is bad, we think of certain people, for it looks like them. If something good is done, we think of the one who is doing it. We know that there is something grand in a man when he polishes our shoes and says nothing about it."

Dr. E. Stanley Jones told us of a woman he knew who had three dis eases. One of the diseases was con sidered incurable. With three incur able diseases, all of her friends thought that she would pass away in short order. To their surprise she lived on and in two years she was very much better. One asked her how it was that she was able to master the dis eases that threatened her. She said, "Why, those three diseases got to fighting each other and forgot to kill me." Dr. Jones said that this woman es tablished a gift shop in her bed room and that she became the center of attraction in her community, and that hundreds of people came to buy and to receive good cheer from her shin ing, happy soul. Soon she was paying a large sum to the Government in in come tax. She became the trouble clerk for miles in all directions. And yet, some of us wonder why we are from just a few aches and pains.

Hubby was proud of his new auto mobile. It was among the first that came out with an adjustable seat. By pressing a spring he could slide the seat forward or backward, to suit his comfort. He and his wife were carry ing a friend to ride, he at the wheel and she sitting directly behind him. To show off the merits of his new tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re examined in any court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law.

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be con structed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

Farm Leaders Hope To Avoid Political Strife

Think Alabama Should Be Spared Contest In Time of World Crisis

By ATTICUS MULLIN

Agriculture, we know and labor we think, are opposed to a schism in Ala bama politics next year and they want a subordination of demagoguery and borborygnism to patriotism.

We were in Chicago when the at tack was staged on Pearl Harbor last Sunday. There were more than 7,000 farmer delegates there at the Amer ican Farm Bureau Federation conven tion. Nearly 200 leading Alabamians of the 2 men who spoke for agricul ture in great detail.

The second or third day of the con vention found sentiment among agri cultural leaders congealed. From every State they wanted a cessation of local politics and local rackets. We found that the men who spoke from the Pacific Coast, from the Rocky Mountain region, from the Plains States and from Illinois, Indiana, New York and other Northern States, New it was particularly true of the South ern representatives of agriculture.

The sentiment of Alabama leaders was that there should be no contest for the governorship or the senator ship next year, that such tried and true friends of the farmer and of America as Senator John H. Bankhead and Col. Bibb Graves should be elected without opposition.

Needs Experienced Men

The sentiment was that Alabama needs at this time in public places men who have the interest of the nation at heart, men who are close to Pres ident Roosevelt and the national ad ministration, men who represent agri culture, industry, and labor in a fair way and men who are wanted in Washington by the Alabama delega tion in Congress.

Alabama's delegation in Congress wants Col. Bibb Graves for governor. Of course they want Senator John H. Bankhead returned. They want Col. Graves to succeed because he is not only an experienced executive but he is a soldier as well. He knows the needs of the Army and Navy, of the civilians and of everybody as few men in the nation know these needs ac cording to Alabama farm leaders who were in Chicago with the writer at tending the American Farm Bureau Federation and the national farm leaders there, we found not a single one who did not insist that Col. Graves should be elected governor of Alabama without opposition.

"We can't afford to give the nation a show of reactionary strength, nor can Alabama be urged in its effort to whip Hitler. If we should have a partisan fight in Alabama, even though that fight would end in utter rout of the borborygn and reactionaries and the Lindberghs and the Wheelers, we still would be split among ourselves, not matter how much we finally elect a man like Col. Graves, a distinguished soldier, and a progressive executive who has proved his Democracy with the accomplishments of his ideals."

Sentiment General

We found farmers from every other State feeling like the farmers of Alabama, ready to fight anyone who would raise class hatred and faction alism because they feared that this would retard the war effort of the na tion. Stand America, stand by Con gress, and above all, stand by Pres ident Roosevelt was the general slogan.

Col. Graves is close to President Roosevelt, already being on two im portant national boards appointed by the President himself. Col. Graves could not accept a cabinet appoint ment. Col. Graves is a friend of the farmer, the farmers say, and every important farm leader of Alabama, and we believe, every farm leader of lesser note, is behind Col. Graves and Senator Bankhead.

A cessation of partisan politics is desired not only by the farmer and the workman but we would hazard the prediction, after visiting 51 coun ties of Alabama, by the average busi ness man, white collar man and what have you as well. They all want to private the war and not be borborygned.

Christianity can no more be reduced to an exact science than a spirit can be changed into flesh and blood.

car, he said to his wife, "Dearie, please kick me forward." The wife know ing the boyish pride over his new car, placed her foot against the seat and gave him a vigorous kick forward. That was one time forward. In fact, that was the most of our wives do for us. Sometimes they kick us backward, but in the most of cases, they kick us forward.

Reviews And Previews

(By Irvin Lando)

THE CLEARER VISION

Now that the smoke has cleared away from the ruins at Pearl Harbor, and the majority of American people are beginning to look a little more sanely at the prospect of waging an other world war, the tremendous task before us is now going to be planned, revised and criticized.

Out of the maze of official com muni quies, Japanese propaganda re sources, and the official statements of the Japanese, we have reached some very definite con clusions. From the information we have at hand, up to the present, we can, very correctly, assume that the dam age to Pearl Harbor, at the Philip pines, Guam, and Wake has been very great, not so much because of the inefficiency of American fighting forces, but because of the element of surprise which was in Japan's favor. Very few people thought the audacity of the Japanese was so great that they would risk an attack against the American nation. The majority of people had felt, as H. V. Kaltenborn expressed it, that the negotiations in Washington between the American government and the Japanese were on and on, and on, and would reach no definite conclusion. What we had forgotten to do was to realize the Japanese as a very important link in the Hitler plan. We had neglected the fact that when Hitler would pull his ace, Japan, out of his sleeve, to attack the U. S., and thus to throw off the ever-increasing im portance of American aid to Britain. Though the initial damage has been severe, we have reason to believe that our navy is what Secretary Knox has always claimed it to be. We have seen that, now in the war, it could carry out its duties well, with an alacrity which is peculiar to Americans once they have set their minds. We have observed that the Japanese navy has suffered tremendous losses, so great that even Tokyo has acknowl edged its own apprehension. We have viewed with pleasure the sin cerity and the speed with which in dividuals, and in the nation, have known through magnificent courage their de termination that the American way of life shall not die. We have been pleased by the way which the Pres ident of the United States has called America during the last weeks, and the majority of American people have utmost confidence in their leader. Furthermore, we cannot help but be satisfied and moved by the rebirth of interest in the American way of life which the war has brought to the heart and soul of every American.

Therefore, now that we have set tled down considerably and have in terpreted the events of the last few days, we can take a look into the fu ture to see what our task, as a be liever in power, will be. To a great many people, the fact that Germany and Italy declared war on the United States was indeed frightening. That was what Hitler had hoped it would have been. He anticipated an attempt by Britain at peace, but he soon discovered that Americans were ready for his war. On the other hand, a great many Amer ican military authorities are pro foundly glad that Hitler and Musso lini did declare war upon us, for, Americans must never forget that the war with Japan is merely a sideshow to the greater war which is waging in Europe. Our real battle will come, after Japan has been defeated, with the Axis powers in Europe and per haps in the area of India, Turkey, and Iran. For no matter how crushed Japan may become, we will never fully win the war until Hitler an d the totalitar ian way of life are erased from the face of the earth. It is obvious then, that the war will be a long one. It follows therefore, that our plans will have to be made not for tem porary victories, but for the final, inevitable victory. No matter how many small battles we shall emerge victorious from, our real task is the final battle, the conclusive decision of the war of ideologies.

To this end Americans must devote their lives wholeheartedly. They must be willing to undergo the hardships of a military life. They must be will ing to suffer a partial censorship. They must be willing to endure rationing. All these things and many more will be part of the job which we shall be asked to take part in.

We must all be willing to take part in this tremendous task, so that we shall never be taken by surprise again. The lessons of Pearl Harbor were taught to us through the experience of school experience. We must not allow, that to happen again.

Americans all have pledged their cooperation to this battle which must be won. It will be a high sacrifice to go through combat on the big seas, but the less glorious, though just as important, battle will be that of Americans at home who will give up luxuries so that the men on the war front may be victorious.

This great task of planning cen sorship, of rationing, of equipping, of training, and of building up national morale, is now being studied through out the nation. The actual military stages are also undergoing delibera tion. Our first plans will have to be revised. Under the democratic way of life, our plans will be criticized, and changed. We will make mistakes at first. We must expect them. But if we learn from the experience of those mistakes preceded us, we can limit those mistakes to an infinitesimal de gree.

It is thus the duty of every Amer ican, in this time of crisis, to keep cool, not to get emotional, and above all, to have the highest confidence in those to whom we have entrusted the ship of state. As individual citizens, our highest type of service to our nation will be unlimited cooperation to the restrictions placed upon us, loyalty to our work, and a sagacity not to rush into battle before we are fully pre pared.

Our geographic position is, fortun ately, favorable to this concept. We cannot, as General McClellan did in the Civil War, wait too long. We must be ready for the advantageous moment.

But while we are waiting for that moment, Americans must continue on. Education must proceed. Improve ments must go on. Democracy must remain our form of government. Cul ture and refinement must still be lived. Arts and sciences must con tinue their research. We must do this, so that, after the war, we shall have something solid, something grand upon which to found the spirit of peace and everlasting brotherhood.

"She's tall as a Georgia pine, and straight as a post, and she's too young to leave her mother boy, been listening to a Saturday night radio broadcast. How they get away with it we don't understand but they evidently do... that makes twice we have heard of our last time... our first time and our last time."

"Oh can she sew and make britches, faster than you can count the stitches, but she's too young to leave her mother..." now they got me doing it

She was about three years old... had gone to the store to see Santa with several other small children probably... the old gent was busy talking to the kids accompanied by their parents and he didn't have time for this "little customer"... you know how it is... Santa Claus was the grandest thing in the world to her... had been all of her short life... Jie was her ideal of all that was good... but he wouldn't stop and listen to what she wanted him to bring her for Christmas. She kept following him and calling "Santa Claus, Santa Claus" We wondered that night when that little tyke said her prayers and climbed in bed if Santa Claus was still her ideal... if he was still the patron Saint of this little child and most of all we wondered if this little girl's heart wasn't broken because of the way this initiation Santa Claus had treated her.

REFUGE NEWS

Services were very good here Sunday, although there were several absent. There were no services Sunday night, because of the cold weather. There will be Sunday School here next Sunday. Let everyone come back with a well prepared lesson and also our pastor will be with us Sunday and Sunday night, as that is our regular preaching day.

Let's everyone bear in mind that we will have our Christmas program next Wednesday night on Christmas Eve night. Beginning promptly at 5 o'clock. We think we have one of the nicest little programs, concerning the birth of our Lord.

There will be a working at this place on Friday of this week. Bring tools necessary for cleaning off the cemetery.

There are not very many on our sick list this week.

Come back next Sunday and Sunday night and bright someone with you.

A lady called us the other day and made the statement that the people of Clanton were not patriotic... we disagreed... the people of this city and every other American city are deeply patriotic, but we don't believe in parading it... The caller had grounds for her statement however... she had witnessed the playing of the National Anthem over a microphone and had seen only one man on the streets lift his hat... a later report come to us that there were two... a negro man took his hat off, placed it over his heart and stood at attention until the final note had died... as we stated before, we are patriotic but we are not a demonstrative people... we don't go out of our way in normal times to prove to others that we love our land... of course there are normal times, that is why the lady noticed it... and in a time like this it won't hurt us to let the whole world know how we feel about AMERICA.

JIMMIE VARDEN BURIED AT ROBINSON CEMETERY

Funeral services for Jimmie A. Varden, 29, were held at Mineral Springs Baptist church Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, conducted by Revs. Wiley Davis and J. R. Cost. Martin & Sons were in charge. Burial was in Robinson cemetery.

The body of Mr. Varden was found in his home with bullet wounds in the chest, thought to have been self-inflicted with a 22 rifle.

Besides the wife, Mrs. Orie Robinson Varden, surviving are five children; the oldest one, Bernie, is in army stationed at Canal Zone, the others being 12, 13, 5 and one year.

The mother, Mrs. Iva Davis Varden, widow of the late Jim Varden, also survives.

A. B. Windham thought that the Marines had landed and had everything well in hand last Sunday evening when about fifty truck load of soldiers stopped over in West Clanton for a rest... The Smoke House was the only store in the vicinity that was open and B. Windham was the only clerk in the store... you can well imagine the situation trying to wait on that many soldiers and all of them wanting to be waited on at the same time... Windham says that he took in the most money in the shortest time in his experience, if he did have to put ice bags on his head after they had departed.

MR. ELLIS RHODES

Mr. Ellis Rhodes, age 62, died suddenly at his home near Collins Chapel Thursday at 4:30 p. m. Funeral was held at 11 a. m. Saturday from Maple Springs church, conducted by the Rev. J. T. Herd. Interment was in the church cemetery.

He is survived by his widow, four sons, Jackson, George, Ross of Clanton, Ala. and Walter Rhodes of Honolulu Hawaii. Three brothers, Will and Bud Rhodes of Clanton, John Rhodes of Jemison, four sisters, Mrs. Lizzie Smith of Birmingham, Mrs. Susie Smith of Clanton, Mrs. Lillie Deadman, and Mrs. Rosa Bishop of Gadsden, Ala. Mrs. Babe Franklin of Chilton county. 12 grandchildren.

Spigener Funeral Home in charge.

Speaking of absent minded professors... we received a card Saturday morning from someone in Montevallo saying nothing on his mind... someone evidently addressed the card thinking that they had already written the message on the other side... now we're curious... Mrs. Clara Mullins at Mullins and Scott loves dolls... which proves we never grow up at heart... The wife of the Johnsons Fashion Shop this week and asked Ada Bennett for a sock and a pair of ties... that's what we get for Xmas... wonder if Jimmie knows, "For Whom the Bell Tolls" that ought to get a rise out of someone.

Farmers Urged To Market Scrap Iron

An urgent appeal to farmers of Chilton County to market their scrap iron as part of a national scrap iron collection campaign designed to aid the National Defense Program, was made this week by P. H. Smith, County Agent.

Mr. Smith announced that Secretary of Agriculture Wickard has called upon American farmers to cooperate in the national campaign now under way to help provide necessary iron and steel supplies for the Defense Program. Information received by the Defense Board emphasizes that America needs all scrap iron and steel it is possible to get to help meet shortages of these metals in the production of defense materials. Scrap is essential in the making of steel. Also, steel is needed for the manufacture of farm machinery and farmers who dispose of their scrap iron now will be helping make it possible for more farm machinery to be produced in 1942.

MAPLE SPRINGS

There was a very nice crowd at Sunday School and preaching last Sunday and we extend to each one a hearty welcome back each Sunday. We are going to have a Christmas program and tree here next Tuesday night the 23. Everybody is invited and if you have gift you wish to put on the tree bring it along. Don't forget Sunday School and prayer meeting next Sunday and Sunday night.

In 1912 tuberculosis killed one person every three and one-half minutes. Today, tuberculosis kills one person every eight and one-half minutes. Christmas Seal funds have helped in the saving of lives that these figures represent.

to be large but the results will be important to farmers and to our whole defense effort."

Farmers are being asked to market their scrap iron at current prices which are those that have been set by the Office of Price Administration. However, these prices are moderate and farmers are asked to sell their scrap more to help the National Defense Program than to make money. Scrap iron in Chilton County should bring about 50 cents a hundred weight, according to the best information available to the local Defense Board. The scrap iron collection campaign is to be carried on through the usual market channels.

Mr. Smith emphasized that the Government does not want farmers to scrap useful farm machinery. Where machinery is being kept for spare parts, it is suggested that the parts be taken off the machine and stored and the remainder of the metal sold for scrap.

CHRISTMAS
TELEPHONE CALLS
PILE UP TOO!

Stores can spread their Christmas rush over several weeks, but we have to handle an avalanche of long distance calls on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

This Christmas, though during the year we have built many additional thousands of miles of long distance circuits and greatly expanded switchboard facilities, there will still be more calls made on Christmas Day than the lines can carry.

This year, more telephone people than ever before will work Christmas Eve and Christmas Day, serving you, doing their level best to complete your holiday calls. Every available circuit will be in service. But, despite our best efforts, there are sure to be delays and disappointments.

If your calls get caught in the rush, please remember the difficult conditions under which telephone folks will be working to get your call through.

This Week In National Defense

While its envoys discussed with Secretary of State Hull means of maintaining peace in the Pacific, Japan's forces attacked the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, Wake and Midway Islands, Guam, Hong Kong and Malaya. In the attacks on American possessions there were approximately 3,000 casualties, one battleship and a destroyer were sunk, several other U. S. ships severely damaged and a large number of planes put out of commission.

Stating that "always will we remember the character of the onslaught against us," the President asked Congress to declare a state of war exists between the U. S. and the Japanese Empire. Following Congress's affirmative action, Germany and Italy—in accordance with their agreement with Japan—declared war on the United States. Almost immediately Congress declared war on the European members of the Axis.

Addressing the nation by radio, the President said "it will not only be a long war, it will be a hard war. . . . Not only must the shame of Japanese treachery be wiped out, but the source of international brutality, wherever they exist, must be absolutely and finally broken. . . . With confidence in our armed forces—with the unbounding determination of our people—we will gain the inevitable triumph. We will win the war and we are going to win the peace that follows."

ARMY AND NAVY ACTION

The President announced he had instructed the Army and Navy to take all steps necessary to U. S. defense. The War and Navy Department announced that the Army and Navy had beaten off attempted Japanese troop landing in the Philippines, sunk a 39,000 ton Japanese battleship, a cruiser and a destroyer, scored hits on the battleship KONGO; that Marine garrisons at Midway and Wake were holding out; that Navy Secretary Knox had flown to Hawaii.

Both the Army and Navy announced volunteer enlistments at a record level. The War Department asked Congress for legislation to register all men 18 to 64 years old and to permit use of men 18 to 45 for military service. Selective Service Director Hershey said it may be possible to raise the number of selectees in service from the present 800,000 to about 3,000,000 without using other than the 21-28 age groups. If Congress approves the induction of those from 28 to 35, now registered but deferred, another 1,000,000 might be raised, Gen. Hershey said.

Special military headquarters directed all local boards to reclassify ex-Service men who have been deferred because of prior service.

Congress passed legislation removing the ban on U. S. Army men from serving outside the hemisphere. Congress also granted the Army and Navy permission to hold enlisted men for the duration.

CIVILIAN DEFENSE

Following air raid alarms in San Francisco and New York the Office of Civilian Defense ordered all Pacific and East coast and District of Columbia air raid volunteers on the alert. OGD Director LaGuardia announced enrollment of 950,000 air raid wardens and other volunteers and called for three times the existing permanent fire personnel, plus one air raid warden for every 500 persons.

The War Department asked all Governors to be "on the alert" with home guards and State troopers available to meet any situation; instructed special patrol protection services to protect all arsenals, factories and storage depots against sabotage.

Director McNutt of Defense Health and Welfare Service asked Governors to complete mobilization of State health and welfare services. He also issued a call for young women to enroll in schools of nursing to meet critical shortages of professional nurses for the Army, Navy and civilian requirements.

COMMUNICATIONS

The Navy initiated censorship on all outgoing communications and forbade publication of any naval information that might be of value to the enemy. The Army restricted information of troop movements except when announced by the War Department. The Maritime Commission requested the press, radio and other news channels to refrain from publishing information about merchant vessels in any waters.

The President authorized the Defense Communications Board to designate radio facilities of the nation for use, control, inspection or closure by Federal agencies. The Federal Communications Commission prohibited operation of amateur radio stations in all U. S. Territory.

The Army and Navy announced casualty lists will be withheld from publication in order to avoid giving aid to the enemy in determining where and when and how many losses the U. S. has sustained. Families of casualties, however, will be notified immediately whenever possible.

Stating that defense expenditures increases will have to be matched by increases in purchases of defense bonds and stamps, Mr. Morgenthau ordered an intensive sales campaign.

ALIENS

The President designated by proclamation all nationals of Germany, Italy and Japan as "enemy aliens" and authorized the Justice Department to take into custody those considered dangerous. The Justice Department requested that all State and local officials leave the handling of aliens to Federal authorities to prevent persecution of law-abiding and peaceful enemy nationals. All but 2,303 of the 1,000,000 Axis nationals in the U. S. were allowed to remain free subject to arrest on the slightest provocation, the Department said. The others, considered dangerous, were taken into custody and will be placed in concentration camps supervised by the Army.

ITALIANS IN THIS STATE OUTNUMBER GERMANS

There are more Italians than Germans in Alabama, but the State's entire white foreign born population is only four-tenths of one per cent of the total, and of this four tenths of one per cent only about one-fourth are German or Italian born, according to figures received by Gov. Dixon from the U. S. Census Bureau.

The total white foreign-born population of the State was given as 11,957, according to 1940 census, of whom 1,530 were Germans and 1,699 Italians. The report did not show what proportion of foreign-born residents have become American citizens.

Here's One Way You Can Help

The Navy Recruiting service with headquarters at Birmingham, Alabama, comprising the State of Alabama and counties of Florida west of the Apalachicola river, has announced that the recruiting service is experiencing difficulty on transportation of young men who are desirous of enlisting in the Navy in the defense of their country. Lieutenant Commander J. E. Meredith, U. S. Navy, retired, the officer in charge of recruiting said that it had been reported from a number of towns that young men, particularly in the rural districts, wanted to enlist for duty but had no way of getting to a recruiting station to enlist. He has appealed to the Mayors and leading citizens of each community to work out a plan whereby young men could be collected and transportation facilities arranged to carry such applicants in a group to a navy recruiting station near the particular locality where such young men are in need of transportation. He further stated that the response of the citizens in this recruiting area to help the recruiting service in the tremendous task of obtaining applicants who are urgently needed at this time has already been very gratifying. The navy recruiting services are working on a 24-hour 7 day week basis to care for men for the various training stations. The work load has been tremendous and cars and men to travel to these outlying districts are not available. Almost every day expressions are heard from citizens, "what can I do to help." Here is a opportunity for the citizens of Alabama and the counties in western Florida to help now. Navy recruiting stations in the State of Alabama are located at Andalusia, Anniston, Birmingham, Decatur, Demopolis, Dothan, Florence, Gadsden, Huntsville, Mobile, Montgomery, Opelika, Selma, and Tuscaloosa. In Florida they are located at Marianna, Panama City and Pensacola.

Interesting Letter Received From Mrs. Horton Walker

The following letter was received a few days ago by the family of Capt. and Mrs. Horton Walker, residing now in Puerto Rico, where Capt. Walker is stationed. Mr. W. H. Walker, of Maplesville, brother of Capt. Walker gave the News authority to print the letter.—Editor.

The letter follows:

Saturday Night
Dec. 13, 1941.

Dear family:

We received your letter this week—Horton sent it in to me from his camp—with a note saying he didn't know when he'd be in. Of course, ever since last Sunday, the whole place has been on alert—and Horton hasn't spent a night at home since then. I've gone out to see him twice, but it's a narrow, winding road through acres and acres of sugar cane—taller than your head—and right now, it's the gathering season and there are many men in the fields. They have a big blade like a butcher knife! only much larger and they cut it and strip it (cane) then load it on a funny little train to haul it to the mill. There's usually an overseer, dressed in khaki and boots, riding a horse, but it gives me the jitters to go through there.

We have had blackouts every night and last night at 7:30 there was an air raid warning. I got up and stood at the window a long time, but I'd lost so much sleep all the week that I was about done for—and I didn't wait till it was over. They say our house is bomb proof—but I don't trust anything with those Germans. We are right at the gate to the Fort, so I get all the noise and disturbance of air warning. I really have been worried sick—Horton wants Tommy and me to go home, and I just can't bear to leave him out, here. He doesn't have time to come in to see us and he worries about our safety—until I have about decided to go to Miami by plane—as soon as we can make arrangements, sometime in January I guess. It certainly won't get any better here. The French own a small island close by—"Martinique"—and of course the Germans will use that as a base in the Atlantic, and a very nice spot to fly to. P. R. Food already has jumped sky high and they won't be able to get as many ships through with supplies. I know it would be the best thing to do for us to go home, but it "gets me down" when I think of it.

It's all like another life and another world when we remember those days in Clanton—fishing and hunting and me to go home, and I just can't bear to leave him out, here. I'm glad you have been lucky enough to be close by and can kinda keep a connection between me and the foreign atmosphere. Sister wrote us about the squirrels, too, and it made us both homesick for some of it—dumplings and all.

I don't know how I'll ever get my things home—or if I'll ever see 'em again. I can only take 50 lbs. on the Pan American Clipper. I've never ridden a plane—and I know my girl-zard will be in my throat and Lord, let me get them! I may not have

AN OPEN LETTER

To Friends and Patrons of Chilton County News:

At the beginning of this New Year, we find that practically everything entering into the Publication and Printing Business has advanced materially, and is continuing to advance rapidly.

Chilton County News has only THREE sources of income: CIRCULATION, ADVERTISING, JOB PRINTING. Of these, in the past, we have given liberally to all worthy causes, promoted by the various communities in the County—we shall continue to do so in the future, to the best of our ability.

However, we find it absolutely necessary to increase the price of Subscription, Advertising and Job Printing, in order to meet our obligations, and continue to give you the kind of service you are entitled to—that we intend to do.

Therefore, effective January First, 1942, the Subscription price of Chilton County News will be: Anywhere in Alabama, $1.50 per year, in advance. Anywhere outside of Alabama, $2.00 per year in advance.

All reading Notices, of every description, where there is an element of profit for anyone or to anyone, will be charged for as Advertising—the rate will be 10 cents per line (count 6 words to line) and when convenient send cash with the copy.

The price of Advertising, will of course, be determined by the amount of space used, position, and whether regular or intermittently; and the price of Job Printing is fixed according to quality, amount, personal and mechanical requirements.

We appreciate to the fullest extent the patronage you have given us, and pledge you the best service we know how to give in the future. So wishing for each of you: Love, Liberty, Peace and Plenty.

another chance to write everybody before I leave, but I'll drop you a line from Lettie's. Write to Horton more often—at his same address—and tell him about everything. He won't be able to write often and can't say much then, but you can imagine what war is. They hang on the telephones and radios—and stand ready to fire any minute.

I hope everybody has a happy Christmas if not a merry one. Maybe it won't be many years before we can celebrate together again.

Much love from us all—Jo.

Senate Hears Demands For Army of 6,000,000

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—President Roosevelt signed today the bill enlarging the selective service plan while the Senate heard demands that all recruiting be halted and that the nation rely entirely upon the draft to build up a war machine of 6,000,000 men or more.

Under the new law, all men of 18 through 44 are liable for active military service.

The Senate later approved legislation to increase the authorized enlisted strength of the navy from 300,000 to 500,000 and to raise the limit on the marine corps from 60,000 to 104,000 men. The measure now goes to the House.

Senator Hill, (D.), Alabama, the Democratic whip, argued that the draft was the most efficient method of doing the job, and in support of his contention, he cited the case of a "doctor who had enlisted as a private when the Army was crying for more doctors."

Secretary of War Stimson already has announced that the Army will stop accepting volunteers as soon as there is a falling off in the patriotic rush prompted by declaration of war against the Axis powers. The Navy already has asked and received from Congress the right to draft 5,000 for the fleet and 10,000 for the Marines.

"Senator Pepper, (D.), Florida, asserted "we must build our Army up to at least 6,000,000 men as soon as possible, we are in a two-ocean war with enemies on many fronts. It is a fight to the finish and we must be prepared to the hilt."

Several members of the Senate Military Committee, including Hill and Senator Gurney, (R.), South Dakota, agreed that the Army must expand beyond recent plans for a force of 2,000,000.

Most Senators who heard confidential testimony by military authorities on the measure broadening the selective service act favored halting voluntary enlistments and obtaining men by means of the draft.

How big an army the war department wants is confidential, but Brig. Gen. Wade Haislip, assistant chief of staff, told the Senate Military Committee "four million men isn't an army today."

He remarked that Germany had more than 9,000,000 under arms and that present plans called for a U. S. air force alone of a "million men before we are through."

First Aid Class At High School

Mr. John Hollis, chairman of the Red Cross First Aid Committee for Civilian Defense has announced that there will be instructors at the High School, and also at the City Hall in the near future.

No plans can be given out yet according to Mr. Hollis, but contacts have been made with the faculty of a number of Colleges and it has been arranged for students to act as instructors.

Churchill Visits With Roosevelt For War Conversations

Says the Associated Press:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Prime Minister Churchill, after a secret and history making journey, arrived in Washington today, and tonight was closeted with President Roosevelt in the White House discussing unified war plans to encompass "the defeat of Hitlerism throughout the world."

Here is the text of the White House announcement:

There is of course, one primary objective in the conversation to be held during the next few days between the President and the British Prime Minister and the respective staffs of the two countries. That purpose is the defeat of Hitlerism throughout the world.

"It should be remembered that many other nations are engaged today in this common task. Therefore, the present conferences in Washington should be regarded as preliminary to further conferences which will officially include Russia, China, The Netherlands and the Dominions. It is expected that there will thus be evolved an overall unity in the conduct of the war. Other nations will be asked to participate to the best of their ability in the overall objective.

"It is probable that no further announcements will be made until the end of the present conferences, but it may be assumed that the other interested nations will be kept in close touch with this preliminary planning."

DO NOT TURN YOUR CAR AT R. R. TRACKS ON 2ND AVE.

Better not turn your car around anymore at the tracks on Second Avenue. It won't be the Gobins that get you. It will be one of our police officers. There is a City Ordinance against turning around there and it is also dangerous. Railroad traffic is heavy these days and our city fathers are afraid someone is going to be seriously hurt. Anyway, the Ordinance will be enforced on now on so think twice then drive on up to the next corner and turn around.

Fine Work Of David E. Dunn

Last week Mr. C. C. Moore, of Monroeville, Ala., wrote a letter to The Birmingham News suggesting to prohibitionists that they have been one of their plans for statewide "dry" law, adding:

"Beer is a harmless healthful beverage and is refreshing to a tired working man. Very little crime or careless driving can be alleged truthfully against beer."

His letter was sounded by a resident of dry Monroe County brought to mind the good work being done by David E. Dunn, who directs the "Clean Up or Close Up" campaign of the Brewers of Alabama Beer Distributing Committee.

For almost three years now, Mr. Dunn and his Committee have given every aid to the Alabama ABC Board in a fight to rid this state of the honky tons and jook joints that had given beer a black eye.

His persistent work month in and month out has dispelled any doubts that arose when the "Clean Up" drive was launched in 1936. Those who thought it would be a flash in the pan have learned they were wrong.

And among those who would testify to Mr. Dunn's determination would be the 53 retail beer dealers who refused to heed his plea for better conditions and found themselves "Closed Up" because they would not "Clean Up." His warnings to 330 other retail dealers were heeded, and these places are operating satisfactorily today as proof of the pudding.

We live here in Chilton County where the sale of whiskey, wine and beer is illegal. A new vote on the question tomorrow would reaffirm our stand against legal sale.

But it is heartening to sit here and watch developments in the "wet" counties and nod our head in approval over the good work the beer industry is doing to help Alabama's ABC Board enforce the law.

Navy Secretary Knox, returning from a plane trip to Hawaii, reported the U. S. armed services there were not on the alert against the first Japanese attack. Mr. Knox said that the Navy lost one capital ship, a training ship, three destroyers, and one mine-layer and suffered damage to other ships which will take from several days to several months to repair. He reported 2,729 officers and men were killed and 656 wounded.

The President appointed Supreme Court Justice Roberts head of a special board of inquiry. Pending completion of the inquiry ranking officers of the Hawaiian command were re-

NAVY

The Navy Department authorized all navy yards to make maximum use of extra shifts and overtime work to rush construction. All Navy employees were ordered on a 48-hour week. Four ships were launched the USS Columbia—a 10,000-ton cruiser—and three destroyers.

PRODUCTION

OPM Production Director Harrison announced American and British plant output will surpass that of Germany by the summer of 1942; the U. S. will produce 840 light and medium tanks this month and 2,800 a month by this time next year; machine tool production necessary for critical Army weapons will probably be doubled in the coming year; the first bomber will be produced shortly after January 1, at the new $110,000,000 Kansas City assembly plant from parts made by the auto industry; plans have been approved by SPAB to triple aviation gasoline production.

PRIORITIES

OPM extended its ban on the sale of new auto tires and tubes to January 4 and said a rationing program will go into effect January 4, providing tires only for essential commercial and public welfare activities. OPM also announced full control of all tin in this country or en route by water; ordered manufacturers of ranges, stoves and other cooking appliances to curtail use of iron and steel; ruled sheepskin can be used only on order; simplified priority procedure to permit extension of ratings by manufacturers themselves on orders for less than $500 worth of material.

MATERIALS

The SPAB announced preparation of a program to insure adequate supplies of those raw materials from the Pacific area "even in case America's access to overseas sources is cut off entirely." OPM Director Knudsen asked all individuals to gather all scrap of any kind in their homes and workshops and sell it at once to scrap dealers. Civilian Supply Director Henderson said the war effort requires 50 pounds of waste paper a month from every family.

The OPA Consumer Division reported that retreading auto tires costs only 40 to 50 per cent of a new tire and gives 75 to 80 per cent of new tire mileage. The OPA asked the public not to purchase new materials for blacking out windows and not to use surgical tape to protect windows from air raids.

LABOR SUPPLY

Federal Security Administrator McNutt announced unemployment due to material shortages will probably reach a peak in the first half of 1942. He said the hardest hit region will be the Great Lakes and Ohio valley area. He reported priority unemployment had brought the first increase in 6 months in the number of industrial workers available for war work through the 1,500 State employment services.

The President asked all Governors to transfer to the U. S. Employment Service all personnel, records and facilities required for operation of a central service. Mr. McNutt, whose Federal Security Agency includes the USES, urged all employers to recruit workers exclusively through the local public employment offices and to refrain from "blind" advertising, labor scouting or pirating, and other "wasteful and disruptive" labor-recruiting methods.

PRICES

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported wholesale prices, led by agricultural commodities, rose one per cent during the week ended December 13 to the highest level since 1929 and more than 16 per cent greater than this time last year. Living costs, the Bureau said, are now 11.8 per cent above those when war in Europe began.

Price Administrator Henderson moved to stabilize prices of reclaimed rubber, raw wool and various wool yarns, coffee, cocoa, pepper, cocoa butter, fats and oils except butter, barrel staves and headings, fir "peeler" logs from which plywood is made; resold iron and steel products, natural resins and shellac, and second-hand burlap and cotton bags.

SHIPS AND SHIPPING

The State Department announced French crews on all French vessels in the U. S. were removed December 2. Justice Department said the crews will be held as aliens but not enemy aliens. The State Department took over the giant French liner NORMANDI and the Swedish liner KUNGSHOLM and said "adequate compensation will be made to the owners." The Maritime Commission discontinued formal ceremonies for new merchant ships but announced launching of eight new vessels during the week.

CIVILIAN DEFENSE

The RFC set up a War Insurance Corporation with $100,000,000 capital to provide "reasonable protection" against damage to private property resulting from enemy attack. ELECTRIC power is brought to usable voltage by being passed through transformers, such as pictured. The defense area in which they are now in use required extra large ones.

Our engineers and capable mechanics at our North Birmingham Shops studied the problem and concluded, "We have some very old, unserviceable transformers, but adapted to present needs. Why not rebuild them and provide the transformers we need? That will be just as quick as buying new ones and will result in a saving of critical materials."

So that was done. The three huge 110,000-volt transformers, the largest ever built in our shops, were placed in service on schedule, and another National Defense area got needed electric power on time.

Navy Needs Skilled Civilians

Pearl Harbor Navy Yard, crucial center of national defense efforts stands in urgent need of hundreds of skilled civilian tradesmen to immediately take over critical national defense work, the United States Civil Service Commission announced today. Of this number, several hundred will be recruited by the Fifth District Civil Service office in Atlanta.

The Civil Service officials described the situation as "urgent", and "requiring immediate priority." The Commission said that the recruitment of these civilian workers is of primary importance to our war effort, and urged requested executives in private industry to release qualified tradesmen for duty in Pearl Harbor.

Civilian workers now engaged in national defense contracts, the Commission explained, may file application if they enclose a release from their present employers.

Civilian workers assigned to Pearl Harbor will receive maximum Navy Department pay authorized for their respective positions, and pay begins the day these national defense men leave the Coast. Those appointed will receive transportation from their homes to Honolulu.

The Navy Department has provided rooms and cafeterias for them, under Federal supervision, at which Pearl Harbor employees receive good food and good lodging at fair prices. Over time pay is authorized for all time in excess of 40 hours per week, and the Navy Department reports that about 75 per cent of all Pearl Harbor employees work in excess of 40 hours per week.

Following is a list of positions to be filled from the Fifth (Atlanta) District, with rates of pay authorized for each position.

There were lighted candles in the windows of the auditorium with pine boughs forming a base and large can delabra at the sides of the stage.

The program began with a processional of the entire cast, carrying large lighted candles and singing, "O Come All Ye Faithful."

The boys and girls gle club sang, "Noel" and the Christmas story was read by John Davis. The quartet composed of Ruth Duke, Annette Merchant, Marjorie Bentley and Wil-lodean Minor sang two numbers. An-nette Merchant sang, "O Holy Night."

The curtains parted, in the back-ground of the stage a beautiful pic-ture of the Herald Angel, showing the little town of Bethlehem with the three Kings traveling on camels to-ward the City, which was painted by Mr. J. H. Kincaid, in the foreground the Shepherds, Fred Honeycutt, Rob-ert Smith, Joe Earl Parrish, were kneeling as the Glee Club sang, "Hark The Herald Angel Sings."

In the Manger scene, J. L. Lang, bent in adoration as Mary, Wilodene Minor, sang a beautiful lullaby, "The Sleep of the Child of Jesus," after which the Three Kings, Howard Lam-bert, Robert Milner and Dudley Gen-try, entered singing, "We Three Kings from The Orient Are."

Only God can help the dead; our duty is to aid the living. —Mark.

The Yellow Peril

Following the Spanish-American War, Admiral Richard P. Hobson caused considerable discussion in the country by his lecture on "The Yellow Peril." This was a prediction that sooner or later there would be a clash between the United States and Japan. At that time many of our people scoffed at the prediction and heaped no little criticism on Mr. Hobson.

But events at the present time indicate that Mr. Hobson was right. And although he warned at that time to begin to get ready for the conflict nothing was done about it. At present in the midst of a widely recognized world conflict it seems that this country must meet that "Yellow Peril." Regardless of the almost certain outcome of an armed conflict with Japan, one thing is certain, its cost will be enormous—in material cost and in human sacrifice and the price of life.

Such a conflict will undoubtedly be a "Battle of the Pacific," and our traditional freedom of the seas will be challenged. And what we now call the "Far Eastern Trouble" will threaten our western door to liberty.

At the time of writing this—Monday—the question of peace or war is apparently up to Japan. Whether or not the military minded Japs will think soberly and maintain peace with the United States, or listen to that serene Hitler—Hitler is yet to be seen.

Paraphrasing Hamlet we say: "The world is out of joint. O cursed spite, that ever the United States was born set right." But if this be our lot, we will go to it like men.—Hartford News-Herald.

Read It All

The conscientious newspaper reader will not content himself with reading only the war news which is favorable. He will read it all, the good and the bad.

To read unpleasant news calls for an exercise of the will. We naturally shun such news, and turn to that which is pleasant. Newspapers learned during the first World War that the public would rather read about victories than about defeats. And since newspapers desire to publish what the readers want, there is a natural tendency to make the good news conspicuous and the bad news inconspicuous.

The human weakness of wanting to avoid unpleasant news is one that should be combated. Probably the greatest danger for the American people right now is over-optimism regarding the war. The danger is intensified if we do not read all the war news, the bad along with the good.

The best patriotism calls for reading all the news.—Birmingham News.

Hoover's Advice

Herbert Hoover, only living ex-president, appeared before a senatorial committee in Washington in a request that President Roosevelt be given "widest latitude" in legislation establishing wartime controls over prices and commodities. This is a patriotic and unselfish attitude for one of the most persistent of all critics of the Democratic administration to take, and it is one more impressive proof of the unity that is now to be found in this country for the task at hand.

Subjects which a fortnight ago were topics for debate and for abuse and for bitter partisan conflict are now all relegated to the background, or have supplied basis for unified action. The shots fired at Pearl Harbor did the trick. What a terrible awakening is coming for these Japanese war lords when the full might and majesty of the American nation are exerted against them!—Alabama Journal.

Government Economy

"Every government official in the land, including the Congress and the President, should pledge his life and self now to government economy. In sacrificing to defend democracy every American should have the assurance that his representatives in government are not wasting one penny of his tax dollar."

MELANCHOLY THOUGHT

It is a melancholy thought but that scrap iron Japan's been getting from this country for years is coming back a whole lot faster than it went away. It looks like there is something wrong with our economy in which some men are getting rich while for the selfish gain of others—Sylacauga News.

HOBBSON—THE "CRANK"

Now that he has been attacked by Japan we can't help remembering the repeated warning of Alabama's Richard P. Hobson more than a quarter of a century ago, that we would eventually have to fight Japan. Many people at that time regarded Hobson as a crank and a visionary, and ridiculed the idea that Japan would ever attack the United States.

It not infrequently turns out that cranks and crack-pots of the Hobson type prove to be far-seeing statesmen living in advance of their time.—Wetumpka Herald.

An original $3,000,000 has been appropriated for dams at the upper reaches of Coosa River. This stepping-stone anticipates opening of the Alabama-Coosa from Mobile to Rome. It required one hundred years to reach this point. Be patient, therefore; it may not be opened tomorrow. Me, Bibb and FDR may not be in too hurry. War's on!

The News offered no criticism of Governor Miller, who was nominated by the same (Big Mules) element that over Governor Dixon. (We are for the serving Democrat who may be none-half-right)—but Dixon seems to be going to conservatism from frugality to parsimony; in respect for law () from care to no pity. He appears to hate Graves with ridiculous shadown. Since Bibb instituted these Christmas presents he feels impelled to deny them. Meanwhile he should enjoy more vengeance this Yuletide. Fruit Crops Edging In Upon Cotton's Domain In Chilton

By ATTICUS MULLIN

CLANTON, Ala. Dec. 7.—Cotton is still the main money crop in Chilton County, but the returns from cotton have gradually lessened in the years since the advent of the boll weevil until this year when only 4700 bales were ginned with a total value of only $740,000. And that includes seed.

With such a cotton crop, you would naturally expect to find Chilton farmers in a bad way. And they would have been in a very bad way except that long ago foresaw the end for an intelligent agricultural leader of cotton as the sole money crop of Chilton County and began to plan on diversification.

Chilton presents an entirely different agricultural pattern from the many other counties the writer has visited. While cotton produced $470,000 for the farmers of Chilton, the value of her horticultural crops reached $288,000 in spite of the fact that the poorest prices brought $115,000 and that received for peaches this year. Horticultural crops included peaches and strawberries. And the watermelon crop, which was not up to normal this year brought the farmers of Chilton $67,500. Strawberries brought $70,000 and peaches brought $115,000 and that in spite of the fact that peaches sold for less than fifty cents per bushel, the lowest in many years. Had a normal price been received for peaches this year, the horticultural crops of Chilton County would have equalled or exceeded cotton's crop, probably.

Chilton farmers this year harvested the largest corn crop in the history of the county, more than 350,000 bushels. This corn will be sufficient for the needs of the farmers of Chilton, and some little corn may be sold for cash money from cotton.

Chilton is not a hog raising county from a commercial viewpoint. Farmers of Chilton raise hogs for their own use. Few beef cattle are raised and sold in Chilton, but it is estimated that the commercial sale of hogs and beef animals this year may have amounted to $50,000. Chilton is not a peanut raising county either, some will be planted next year.

Chilton farmers are becoming interested in producing milk. A recent house to house survey showed 1,350 Chilton County farmers ready to produce milk to be sold to the new plant of the Carnation Milk Company which will be erected at Dadeville. Chilton is one of ten counties which will keep the Dadeville plant well supplied with milk for condensation.

Chilton County farmers now have approximately 230,000 bearing peach trees. Thirty thousand young trees were set this year. The soil and climate of the county is ideal for peach purposes. Chilton County peaches are the equal if not the superior of any raised in this country. And everybody knows about the quality of Chilton County strawberries.

Without commercial hogs, peanuts or beef to supplement cotton, the above items show that Chilton farmers have diversified through horticulture and that the horticultural efforts of the county are constantly increasing.

Court Defines Insurance Terms

Montgomery, Ala.—The term "total disability," as used in insurance policies, received a clear-cut definition by the Alabama Supreme Court last Wednesday.

A decision which reversed a Lauderdale circuit judgment, and modified at least one previous Supreme Court ruling, held that total disability:

Means inability to substantially perform the duties of any substantial gainful occupation for which (or she) is qualified by training, education and experience.

Adding that: The proper test is not whether an insured can do all or substantially all of the things he previously did in fact, but whether he is capable of following gainful occupation, but whether or not the insured can substantially perform the material duties of his occupation for which he is qualified.

The decision was written by Justice William H. Thomas and concurred in by all the justices except Thomas E. Knight who was ill at that time.

Jo Latham, of Maplesville, who was a star fullback on the Maplesville High School football team is spending the holidays at home. Joe has been attending the Southern Mississippi College at Hattiesburg, Miss. He was high score man this season and reports that his team won 9 games, tied one and lost none.

The Need Is Great

President Roosevelt spoke for every patriotic American when he appealed to the nation for overwhelming support of the Red Cross Christmas Fund. Never has the Red Cross faced a greater challenge. We are coming into difficult times which will test our strength and resources to the utmost, and we must be prepared to meet them.

The foresightedness with which the Red Cross approached the crisis of Japan's attack upon our shores was highly commendable, and with the commendations should go the endorsement of liberal and prompt contributions. The sudden fury of this thrust upon the Pacific bases was met by a clear-thinking, prepared Red Cross. Medical stations were instantly in action both in Manila and Honolulu. Blood stations from Red Cross volunteers were ready to save the lives of the injured. Moreover, trained Red Cross first-aiders were ready to take action, taking over the vital responsibility of acting as a communication link with the armed forces and their families back home.

With our cities and towns vulnerable to enemy bombardment, the Red Cross Red Cross first-aiders were ready to take action, taking over the vital responsibility of acting as a communication link with the armed forces and their families back home.

The Red Cross Nurse must be at her station everywhere to meet the challenge of epidemics and disease, always a real threat hovering over nations at war.

The Red Cross must go with the soldier into the field and to far distant outposts. It must accompany the bluejacket to outlying naval stations. It must be with our men in uniform who lie sick and injured in hospitals here or anywhere in the world. These are all obligations which Congress wisely placed upon the Red Cross thirty-six years ago. As American citizens all of us must carry out these obligations. We are the American Red Cross. Without us it is nothing but a Utopian dream.

The Red Cross has given blessed relief to millions of innocent victims of war during the last two years. Over half the face of the earth it has fed the hungry, clothed the homeless, eased the pain of the sick and injured.

But now the Red Cross is to help our own people—our sons—the family across the street, the little orphaned in an air raid.

These are the things of which President Roosevelt speaks when he asks every patriotic American to support the Red Cross. There is no doubt that the nation will respond wholeheartedly to the Red Cross appeal, despite the heavy imports of the defense program. Each of us knows the need is great.

The new Navy uniform regulations were two years in preparation and are the most comprehensive ever published.

Background Of Roger W. Babson

American business has no more inspiring personality than Roger W. Babson, internationally-known business commentator and investment adviser. An outstanding feature of his philosophy has been his life-long insistence on the importance of religion in business.

Born in 1875, reared in an old-fashioned atmosphere of hard work and hustle on a farm in Gloucester, Mr. Babson went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Upon graduation in 1898, he turned instinctively to financial and business activities.

His exertions, however, undermined his health; he contracted tuberculosis and he was sent West "as good as dead." It was while he was convalescing from this dread malady that he unbowed courage of the possibilities and problems of business statistics.

That was forty years ago. Today his weekly statistical and financial reports are read by thousands of business men and his research work is carried on by a large staff of workers.

Mr. Babson founded Babson Institute for men; and, in cooperation with Mrs. Babson, developed Webber College for women—both nationally known educational institutions. Here young men and women may concentrate more in the fundamentals and less on the frills of business.

To millions of newspaper readers, Mr. Babson, is best known by his familiar weekly stories on business, which appear in more than 400 papers throughout North America. Of his unbowed courage, Roger W. Babson has probably done more than any other man to bring statistics to life, to instill a broader vision in business, and to publicize the ups and downs of the business cycle.

NYA Program To Be Revised On Account Of War

Revision in the National Youth Administration program in Alabama to meet the war needs are announced by Dr. John E. Bryan, NYA State Youth Administrator.

All projects that do not pertain directly to this all-out war effort are to be eliminated, he said. The girls program will be reorganized so that it can be concentrated entirely in those fields which contribute substantially to the defense effort, the administrator announced. Civilian defense councils will be asked for advice on how this can best be done, he added.

All sewing projects will be discontinued except those that pertain directly to defense. Construction work will be minimized. Emphasis will be placed on hospital projects that prepare girls for non-professional duties in times of emergency; on food projects that prepare girls for large quantity cooking for emergency community feeding and for placement in the box lunch business in defense areas; food projects that prepare girls in good nutrition practices through the serving of school lunches; child care projects that release mothers for service in defense industries.

Clerical projects will be operated for the preparation of young men and women for placement in civilian or military defense agencies such as military posts, consumer information centers or local civilian defense councils, Dr. Bryan said.

The boys program will be mainly concerned with shop preparation for jobs in defense industries, he announced. While many NYA youth will enlist, these shops will be of value in preparing youth under enlistment age and those unfit for active service, the administrator pointed out.

He said that youths of 21 and over are being given every opportunity to enlist and that in the first week after the declaration of war almost 50 boys applied for enlistment and 29 were accepted.

PAYMENT OF OVERTIME LEGAL UNDER WAGE-HOUR LAW

While workers cannot waive their rights to time and half for overtime after 40 hours, they may voluntarily accept straight time in cash and the balance in defense securities, Baird Snyder, Acting Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division, U. S. Department of Labor said today.

"The Division has received several inquiries lately as to whether employees may work more than 40 hours in one workweek at straight time," Snyder said.

"Under the Fair Labor Standards Act, they cannot change the law by waiving the overtime provision. However, if workers voluntarily wish to make a contribution into the Victory Program, they may agree with their employers to accept their overtime compensation in defense bonds or similar Government securities. In that way, they would be aiding the prosecution of the war and building up for themselves a safe type of saving."

Reviews And Previews

(By Ivin Lande)

With Christmas day nearly here Americans are beginning to reflect upon the events of the past two weeks. As we say "Merry Christmas" to each other, we are also wondering about the American position as a nation at war, and, consequently, we are wondering, if next year, at Christmas time, we shall still be at war.

The almost unanimous military conception is that the war shall be a very long one—two or three more years, at least, to go. Based upon clear and logical retrospection, and figured upon present American-British and German-Italian-Japanese military strength the experts say that only in a long war can the democracies win. They argue that if we have time to "get going" we shall win, but they also believe that it will take us several years to get going.

We have been admonished not to under-rate Japanese sea power, and we have seen that we have under-estimated it, and have lost several important sea battles as a result. We like have looked back into current history and have seen that every time we thought that Hitler would be defeated in Europe, he has risen up to an even greater and more important victory. The very knowledge of the task that we have to do shows us that we cannot expect to take a short cut and win a quick and easy victory. However, so Christmas arrives, we can be immensely thankful and profoundly grateful, for the American position as a nation at war is exceedingly better than even the most optimistic of us would have dared to hope for.

In the Pacific theatre of the war, Hawaii has now become an island, and there is hardly any likelihood that the great stronghold will again be seriously threatened. Wake is still holding out heroically. Though we have lost some Pacific islands, their loss is not irreparable. The Philippines are now undergoing their main battle, but up to now they have withstood Japanese pressure. The ability of General MacArthur to hold the islands must not be underestimated. Singapore has been reinforced. On the sea, the American and British navy has not recovered from their first terrible losses, and are now going after the Japanese at full speed. The only black spot on this picture is the possible loss of Hong Kong, but, all in all, the American position today is brighter and more hopeful than it has ever been.

In Europe, Hitler has been all but run entirely out of Russia, and the Russians have announced that they intend to carry the war on into Germany. The fact that Germany has nearly entirely lost the Russian campaign is confirmed by the move of Hitler in replacing General Braunschicht and putting himself in command of the German army. Furthermore, Hitler has asked the German people to relinquish their clothing to the German army who need, Hitler said, is a thousand fold greater than the civilian population. All throughout the continent of Europe there have been rumblings of dissatisfaction with the Hitler regime. France has taken a still attitude and is showing its anti-Hitler sentiment. Martineau has announced a new policy. Turkey is still undecided.

Here, at home, all America has become united in the prosecution of the war. The South American countries have already set a date for the Pan American Conference which will settle the policy of the American republic in the winning of the war. The democratic spirit has manifested itself, and in preparing for blackouts, in permitting censorship, in accepting rationing of certain products, the American republics are showing that they are ready for the fight to win peace.

There are, of course, some black spots on the horizon. But everything considered, there is no reason why Americans cannot be thankful and happy this Christmas season.

ADVICE TO MERCHANTS: If you tell 'em through Chilton County News that you have it, they won't go to the Big City to get it.

RED CROSS CALL TO SERVICE

The dramatic poster by James Montgomery Flagg is the first war poster of the new World War. It is an appeal for a $50,000,000 American war relief fund to feed, shelter, clothe and give medical aid to American men, women and children bombed by the enemy. It is an appeal for funds to provide comforts for our American Army and Navy, and for welfare work for our troops at home and abroad, and their families on the home front. President Roosevelt asks you to give. Your dollars will serve humanity. Give through your local Red Cross Chapter.

MORAL ECHOS

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

It is said that Nicholas Riddle told at one time he had a private secretary who had a clear conscience on the question of Sunday work. He ordered this Christian young man to work on Sunday, or he would fire him. The young man was poor and had a widowed mother to support, but rather than violate his conscience he gave up his job. A few days later Mr. Riddle was in company with some financiers who were in search of a young man to be cashier in their new bank, and without hesitating he went to them. "Gentlemen, I know the man you need" and the place was secured for him. He was asked why he had discarded the young man from his office and to this he replied, "He had too much conscience for my work, but none too much for the responsible place you have offered to him. It is far better to have much conscience than to have too little."

Tell me please, what is becoming of the conscience that we should have to govern the Christian life of today? We find but little of that precious gem on the question of smoking and drinking. Conscience has gone dead on the questions of amusements. No longer do we find a conscience on the question of Sabbath observance. A large part of the church membership of all denominations, is now doped with promixides that produce a quick cent conscience. The time has come when the voice of a Christian conscience should cry out like a fire alarm at four o'clock in the morning. This alarming cry should be heard on all questions of right and wrong and we should hear and heed.

There was a railroad wreck on the Wabash line at Missouri City, in which several people were killed and many more trapped in the overturned coaches. In ten minutes a fast freight following on the heels of the mail train, would come thundering around the curve and plunge into the gorge and bury the entrapped passengers. Some one had to get out of the wreck and run down the track and flag the train. This was done and the heavy freight was stopped in a

POPE PRAYS FOR RETURN OF BROTHERHOOD OF MAN

VATICAN CITY—Pope Pius XII, addressing the opening session of the Pontifical Academy of Science, recently called upon mankind to become brothers in peace again and said he was praying for "the triumph more of mercy than of justice."

"In the hands of man," the pontiff said, "science can transform itself into a two-edged sword which heals and kills."

"Give a glance at the blood-stained fields and seas and then say if it was for this that benign, omniscient God made man in his image, redeemed him from his sin and renewed him with celestial favor, and if he had granted such a high intellect and warm heart to perceive an enemy in the brother."

"In the school of God, we are all brothers. May all men become brothers again in love and concord, in the victory of good over evil, in justice and in peace."

BIG FELLOW MUST HELP LITTLE FELLOW, SPAB DIRECTOR DECLARES

NEW YORK—Heads of practically every big corporation in the country and of many smaller ones were told recently, "it is up to the big fellow to help the little fellow in this emergency."

Donald M. Nelson, executive director of the Supply, Priorities and Allocation Board and himself formerly executive vice president of Sears Roebuck & Company, gave this advice to several thousand industrialists at the annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Nelson suggested the corporate mammoths look out for the little manufacturer by sub-contracting work to him wherever possible and by making available to him their superior engineering and research knowledge.

"This is a competitive economy under which we operate," Nelson said, "and I pray it always will be."

"But the whole system of free enterprise is at stake in this emergency and it will survive only if it can prove its collective ability to meet the crisis."

Scientific Facts, Social Gains Measured for Eight Repeal Years

REPORTS of the Federal Government and many other authoritative agencies have provided evidence of improved social and economic conditions and an enlightened public and professional attitude toward the use of alcoholic beverages in the eight years since Prohibition was repealed. Such benefits were forecast at the time the Nation acted in 1933.

Examples compiled from official sources include the following: Federal and State revenues from alcoholic beverages have yielded seven and a quarter billion dollars. Of this total, three billion dollars came from legal beer alone, says the United Brewers Industrial Foundation.

Employment increased 25%, from 1932 to 1940, according to the Census Bureau, and retail sales are up 78% since 1932.

Ice cream consumption is up 95%; milk consumption up to 10.5%; coffee up 33%; money spent for soft drinks has tripled.

Bootlegging seizures were reduced 74% since 1929; arrests by Federal agents down 62%.

Alcoholism death rate decreased 31%, according to the Census Bureau, and the 1940 rate—1.9 per 100,000—is the lowest in 19 years.

Deaths from traffic accidents down 12% on a motor-miles basis, according to the National Safety Council.

Crime rate dropped from 1,645 per 100,000 population in 1932 to 1,556 in 1940, according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Among the scientific findings reported in authoritative medical publications are the following: compiled by the Brewers Foundation:

"Ardent prohibition workers get cancer with the same frequency as do bartenders." — Dr. James A. Pabey, Fellow of the American Health Association.

"There is no clinical or pharma-ologic evidence that would suggest that alcohol alone ever produces heart disease." — Dr. Paul White, Harvard Medical School.

"There is abundant evidence that alcohol alone does not cause cirrhosis of the liver." — Dr. Russell C. Boyd and Dr. Andrew C. Ivy of the Northwestern University Medical School.

"Experimental studies . . . fail to reveal that the consumption of alcohol in moderate doses is harmful to the normal, or even the diseased, kidney." — Dr. Maurice Brugger of the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital.

The life expectancy of moderate drinkers is slightly greater than that of total abstainers." — "Alcoholism and the Nation," by Dr. Raymond Pearl, Johns Hopkins University.

Research is showing that alcoholism is a symptom rather than a cause of mental and other ills. The Quarterly Journal of Studies on Alcohol, says:

"Many investigators have shown that beyond question the great majority of alcoholics have mental disturbances and abnormalities of personality."

The favorite excuse of immoderate drinkers that they had only a "few beers"—no matter what they drink—has been exploded by use of scientific testing standards adopted by the American Medical Association.

The brewing industry's nationwide moderation program has also provided cooperation with law enforcement authorities to maintain order in places where beer and ale are sold.

These facts contrast sharply with the lawlessness, corruption, and waste of prohibition, and is estimated cost of a billion dollars a year, as recorded by the Encyclopedia Americana Annual 1934.

AMERICAN REPUBLICS TO CORRELATE THEIR HIGHWAYS

Montgomery, Alabama.— Earnest collaboration by highway and traffic officials of North, Central and South American Republics, in order that there may be a thorough correlation of plans, followed by passage of co-ordinated laws and regulations, is one of the great goals sought by the Pan American Highway Congress, according to State Highway Director Chris J. Sherlock, a member of the Congress.

Plans include the following:

1. A glossary of Spanish-English technical terms, acceptable for general use throughout the Western Hemisphere.
2. Formulation of standards of construction, adaptable to the different requirements of varying topographies of the countries involved.
3. Adequate traffic regulation.
4. Uniformity of licensing requirements.
5. Reporting and recording accident statistics.
6. Uniform rules of vehicle inspection.
7. Standardization of highway statistics and classification.
8. Standardization of road symbols and markers.
9. Adoption of an International convention on the circulation of motor vehicles and their passage at and through common frontiers.
10. The construction of International bridges.
11. A common financial plan for completion of construction on the Pan American Republics by way of ferries.
13. Protection of motor fuel supply in non-oil producing countries.
14. Formal inauguration (if possible) of the Pan American Highway System on Oct. 12, 1942, of the 450th anniversary of Columbus' discovery of America.

Reports will be heard on the progress of these and other plans at the Fifth Pan American Highway Congress, which meets at Lima, Peru.

Mr. Sherlock states that the greatest progress ever made on highways, in the history of the world, is now being attained in North, Central and South America.

The total membership of a Kentucky boys club enlisted in the Navy and now are being trained at the same station.

The number of midshipmen at the Naval Academy has jumped from 1,704 in 1934 to 3,118 at present.

INSTALLMENT LENDERS ARE WARNED BY W. S. McLARIN

ATLANTA, December 18.— Installment lender and dealers are warned today by W. S. McLarin, Jr., president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, that registration statements must be filed by December 31, 1941. Failure to file by that date will render such firms liable to penalties imposed for operating without a license, as prescribed under Regulation W, the new installment control regulation. Mr. McLarin explained. The licenses are being issued, without charge upon receipt of the registration statement from the applicants.

Of the approximately 11,000 firms engaged in installment lending and about 3,000 have filed the required registration blanks with the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta or its branches, which are located in Birmingham, Nashville, New Orleans and Jacksonville. Mr. McLarin urged that every concern in the district engaged in the selling of certain consumer durable goods on the installment plan, or in making loans to customers repayable in installments, file a registration statement, Form F. R. 363, immediately, in order to avoid being penalized. More than 30,000 sets of registration blanks have been distributed in the Sixth District. Any person who has been missed in this distribution, Mr. McLarin stated, should write direct to the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta or its branches.

The additional forms required under Regulation W are now being distributed. Mr. McLarin explained. One of these forms, the Statement of Borrower, must be used by all installment cash lenders beginning January 1, 1942. The other form, the Statement of Necessity, beginning Jan. 15, 1942 must be used in all cases where installment contracts are revised from their original terms. Specimen copies of these forms, Mr. McLarin stated, have already been distributed, and additional copies may be obtained from the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta or its branches. The actual forms to be used by business firms, he added, must be printed or otherwise reproduced by them, or obtained from stationery or supply houses.

The installment controls designed to dampen the demand for durable goods went into effect on September 1 of this year. Such controls represent one phase of the government's effort to prevent runaway inflation and to lessen the consumption of non-essential goods requiring machinery and materials vitally needed for military production.

The Sixth Federal Reserve District, Mr. McLarin pointed out, includes all of Florida, Georgia and Alabama; all of Tennessee east of the western boundaries of the counties of Stewart, Houston, Humphreys, Perry and Wayne; all of Mississippi south of the northern boundaries of the counties of Issaquena, Sharkey, Yazoo, Madison, Leake, Neshoba, and Kemper; and all of Louisiana south of the northern boundaries of the parishes of Vernon, Rapides, and Avoyelles.

CIVIL ENGINEERS VOLUNTEER THEIR SERVICES

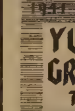

Montgomery, Ala.— The Alabama Section of the American Society of Civil Engineers, with a membership comprising some of the foremost civil engineers in the State, has offered the services of the organization to Gov. Frank M. Dixon and the Nation in this hour of emergency.

A. Reese Harvey, State Highway Department official, as secretary of the Society, forwarded to Gov. Dixon a resolution in which the organization offered service, either collectively or individually.

Gov. Dixon forwarded the information to Houston Cole, Executive Director of the Alabama State Defense Council, and assured Mr. Harvey that the organization "will be called upon, should the occasion arise where its services can be used in connection with National defense."
